Valentine's Day Island-style

Every winter on O'ahu, the ocean comes alive with the return of humpback whales. These gentle giants travel thousands of miles from Alaska to Hawai'i's warm waters between mid-December and mid-April to mate, give birth, and raise their calves. Sometimes all it takes is standing along the shore, feeling the trade winds, to see a misty spout appear on the horizon. For locals and visitors alike, whale season is a shared secret between the islands and the sea.

Whale watching is one of my favorite activities each year. Observing these majestic creatures in the wild provides a memorable experience and can often become the highlight of any trip. Humpback whales travel incredible distances, with some migrating up to 5,000 miles between breeding and feeding grounds. Fortunately, they come back to our coast each year, giving us the chance to observe them closely—a sight I never tire of watching.

According to the Hawaii Wildlife Fund, "Beginning in October, mother whales nursing their calves usually arrive first in Hawai'i. Then juveniles and mothers with their yearlings come, teaching them the migration, and often weaning them here in Hawaiian waters. The adult males arrive next, double the number of adult females who follow. Finally, the pregnant females arrive, after feeding up to the last minute in Alaska. The waters surrounding the Hawaiian Islands are among the most important habitats for humpback whales. Humpbacks prefer two major areas in Hawai'i: the four-island region of Maui, Molokai, Lanai, and Kaho'olawe, and the Penguin Bank, a tongue of shallow water extending 25 miles southwest of western Molokai." But that doesn't mean we don't see our fair share of whales on Oahu.

O'ahu is special because whale watching is simply woven into everyday life. Whale watching in Hawai'i doesn't always require a boat. Along the South Shore, from Diamond Head to Makapu'u, early morning walkers often pause as tails lift and backs roll just offshore. On the West Side, near Ka'ena Point and Makaha, the coastline offers wide, open views where breaches can feel surprisingly close. Bring binoculars if you can, but even without them, the whales often make themselves known with dramatic splashes or a slow, graceful dive that ends in a raised fluke.

Valentine's Day on O'ahu doesn't need a big plan or a packed schedule. The island has a way of doing the hard work for you—all you have to do is show up and enjoy it together. No fancy plans, no big budget—just you, your favorite person, and a whole day to enjoy together.

The day starts best with an early walk along the beach. Waikiki in the morning is calm and almost quiet, the sand still cool and the sky slowly turning pink. Shoes come off, coffee goes in your hand, and suddenly you're talking and laughing without distractions. It's a simple way to feel close before the day really begins.

Breakfast doesn't need to be fancy. A small local spot with fresh fruit, pancakes, or warm malasadas is perfect. Sharing bites, wiping powdered sugar from each other's fingers, and planning the day ahead feels way more romantic than a white tablecloth ever could.

After breakfast, you wandered. That's the best way to do O'ahu anyway. Take a stroll through Ho'omaluhia Botanical Garden in Kaneohe, where the mountains look like they're posing just for photos, or perhaps a relaxed walk up the

WHALE Season!

Well, 2026 is here, and so far, so good. I hope everyone had a great holiday and was able to get some time off to spend with loved ones. I took two weeks off and got more sleep during that time than I have in the past two months! Man, I love vacation! The funny thing is, I actually hung out at the beach while I was gone. I live in Hawaii, but it takes leaving the island to go to a beach. Guess it's true what they say: How do you tell a local from a tourist? Locals don't have a tan because they're always working. True! At least for me. That said, it's whale season, and I'll be on the water as much as I can to try to see those magnificent creatures so maybe I'll finally get a tan. We went out the weekend we got back to town, and a pair of whales hung out near us for nearly an hour. As they left, one of them put on a spectacular breach about 150 yards away. Absolutely amazing. Whale season is definitely one of those times when I feel really lucky to live in Hawaii. Some of your guests may never have had the chance to see these animals up close, and we get the privilege to watch them year after year. I remember one year I was in a meeting with an executive at the Hyatt Regency. He had a great view of the beach outside his window, and there was a whale out there that kept breaching again and again. I guess that's why he had his desk set up so his back was to the window. I could never get much work done with the show those whales were putting on. Being on the water with them is special, so encourage your guests to take a boat tour if they can. But if they can't, they just need to keep their eyes on the water because they will see them. I sat on my lanai at the Hilton one year and watched them for an hour.

