

Chris Miller, retired. Worked with Stahler at the Riverside International Automotive Museum.

Tom Stahler is a renaissance man possessing an artful touch. I have worked with Tom and by Tom in several parallel projects and have always found him to be innovative, trustworthy, focused, a consummate team player, and, in all he does, balanced and blessed with an illustrator's eye.

Whether crafting an article, developing a video, creating a blitz campaign, or just getting the "word out", Tom is a master of both what that "word" should look like and just how to maximize "getting it out". In a pinch or with sufficient development time, I know I can turn to Tom and get his best and his best is spectacular.

Tom exhibits a strong project-oriented understanding of process in his research and writing. This may sound to some that his writing style may be a bit dry, but this is far from the actual communicative product that is produced. He is able to integrate facts as if they were the planned wallpaper in a well-designed and thought out impression of a welcoming living room.

In short, Thomas is able to apply the creative process of communication through story and make one feel as if they had experienced the subject on a first-hand basis.

For what this is worth, I recommend Thomas Stahler for most any creative writing project that involves producing historically based articles from a set of researched facts and communicated experiences.

I hired Tom to work on a long term client project that required a lot of custom online content production. To meet the strict demands of the client, we had to adhere to a fast production pace with aggressive deadlines, and I've been able to rely on Tom as one of our top editorial producers and integral team members time and time again. In fact, one of Tom's stories ended up becoming one of the most highly trafficked, most shared articles on the entire website!

Anyone who has worked with me on a project will tell you that I'm extremely detail oriented, and demand 110% from the members of my team. Tom delivered outstanding results every step of the way, and was extremely easy to work with, even though he was tasked with a demanding production schedule and an even more demanding team leader. I look forward to working with Tom again in the future!

Tom Stahler is an amazing go-getter with whom I've had the pleasure of knowing most of his life. We first met when his father was my boss at a Chicago-based public relations agency. We re-met several years ago and have been collaborating ever since.

I appreciate Tom for his tenacity and enthusiasm. It's refreshing that he "get's it" quickly and spot-on. It's rare to find someone with all of his talents. He's the total package -- creative, analytical, and trustworthy. If you have the opportunity to work with him, you can be sure that he'll get the project done on-time, within budget and with creative flare. You'll be back for more.
