

♫ FESTIVAL FIT FOR A KING

King Kamehameha Day is a pretty big deal in Hawaii. It celebrates the accomplishments of "Kamehameha the Great," who is credited with uniting the Hawaiian Islands in 1810. A highly revered leader, Kamehameha is honored yearly with numerous celebrations across the islands.

June 11 was first proclaimed King Kamehameha Day by Kamehameha V in 1871 to honor his grandfather and the father of the Hawaiian Kingdom, Kamehameha I, celebrating his unification of the islands. Initially, the people of Hawai'i wanted to mark the legacy of Lot Kapūiwa (Kamehameha V) on his birthday, December 11. Being a humble chief, he honored his grandfather instead and pushed the holiday far away from his birthday, hence the arbitrary date of June 11. Thus, June 11, 1872, was the very first Kamehameha Day holiday ever celebrated to honor his legacy.

Early celebrations included fairs, carnivals, foot races, and horse races. When Hawaii became a state in 1959, Kamehameha Day was one of the first holidays proclaimed by the governor and the Hawaii State Legislature. These days, Kamehameha Day events include flowers, thousands of flowers, draping his statue, adorning floats in a floral parade, and a ho'olaulea.

The annual King Kamehameha Day celebration begins on O'ahu with the Lei Draping Ceremony on Friday, June 13, at 2:30 p.m. in front of Ali'iōlani Hale. Expect to see cultural protocols and pageantry, along with beautiful handmade lei draped on the outstretched arms of King Kamehameha. The tradition of placing leis on the statue began in 1901. Legions of volunteers welcome the task of making leis for the King. Volunteers in the bucket truck lift hundreds of leis, at least 30 feet long, that are then draped over the 15-foot statue of the celebrated ruler. But this is not the only statue of our former King—it's actually the second. During the reign of King Kalākaua, the last King of the Hawaiian Kingdom, a statue honoring Kamehameha I was commissioned in Florence, Italy, to commemorate the founder of the Kingdom. The ship carrying the bronze statue on its way from Europe sank off the Falkland Islands. Fortunately, insurance covered the cost of casting a second statue. In the meantime, the first statue was recovered, and Honolulu soon had two statues. King Kalākaua gifted the original statue to the people of Kohala, Hawaii, to honor the birthplace of Kamehameha. The second statue proudly stands before Ali'iōlani Hale on O'ahu, home to Hawai'i's Supreme Court and the King Kamehameha V Judiciary History Center.

The festivities start on King Kamehameha Day itself, Wednesday, June 11 at 9 a.m., when the Daughters and Sons of the Hawaiian Warriors-Māmakakaua present their own tribute to King Kamehameha at the Kamehameha I statue in front of Ali'iōlani Hale. State

Matsuri in Hawaii

The Pan-Pacific Festival returns to Waikiki June 13 to 15. All pictures courtesy the Pan Pacific Festival

Matsuri is the Japanese word for a festival or holiday. It was also the initial name for this fabulous festival when it first launched back in 1980. After a five-year break due to COVID, the Pan-Pacific Festival made a triumphant return last year, showcasing the rich cultural traditions of Hawai'i and the Pacific Rim. The 42nd Anniversary Pan-Pacific Festival will take place June 13 to 15 and the festivities begin mid-month with the Pan-Pacific Ho'olaule'a on Friday, June 13. This celebration of friendship and goodwill is a grandiose kickoff to a fabulous weekend of events and features a vibrant gathering of people and cultural displays, bringing talent from across the Pacific Rim to the heart of Waikiki from 7 to 10 p.m.

Kalākaua Avenue transforms into a lively block party featuring a blend of performances from both local and international groups, highlighting the diverse talents of the Pacific region.

Waikiki comes alive with culture & dance

Prepare for the most festive and frustrating weekend in Waikiki of the year. It's one of the most festive weekends as Kalākaua is bursting with energy, with a Ho'olaule'a and not one, but two vibrant, colorful, and lively parades. These events bring culture directly to the visitors, with many not even having to leave the hotel room to see the view. People staying in Waikiki that weekend have a front row seat to all the action.