This month also hosts the Super Bowl, Valentine's Day, and Lunar New Year, offering many opportunities to go out and enjoy yourself. Clearly, every restaurant is planning something special, but if you can't get in, the island offers plenty of other options for romantic activities. We truly are fortunate to live in Hawaii. Here's wishing everyone a Happy Valentine's Day!

Valentine's Day

Makapu'u Lighthouse Trail, stopping often—not because you were tired, but because the views were too good to rush, and hopefully a whale breach or two in the distance.

Late morning is made for exploring. Maybe you drive with the windows down toward the North Shore, stopping whenever something catches your eye—big waves, food trucks, or a quiet beach pull-off. Or you head east to Lanikai, where the water is clear and calm, perfect for swimming or just floating side by side. If you're feeling adventurous, kayaking or snorkeling together adds a little excitement and a lot of smiles.

Lunch is casual and local. A shared plate from a food truck, a $5 manapua from a bakery, musubi from 7-11, or a poke bowl split between you can sometime taste better than anything fancy. Sitting on a curb, the beach, or a picnic table, you talk about memories, dreams, and the simple joy of being exactly where you are.

In the afternoon, slow things down. A couple's massage, a nap in the shade, or simply sitting on the sand watching the ocean can feel like a reset. O'ahu has a way of reminding you that doing nothing together is still doing something special. Waikiki Beach too crowded to get some you time? Head over to Ala Moana Beach Park or Kaimana Beach in hopes of finding a beach less traveled. If you really want to take the romantic angle, stop by Halona Blow Hole and hike down to Cockroach Cove, which has a far more romantic nickname, Eternity Beach. Yes, that is the actual beach where Burt Lancaster and Deborah Holmes filmed that infamous kiss in the Academy Award winning movie "From Here to Eternity," back in 1953. If that doesn't set the mood, I don't know what will.

As the sun starts to set, it's time for one of the island's greatest gifts—sunset. Whether you watch from Sunset Beach, Makapu'u Lookout, Magic Island, China Walls, or right where you already are, it never disappoints. The sky puts on a show, and for a few minutes, everything else fades away.

Dinner can be whatever feels right. A beachside restaurant, takeout poke eaten under the stars, or a casual spot with live music all work just as well. What matters is the relaxed pace, the warm air, and the feeling that there's nowhere else you need to be. Of course, those of you looking for a full restaurant experience know that virtually every restaurant in town offers something special for Valentine's Day; just remember to make your reservations early.

End the night with a walk, some shave ice, or just sitting together listening to the waves. No schedule. No pressure. Just the island and each other.

That's the secret to Valentine's Day on O'ahu—it's not about planning the perfect moment. It's about letting the island create it for you, one easy, beautiful moment at a time.

Valentine's Day doesn't need big gestures or big spending. It just needs someone who knows the island, pays attention to the details, and cares enough to make the day feel effortless.

That's what a great concierge does—they turn a simple day into a story worth remembering. Sometimes, all you need is an island, a shared day, and each other.

For thousands of years, long before the advent of dates and printed calendars, people kept track of time by observing the sky. The moon—whose cycle of rising, waning, disappearing, and reappearing—served as humanity's earliest clock. From this consistent lunar cycle, one of the oldest continuous traditions in the world arose: the Lunar New Year.

On Tuesday, February 17, the world turns quietly toward renewal as Lunar New Year arrives, ushering in the Year of the Fire Horse. Long before dawn, lanterns glow in windows and streets hum with preparation, echoing a tradition that stretches back more than four thousand years. Lunar New Year began as an agrarian rite in ancient China, marking the end of winter and the hopeful return of planting season. Over centuries, it evolved into the most important festival across East and Southeast Asia, carried forward by families, empires, migrations, and memory.

Each lunar year is characterized by the Chinese zodiac, a 12-animal cycle paired with five elements—wood, fire, earth, metal, and water—forming a sixty-year repeating calendar. 2026 is governed by the Horse and the Fire element.

Traditionally, the Horse is a symbol of energy, independence, and movement—a year believed to favor courage, bold decisions, and forward motion. As with every Lunar New Year, the celebration is rooted in cleansing the old to make way for the new. Homes are swept clean, debts are settled, and red decorations—symbols of luck, protection, and joy—replace the fading colors of the previous year. Families gather for reunion dinners, sharing dishes rich with meaning: dumplings shaped like ancient coins for prosperity, long noodles for longevity, and sweet rice cakes to lift fortunes higher.

