

Learn how to support people in your workplace or community to be active bystanders

Would you like to learn from our experts how to deliver our active bystander training to others in your workplace, school, or community?

It can be difficult to know what to do when we encounter prejudice, harassment, or identity-based violence such as a racist attack in a supermarket or an inappropriate comment from a colleague or friend. Protection Approaches and besea.n have developed an innovative and proven training that helps everyone to understand what they can do to reduce harm whenever they encounter such situations.

As part of an exciting new programme, we are looking for 20 volunteer facilitators who will be trained by our team and provided with all the resources they need to deliver these trainings in their workplaces and elsewhere.

This programme is open to anybody but it may be particularly interesting to leaders of workplace diversity, equality and inclusion programme or initiatives, schoolteachers/educators, faith leaders, and others with networks where they could deliver the training.

Who is behind the programme?

This Programme is being run by Protection Approaches and besea.n. You will learn from our professional facilitators with decades of combined experience in delivering interactive training workshops and fighting for social justice.

What will I have to do?

You will attend 3 online training sessions totalling around 10 hours of training including:

- the content of a 1-hour active bystander workshop
- facilitation skills
- dealing with difficult situations and questions

Following the training you will be supported as you organise your own delivery sessions in your workplace, school, and/or community.

How can I apply?

To apply to be one of our volunteers, please fill in the online form on the link below by midday on Monday 12th December