It's one of the most frustrating weekends as a Ho'olaule'a, and not one, but two parades shut down Kalākaua every day for multiple hours, making driving in the area a nightmare, so rule #1 for the weekend is do not drive in Waikiki if you do not have to. Rule #2 is, if you have to drive, please plan accordingly to stay out of the mess so you and yours can hopefully enjoy the fun, flowers, and festivities that will be happening along your doorstep. However, aside from the inevitable traffic situation, visitors who happen to be in town that weekend have hit the cultural trifecta.

This crazy weekend also kicks off the summer event season. Get ready for more festivals, outdoor concert series, and more as this summer is jam-packed with lots of exciting events on the horizon, all focused on sharing our love for our islands' culture, history, and artisans.

I wanted to extend my apologies for the last issue. Although many of you may not have noticed, you did not receive the final version I signed off on. When I reviewed the color proof, I discovered multiple font issues, and a few items had slid up layout-wise. Fonts are tricky and don't always print the way they look on the screen. Per my usual process, I corrected those issues and sent revised pages to the printer to replace the errors. However, there was a communication breakdown on their side, and they never replaced the pages and printed an unapproved version of the book. Fortunately, the errors were on the cosmetic side, and not within the editorial, but nonetheless, it looks sloppy & unprofessional, and I apologize for that.

offices, schools, and many libraries are closed on Kamehameha Day, while TheBus operates on a holiday schedule.

Two days later, the King Kamehameha Celebration Commission kicks off two fabulous days of celebration starting with the lei draping. Everyone is welcome to join the regal women of 'Ahahui Ka'ahumanu in stringing 30-foot plumeria lei to serve as a base of lei on the statue - a tradition that these gracious ladies have carried on for nearly as long as the statue has stood. Donation of loose plumeria flowers accepted at 8 a.m. The Royal Hawaiian Band will perform at 2:30 p.m., with a performance by Hālau Mōhala 'Ilima, and the formal Lei Draping Ceremony begins with a welcome from the emcee and Pule and Oli at 3 p.m. Be sure to tell your guests to get their cameras ready. This is the first of many photo-ops that take place this weekend. The event is open and free to the public.

The next morning, the 108th King Kamehameha Celebration Floral Parade will begin at 9 a.m. on Saturday, June 14. The parade includes marching bands, floats decorated with thousands and thousands of flowers, and Pā'ū riders on horseback, as well as representatives from Hawai'i's Royal Societies, and the always creatively decorated pooper-scooper teams trailing the steeds that never fail to steal the show. Each island is represented by a princess and her outriders. The princess is draped in dozens of yards of satin, all held together by knots twisted around three kukui nuts. The tradition of pau riding and costumes is inspired by the era of royal parties when the ladies of the court traveled across the island. Their delicate gowns were draped with fabric to protect them from the dusty roads and trails.

As in years past, the parade will begin at King Street fronting 'Iolani Palace and then wind its way down Punchbowl Street, before making a left onto Ala Moana Boulevard and eventually onto Kalākaua Avenue. This is where it gets exciting for visitors, as all they need to do is pick a spot along Kalākaua to watch a parade unlike anything they have ever seen on the mainland, mere feet in front of them. The parade is expected to reach Kapi'olani Park around 11:30 a.m., but don't think it's all over then, because the party is just getting started as the King Kamehameha Celebration Ho'olaule'a kicks off inside the Park at 11 a.m. and continues through 5 p.m. The Ho'olaule'a is free to roam through, with plenty of food booths, family-friendly activities, cultural activities, live entertainment, hula, demonstrations, and more. Attendees can also partake in traditional Hawaiian games like konane and learn about their historical significance.