Lunar New Year lasts for fifteen days, ending with the Lantern Festival during the first full moon. Hawaii celebrates the Lunar New Year with enthusiasm, and you can hear fireworks and lion dances all month long. Keep those little red envelopes, lai-see, filled with new money handy, as they symbolize good luck, prosperity, and help ward off evil spirits. Despite regional differences, the core meaning is universal: honoring ancestors, strengthening family bonds, and welcoming the future with intention.

There are several ways for you to celebrate the Lunar New Year this month.

On February 7th, leaping lions kick off the New Year at Kapolei Shopping Center with a lion dance from 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Afterward, the lions, with drummers and cymbals, parade through the center, blessing merchants and inviting good luck. Spectators can feed the lions and take photos. kapoleishopping.com.

On Saturday, February 14, Island residents and visitors can get ready to gallop into the Year of the Horse at Chinatown 808's popular Chinatown Festival & Parade as it celebrates its 50th year. The festival will take place in Aala Park and on N. Beretania Street between Maunakea and Aala Streets, with the parade starting at 4:30 p.m. along Hotel Street from the Hawaii State Capitol through Chinatown.

Year of the Fire Horse

The schedule for the day is as follows:

- 9 a.m. - 6 p.m. (Aala Park): Activities and entertainment, including free bounce houses at the ASB Keiki Fun Zone, craft booths, lion and dragon dance performances, and martial arts demonstrations.
- 9 a.m. - 8 p.m. (Aala Park): Pony & donkey petting area.
- 4:30 p.m. (Hotel Street): Lunar New Year Parade starts at Hawaii State Capitol Lawn traveling along Hotel Street through Chinatown.
- 6 p.m. - 10 p.m. (Aala Park): All activities continue except for bounce houses.

The celebration will also include lion and dragon dance performances, martial arts demonstrations, and a special appearance by a 150-foot dragon.

The parade starts at the Hawaii State Capitol lawn at 4:30 p.m., with participants in their best Lunar New Year costumes. Enthusiastic participants will march down Hotel Street toward Chinatown. Spectators can enjoy lion dance and dragon performances, see festival queens and their courts, and watch local cultural groups, kung fu martial artists, and dignitaries. After the parade, an opening ceremony will take place at 6 p.m. on the Aala Park Stage. For more details, visit chinatown808.com.

Royal Hawaiian Center will host celebrations for the Year of the Horse from February 15 to 28 with a special gift with purchase. On Thursday, February 17, visitors can watch a Lion Dance from 5:00 to 5:30 p.m. in the Royal Grove. Following that, from 5:30 p.m. until approximately 8:00 p.m., the Lions will perform throughout the Center and at participating stores and restaurants. Guests can also collect a custom Royal Hawaiian Center Red Lai See from Helumoa Hale to feed the Lion.

There will be another lion dance on Saturday, February 21 from 6:30 p.m. - 7 p.m., a traditional Chinese Folk Dance on Sunday, February 22 from 3:30 - 4 p.m. and Calligraphy by Ina Chang on Saturday, February 28 from 3 - 6 p.m. All events take place in the Royal Grove. royalhawaiiancenter.com.

On Saturday, February 21, Outrigger Hospitality will celebrate the Lunar New Year by sending Lion Dancers to each of its properties. Your guests can see the performance at the following locations and times:

Although rooted in China, Lunar New Year is celebrated across Asia and around the world. In Vietnam, it's Tết; in Korea, Seollal. From Southeast Asia to communities abroad, it remains an essential link connecting the past and present. Lunar New Year has endured through dynasties, migration, and modernization because it resonates with a fundamental human desire — to pause, reflect, and start fresh. Something we should aspire to these days. Whether your guests celebrate it or not, let them know to keep their ears open. If they hear the drums, take a moment to walk over and experience these historical traditions in action.

During winter in Hawaii, humpback whales engage in courtship behaviors, with males often competing for females' attention. You definitely earn bonus points if you catch a competition pod in action. It's rare but incredibly exciting. Female humpbacks typically give birth to one calf every two to three years. Calves are born in our warm waters and stay with their mothers for up to a year. Newborns measure 12 to 15 feet in length and can weigh up to 2 tons. They grow quickly, gaining as much as 100 pounds daily from their mother's rich milk. The islands' protected waters offer a safe environment for calving, serving as a sanctuary for these vulnerable calves during their early months. As a result, Hawaii is a vital breeding and calving ground for humpback whales. In 1992, the government designated these waters as a marine sanctuary to better protect the species. This designation, part of the North Pacific Humpback Whale Sanctuary, safeguards their migratory routes and calving areas, leading to a significant increase in their population—from an estimated 2,000 in the early 1990s to over 21,000 whales estimated to visit Hawaiian waters annually in recent years.