Additionally, interactive workshops and demonstrations will provide insights into Pupu Ni'ihau lei making, 'ohe kāpala, lauhala weaving, and other traditional crafts, allowing participants to gain hands-on experience and appreciation for these cultural practices. The event has become a tradition where parade-goers end their day. It is a time for families and supporters to relax, enjoy the afternoon with all who attend, and meet and greet with Pā'ū Riders and those participating in the parade, so again, make sure your guests bring those cameras. The photo ops will be everywhere. Enjoy the Aloha!

Puake'ala Mann, who represents the Daughters & Sons of Hawaiian Warriors, Māmakakaua on the King Kamehameha Celebration Commission, has an inspiring legacy as the Royal Hawaiian Center's second cultural director and has taught hula there for over 40 years, was all smiles riding in last year's parade.

The 153rd Annual King Kamehameha Day holiday will be observed with festivities statewide. This year's theme is "E Ho'omau – Celebrating Mary Kawena Pukui." Pukui was a native Hawaiian scholar, author, composer, and dancer dedicated to strengthening and preserving Hawaiian culture, who passed away in 1986 at 91.

The respected cultural figure wrote more than 50 academic publications, created over 150 songs and chants, and dedicated her life to the preservation of Hawaiian culture and language. Her extensive contributions have supported Hawaiian language and culture for generations, leading to a campaign that started in 2021 to honor Pukui on the $1 Native American Coin.

Launched in 2009, Native American $1

coins celebrate the vital contributions of Indian tribes and individual Native Americans to the history and development of the United States. The U.S. Mint's Native American $1 Coin Program features a design depicting Sacagawea on one side of each coin, while the reverse side changes each year, showcasing a different American who has made notable contributions to history. In 2025, this program recognizes a Native Hawaiian for the first time, as the U.S. Mint bestows this honor upon Mary Kawena Pukui.

Typically sold only through the U.S. Mint, the King Kamehameha Celebration Commission is excited to offer a limited quantity of uncirculated coins, which they have acquired directly from the U.S. Mint to make them available for purchase at the Ho'olaule'a.

Streets will begin to close in Downtown Honolulu Saturday morning at 7:30 a.m., with closures coinciding as the Parade moves along the route several blocks before its approach, so be sure to plan travel times accordingly.

Remember that Kalākaua will be closed quite a bit this weekend for both the Kamehameha Day Festivities and the Pan-Pacific Festival, so be sure to plan accordingly. kamehamehaday.hawaii.gov.

SIX

THE MUSICAL

Fresh off its successful run of TINA at the Blaisdell Concert Hall, Broadway in Hawaii presents SIX the Musical for 16 performances of the show that has taken Broadway by storm. This musical is the global sensation everyone is talking about. SIX won 23 awards in the 2021/2022 Broadway season, including the Tony Award® for Best Original Score and the Outer Critics Circle Award for Best Musical.

Anyone who has ever seen the show has raved about it, but here on the island, unless they are a Broadway aficionado, most have never heard of it. I proved that point when I chose Anne Boleyn's outfit in this show as my Halloween costume last year, and no one had ever heard of it. I think I was a year too early. Next year, everyone will know – and it's thanks to Broadway in Hawaii for bringing a show this hot directly to our doorstep.

So, what is SIX? SIX is a British musical comedy that resembles a pop concert. It presents a contemporary retelling of Henry VIII's six wives, framed as a singing competition. Throughout the show, the wives share their experiences to establish who faced the greatest hardship from their common husband, ultimately seeking to reclaim their individual identities and rewrite their narratives.

Divorced, beheaded, died, divorced, beheaded, survived—these are the fates of Henry VIII's wives. This show transforms the Tudor Queens into Pop Icons. The six wives of Henry VIII take the stage to remix five hundred years of historical heartbreak into a celebration of 21st-century girl power!

What if, following all the divorces, beheadings, and deaths, all of Henry VIII's wives united in a 16th-century rendition of 'The Real Housewives' meet 'VH1's Divas' on 'American Idol'? That's the premise of SIX, a musical envisioning all the wives as contestants in a singing competition.

The Queens introduce themselves through a series of biographical pop songs and explain that their band's lead singer will be whoever they determine had the worst experience at the hands of their shared ex-husband. The six ladies are portrayed as modern pop divas, and each of their musical styles reflect a real-life pop star inspiration. Catherine of Aragon evokes a Beyoncé and Jennifer Hudson aura, while Anne Boleyn conjures associations with Avril Lavigne and Billie Eilish. Jane Seymour is fashioned in the likeness of Adele and Celine Dion. Anna of Cleves channels the essence of Nicki Minaj. Katherine Howard resonates with the musicality of Britney Spears and Ariana Grande, and Catherine Parr exudes the influence of Alicia Keys.

The musical challenges the traditional historical narrative of the six wives, allowing them to speak for themselves and share their experiences. Then the fun begins, including a clever twist as they parody a dating app, presenting a range of potential brides, which turns into a positive life lesson, as the ladies learn to celebrate their achievements and rewrite their own narratives, coming together to harmonize as a group instead of competing as solo performers. The show is a fun romp through history, but at its core, it's about female empowerment and reclaiming narratives.

The show is 90 minutes of nonstop energy, described as a mix between a rock show and a rave. Don't miss SIX the Musical as it comes to Honolulu June 17 to 29 at the Neal S. Blaisdell Concert Hall. Tickets are on sale now, ranging from $50 to $125. To view the performance schedule or to buy tickets, head to broadwayinhawaii.com.

Chef's Corner

Off the Wall Exec. Chef Savannah Richardson

Savannah Richardson is a breath of fresh air. A young chef who has fought to learn every trick she knows the old fashioned way - hands on behind the line, versus in a textbook. After the Army transferred her partner to Hawaii, she moved here in 2021, she misses her friends and family on the mainland, she finds the isolation motivating and loves both the outdoor living and diversity of local ingredients Hawai'i offers. When she's not working, she's a Twitch streamer, spending hours playing games with the community she has built online. The friends she's made worldwide have significantly contributed to her success and growth in the kitchen.

What is your first childhood food memory?

My first kitchen memory was a project on my Native American heritage. My grandmother and I made Indian Fry Bread for the class to enjoy while I shared what I learned. It was delicious!

When did you know you wanted to be a chef?

I knew I wanted to be a chef when I watched more cooking shows than cartoons. I loved working with my family in the kitchen.

How did you go about making that a reality?

I learned from my father, our "little chef" at home, who loved cooking for our family and taught himself new recipes. I also took notes and recipes from my grandmothers, who defined "Grandma's Cooking."

What was your first job in the industry?

My very first job was a roller-skating carhop at Sonic. I quickly realized I would rather be in the kitchen alongside the guys. Something about watching others enjoy the meal you created for them sparked something inside of me.

How'd you go from managing Chipotle to chef?

I began at Chipotle at the entry level and worked my way up to Kitchen Manager. This experience led me to oversee multiple restaurants, achieving Restaurateur status. After that, I continued working in kitchens and learning from various mentors.

Who would you consider your mentor?

Two people have truly guided my culinary journey: Chef Matt Vidusek, who recognized my potential when we opened a new restaurant in Hawaii, and Chef Marcus Meacham, a longtime chef and television personality for Tastemade. Their passion for cooking and teaching has inspired me immensely, making me feel valued in the kitchen despite my limited knowledge.

Where did you do your training?

I gained all my training in the kitchens where I worked. While I did take a few courses offered by Chipotle, the majority of my learning came from my personal experiences throughout my journey.

You've worked at lots of restaurants, any faves?

Chipotle will always hold a special spot in my heart, as they genuinely made you feel like they wanted you there even more than you did. One of their main goals was to ensure you felt valued for all the effort you put in. Another favorite of mine was D'Lish at the Beach. The two amazing women who owned that place once cooked for the Obama family. They inspired me to explore many different cuisines, even though I didn't have much prior knowledge.