For those who head out on the water, whale-watching tours turn the experience into a shared adventure. Guides point out spouts, explain whale songs that travel for miles, and help you spot playful calves staying close to their mothers. There's a quiet thrill in the quest of scanning the horizon looking for a tell-tale sign, and then the rush of excitement when you or a fellow passenger finds one and shouts out its location. If you're lucky, you'll catch a breach as the gigantic mammal bursts out of the water as if showing off for everyone onboard. If you're lucky, you'll see a calf learning to breach repeatedly, like a pogo stick.

For those who want to head out onto the water, there are a ton of whale-watching tours to choose from. Many of them turn the experience into a shared adventure. Guides point out spouts, explain whale songs that travel for miles, and help you spot playful calves staying close to their mothers. Boats keep a respectful distance, allowing the whales to move freely, and there's a peaceful excitement in simply floating as a whale chooses to pass by. Sometimes it's a breach that steals the show; other times it's a quiet moment when a whale surfaces, looks almost curious, and slips back beneath the waves.

Whale watching on O'ahu isn't just about what you see—it's about how it makes you feel. The island slows you down, the ocean invites you to listen, and for a few unforgettable moments, you're reminded that O'ahu isn't only about beaches and city lights. It's also a front-row seat to one of nature's most beautiful winter traditions, happening just beyond the shoreline.

Every moment on the water can turn into a magical whale watching adventure, especially in February. It's the perfect time to catch a glimpse of these majestic creatures off our coast. Any boat out there can become your personal whale watch, so don't hesitate to jump on a beach cat at the last minute for some unexpected fun. Feeling adventurous? Why not try parasailing for a more surreal experience? While spotting whales from above isn't always guaranteed, it's pretty incredible when it does happen. Taking a doors off helicopter tour? Keep your eyes peeled for that bright turquoise color whales seem to have when they are just beneath the surface.

No matter how you choose to see them, whale watching on O'ahu is a once-in-a-lifetime experience that never loses its magic.

15th Honolulu African American Film Festival

Each winter, the Honolulu African American Film Festival returns as a thoughtful and enduring cultural tradition. Now in its 15th year, the festival stands as a testament to the power of cinema to educate, connect, and celebrate the richness of African American and global Black experiences.

Since its launch in February 2012 for Black History Month, the Honolulu African American Film Festival has become a staple at the Honolulu Museum of Art, showcasing the finest Black cinema to the city. This year, the festival features eight feature films and a short film program that celebrate Black excellence in art and justice.

The festival starts with an opening reception that welcomes guests into a shared space of art, dialogue, and cultural appreciation. The opening event, on Thursday, Feb. 5 at 6 p.m., will have a West African vibe in honor of the film The Fisherman, shot in Ghana. The evening features a buffet dinner, live music, a cash bar, and the Hawai'i premiere of The Fisherman.

The festival includes insightful post-screening discussions that are currently being developed and will be added to the online film descriptions once confirmed. Throughout its multi-week run, the festival features a curated selection of feature films, documentaries, and short works. These films span various genres and regions, presenting stories that explore history, identity, resilience, creativity, and daily life. Some stories are personal and intimate; others tackle larger social and cultural issues. Together, they create a cinematic mosaic that showcases the diversity and depth of Black storytelling.

The festival's enduring success largely relies on its dedicated volunteer committee, which includes Daphne Barbee-Wooten, Ethan Caldwell, Tadia Rice, and Sandra Simms.

"For the 15th festival, we have developed a program that features a strong mix of documentaries and narratives that address justice—and joy," says Daphne Barbee-Wooten, a civil rights attorney. "Equality and justice are so important in these times of pushback and attempted elimination of civil rights that people have fought so hard to achieve. At the same time, it is essential to share uplifting stories to keep hope alive. It is important for us to bring these films to Honolulu."

As the festival marks its 15th anniversary, it balances legacy with forward momentum. It continues to honor established filmmakers while amplifying emerging voices, reinforcing its role as both a cultural archive and a platform for new work.

This year, for the first time, HoMA issued a call for submissions to HAAFF, specifically for short films. The selections will be screened on Feb. 13 and 28. Experience the next generation of Black voices and perspectives through this collection of short films by emerging filmmakers.