How would you describe your style of cooking?

I would describe my cooking style as bold and full of spice. I know spicy isn't everyone's preference, but there is so much you can do with different levels of heat and layering flavors that don't always have to torture your palate.

Why did this new opportunity excite you?

I find this opportunity incredibly exciting as it will be the first place I can truly call my kitchen. Over the last few years, my life has taken several unexpected turns, and I feel that this is a wonderful fresh start for me to rediscover who I want to be and to cultivate the discipline necessary for future achievements.

What are you looking forward to most there?

I'm genuinely excited to continue building upon the amazing legacy that Off the Wall has established. I can't wait to inspire and support my team as they pursue their growth in the kitchen. It's rewarding to watch the efforts invested in others flourish.

Do you have any plans for the menu?

Right now, I'm really excited to dive into learning the menu and getting a clear sense of what's expected of me. I do have some fantastic ideas that I can't wait to share with our community!

What's your favorite restaurant to go to?

The Diner by Upscale Hawaii. It's a 24-hour walk-up restaurant on King St. with a huge menu, great prices, and a welcoming atmosphere. Whether it's 3 p.m. or a.m., there's always people there.

Smokey Potato Leek Soup with Pork Belly & Habanero

Ingredients:

5lbs russet potatoes, peeled & diced	10 garlic cloves, minced	4 quarts chicken broth
2 lbs leeks, cleaned & sliced	2 cups smoked pork belly, diced	Salt & pepper, to taste
(white and light green parts)	1-2 habanero peppers, finely
1 yellow onion, chopped	chopped (seeded for less heat)	Optional:
	2 Tbsp fresh thyme chopped	cream or butter for richness

Instructions: Render the pork belly: In a large heavy-bottomed pot or Dutch oven over medium heat, add the pork belly. Cook until the fat renders and the meat starts to crisp, about 8-10 minutes. Remove and set aside, leaving the fat in the pot. Sauté aromatics: Add onion, leeks, and a generous pinch of salt to the pork fat. Sauté over medium heat until softened, about 8-10 minutes. Add garlic, habanero, and thyme; cook for 1-2 minutes until fragrant. Add potatoes & broth: Stir in the diced potatoes and pour in the chicken broth. Bring to a boil, then reduce heat and simmer uncovered for 30-35 minutes, or until the potatoes are very tender. Blend the soup: Remove from heat. Use an immersion blender to blend until smooth (or in batches in a blender, being careful with hot liquid). Add back the reserved pork belly (or just half for texture contrast). Adjust & finish: Taste and season with salt and pepper. For extra richness, stir in a splash of cream or a knob of butter just before serving. Simmer another 5 minutes if needed to blend flavors. Serve: Garnish with crispy pork belly bits, thyme leaves, or a swirl of cream. Serve hot with crusty bread.

2025 Visitor Industry Charity Walk

This year's charity walk took place on May 3. The Hawai'i Lodging & Tourism Association makes a herculean effort each year to raise funds for local non-profits. Nearly 3,000 walkers participated, joined by over 500 volunteers on O'ahu. The route had 16 checkpoints offering fun, food, and beverages. This year also introduced the brand-new ADA-friendly Laulima Loop with Access Surf.

Mufi Hannemann, President & CEO of the Hawai'i Lodging & Tourism Association, says, "For 46 years, the Visitor Industry Charity Walk has been our largest fundraising event, supporting nonprofits that serve communities across our islands. Hawai'i's hospitality industry walks, participates, sponsors, and gives through this annual event—showcasing the true spirit of aloha in action. Mahalo to all who help us perpetuate this proud tradition of giving back."

Monies will continue to be collected throughout the end of the month before a final total will be announced. Additional support is encouraged to help out our local non-profits. To donate, please visit charitywalkhawaii.com.