The film festival runs from February 5 to March 1. For more details head to honolulumuseum.org.

Hy's monthly Sunday Brunch Buffets are continuing in 2026. Their signature prime rib, leg of lamb, corned beef, and Caesar salad is on the menu as well as steamed snow crab, oriental style fish, crab cake eggs benedict, a seafood bar, and more. The brunch will be available on February and March 15 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. with more dates expected soon. 922-5555. • Popular NYC Japanese cocktail bar ROKC, which stands for ramen, oyster, kitchen, and cocktails, opened in the former Westman Café location at 280 Beach Walk. Known for their cocktails and ramen, the menu closely resembles the original in New York and has been getting rave reviews since they soft opened late last month. Open for dinner from 5 to 11 p.m., it's closed on Sundays. Find them on Instagram @rokchawaii. • A new steak house has opened in the space formerly occupied by the Blind Ox on Kapahulu. ADEZ Steakhouse & Lounge is open daily from 5 p.m. to midnight, extending to 2 a.m. on Fridays and Saturdays, and offers handcrafted cocktails, steaks that guests can grill at their tables on hot stones, and a $65 three-course Tasting Menu. adezhawaii.com. • The Lounge at Island Sound in Hawaii Kai is now known as Kapono's at the Lounge and offers Sunday Brunch, featuring handcrafted cocktails and live music by the water from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. View the menu online at kaponosatthelounge.com.

Chef's Corner

Mugen Pastry Chef Sonja Oliveri

Born and raised in Germany, Sonja grew up working in her family's restaurants. In high school, she assisted her grandmother with baking cakes for the restaurant, which led her Grandma to encourage her to pursue a bakery apprenticeship. Her father asked a customer—owner of the well-known Cafe Wild Wermelskirchen—if she could do an apprenticeship there. Despite initial concerns about her age, she secured the position and embarked on a three-year hybrid program combining practical work and classroom learning, opening her eyes and inspiring her to aim high. Her journey ultimately led to Hawaii.

What is your first childhood food memory?

Growing up, I was always at restaurants because my family owned a couple of family-style places, and we spent most of our time there. I can hardly remember a time when we were at home. But it was great—during dinner, we could order whatever we wanted, and the staff felt like family.

What was your first job in the industry?

Aside from my family's restaurants, my first real job was the pastry apprenticeship program at Cafe Wild Wermelskirchen. However, when I finished the program, I didn't think I'd work in pastry. I didn't like how rigid and repetitive it was. So I ended up signing up for another three-year apprenticeship program at the Excelsior Hotel in Cologne, where I learned how to cook.

Who would you consider your mentor?

I had many mentors: my grandma for standing up to guys in a time when women in the kitchen was rare; my dad, who taught me to skin and butcher venison and believed in me; Herr Wild, who guided me through pastry; Herr Nestler, the Excelsior's chef, for supporting his team after tough days; Herr Kaufman and his wife, who trusted me to run their pastry department and pushed me to attend master pastry school. Many others have taught me, and I look forward to more, as I love learning and growing.

What did you do after you graduated?

I worked at my parents' restaurant for a couple of months first, but when I was certain I didn't want to take over the family business, I applied to all the best restaurants in Germany to be a commis de cuisine. I wanted to aim for the stars.

So what happened?

Mr. Kaufman of Zur Trube, a two-star Michelin restaurant, invited me to an interview and convinced me to run his pastry department. I was so nervous and under pressure. I didn't want to disappoint him. He mentored me and sent me to sugar classes with Ewald Notter and to check out

Team Germany for the Pastry World Cup, but that wasn't for me. Eventually, he advised me to go to Master Pastry School to hone my craft.

How was your experience?

I really enjoyed working there. We had a very young team. We also had our own house that Mr. Kaufman rented to his employees, so we were all very close and constantly encouraged each other.

What's the most important thing you learned?

Teamwork, using the best ingredients with simple recipes, no fuss or additives. Just fresh good food

Name a dish you're most proud of.

My Christmas Stollen Bread. It's probably the oldest family recipe I have, and it allows me to connect with my ancestors in a small way.

How did you end up in Hawaii?

I came to Hawaii because of Mr. Goessing, the former GM of the Kahala Mandarin Oriental. My sister babysat his kids in Germany. He met my mom at a party, and she told him I wanted to work on a cruise ship but needed English skills. He offered me 18 months in Hawaii for a management trainee program. I applied, got my visa, and arrived a few months later.

Are you in charge of the afternoon tea menu?

Yes, I've changed the tea menu a few times already. I like to keep things fresh and interesting.

What do you like most about living here?

Probably the community and all the different influences. The weather is pretty awesome too.

What do you miss most about Germany?

My family and the quietness I grew up with in the countryside, it gives one space for solitude and watching nature.

Is there anything else you'd like to share?

I like to spend time with my family, garden, cook, and craft on my days off. If anyone is interested in pictures of my work they can look at my Instagram: @sonja4423

Strawberry Basil Jam

Ingredients:

450g	Strawberries washed & chopped small	125g sugar
		35g powdered apple pectin
2	Lemons - zest and juice	500g sugar
1/4	bunch Fresh Basil finely chopped	1 pinch of salt (optional)

Yield: 6 small jars

Directions:

Prepare jam canning jars and lids by washing and sanitizing them. Bring strawberries, basil, lemon juice and zest to a boil. Combine first sugar, salt and pectin, then slowly stir it into the boiling fruit. Bring mixture back to a full boil and add the second sugar and cook until slightly thickened, around 1-2 minutes. Pour the jam into the jars with around 1/2" headspace, clean the rim of each jar to assure a good seal. Cover with the lid and screw it on fingertight. Leave the jars sitting for 12 hours. You can check if the jar seal is tight by pressing the lids down after that time. If they still make a popping sound, you didn't achieve a good seal, and you should refrigerate the jam. However, if it seems that you can't push down the middle of the lid, it is sealed well and will be shelf-stable for about 1 year.

An Exclusive Q & A with Josh Groban

Josh Groban is one of those artists whose voice you recognize almost immediately—warm, rich, and full of emotion. He’s a singer, songwriter, and actor known for blending pop music with classical and Broadway influences in a way that feels both powerful and approachable.

Finally, 25 years after becoming a household name, Josh Groban will perform at the Blaisdell for the first time ever on February 7th. Members of the Hawaii Symphony Orchestra and the BYU Choir will join him onstage.

As of press time, tickets are still available. There is even one solo seat available in the front row. Tickets start at $60.75. For those seeking the ultimate VIP experience, just over a dozen VIP Soundcheck tickets remain, which include a premium reserved seat in rows 1-10, an exclusive pre-show stripped-down performance by Josh Groban, a Q&A session, a group photo with Josh Groban, and more for $525. Find out more at rbpconcerts.com.

Rick Bartalini of Rick Bartalini Presents said, “My goal is simple: bring Hawai’i the artists people have waited years, sometimes decades, to see. Josh Groban is exactly that kind of moment, and with an orchestra featuring members of the Hawai’i Symphony Orchestra and the BYU–Hawai’i Ho’olōkahi Chamber Choir. It’s a one-night-only kind of night, and I believe people will remember it for a lifetime.”

Thanks to Rick, we were also lucky enough to get an exclusive Q&A with Josh Groban. Here is what he had to say:

Q: Why haven’t you ever performed here?

Josh: It has been a dream for me to play Hawaii!! I think the only reason it hasn’t happened is logistics. What makes Hawaii so special is also what makes it a little bit challenging to bring a whole tour back and forth from the mainland. To have this opportunity now is something I’ve been looking forward to for my entire career and I promise to bring everything I have to some very wonderful and patient fans!!

Q: What are you most excited about to be coming to perform in Hawaii?

Josh: We’re starting the whole world tour in Hawaii. I can’t think of a more beautiful, culturally inspiring place to rehearse and kick things off. The fact that it’s my first show there ever and having 25 years of music to choose from, it’s super important for me to blend old and new and represent every era my fans and I have been through together. I have felt so much love from Hawaii my whole career and this is my chance to give thanks and show it right back.

Q: You’ve been known to pull up audience members. Do you preselect them?

Josh: Honestly, it’s always spontaneous if it feels like there right night or moment the show and let them in on that process. Then I sing some stuff for them that may or may not be in the actual concert that gets my voice warmed up and I take questions and have fun sharing stories. It’s a wonderful way for me to break the ice with a select few before the thousands roll in.

Q: You’ve been here before. What’s on your must-do list while you’re here?

Josh: Hawaii is very grounding for me. The harmony with nature is a reminder to take breaths, live in the present, and remember what’s important. I always try and get out for a hike, or to swim. I want to hear live music, eat some spam musubi and see friends old and new.
