Waimānalo Kanikapila The Ultimate Local-Style Jam Session

The Waimānalo Kanikapila is the epitome of the quintessential perfect Hawaiian day. The location, talent, and music are unmatched. Just imagine yourself sitting on the grass at Waimanalo Beach Park, with its stunning white sand beach framed by tall ironwood trees and clear turquoise waters on one side, picturesque views of the Ko'olau mountains on the other, and in front of you, some of the best musicians Hawaii has to offer on stage, providing beautiful Hawaiian music the entire day. It is a magical experience for locals. I can only imagine how special it must be for a visitor.

Although Cyril Pahinui started the event in 2007 to pay homage to his father, the late great Gabby Pahinui, designed after gatherings remembered from Cyril's childhood days when weekends at the family's Waimānalo home would turn into one continuous kanikapila as Gabby would jam with his musician buddies in the backyard. These sessions have since become legendary, and often went on for days at a time.

Gabby Pahinui, born Philip Kunia Pahinui (1921–1980), is remembered as one of the greatest slack-key guitarists of the 20th century. Often referred to as the "King of Hawaiian Slack Key Guitar," he was a master of the slack-key guitar style, which involves detuning or "slackening" guitar strings to create unique tunings and resonant harmonies. Born in Honolulu, Hawaii, he began playing music at a young age. He was largely self-taught and developed his distinctive guitar-playing style. Pahinui gained widespread recognition for his soulful and passionate performances, which showcased his virtuosity on the instrument, and he played a significant role in popularizing slack-key guitar music both in Hawaii and internationally.

Back in the '60s and '70s, word would go out that Gabby was playing, and the Pahinui yard would fill up with a bunch of guys with guitars. With plenty of beef stew to go around, they would jam with each other often for the entire weekend. Cyril once said the weekend jam sessions started after his father joined the Sons of Hawaii in 1962. "They had rehearsals every week. Dad's friends used to come over to the house — 'Hey, Gabby, what you guys doing?' They'd have a few drinks, and before you know it, they're playing music." In his later years, these jam sessions became a regular occurrence at Pahinui's Waimanalo home.

Regular guests included slack-key greats Leland "Atta" Isaacs, Sonny Chillingworth, and Ray Kane.

It's become a cultural tradition in Hawaii. Tens of thousands of people descend into Waikiki for this famous annual street festival celebrating love for all things SPAM®, a canned meat product that is a staple in Hawaiian cuisine. The event features live entertainment, local vendors serving creative Spam dishes, and a festive atmosphere. It's a fun way for locals and tourists to enjoy delicious food and experience Hawaiian culture.

This year marks the 20th anniversary of this delectable event. In honor of this landmark achievement, more restaurants than ever will participate in the festival, offering guests nearly double the options of spamilicious delights than they have had in years past. There is also plenty of SPAM®- themed merchandise from Eden In Love designed exclusively for the 20th anniversary.

Keep your eyes open for Lance Rae, shown here with volunteer Caitlin Humphreys who will be escorting Spammy and Musubi around the festival.

Spring Kicks off Hawaiian-Style

This month gives you some of the best that Hawaii has to offer. There is nothing better than spending the day by the beach listening to amazing musicians at the Waimanalo Kanikapila. The event is based on the good old days in Gabby Pahinui's backyard. How lucky are we that Cyril Pahinui and his wife Chelle recreated that piece of history for all of us to experience once a year? When Cyril died, Chelle was determined to keep his events going and turned them into a way of honoring Cyril and the community they were so proud of. This year, I was very fortunate that Chelle was gracious enough to share detailed memories about those legendary old days, her thoughts on Cyril, and where she hopes the event will progress. She was even kind enough to share personal photos. If you have never gone or recommended your guests to go to this kanikapila, I cannot recommend it highly enough. It personifies Hawaii in every sense of the word. I know many of you always turn to read this column first. Why, I'll never know, LOL. But, if you haven't done so already, please take the time to read the cover story in full and learn why it really is such a special event. While you're at it, remember that T-shirt sales fund the event, and this year's shirt is pretty darn special, so grab one while you can, as it's sure to sell out. We all owe a debt to the Pahinui family for sharing their incredible talent and love of Hawaii's musical community with us for so many years. It's the least we can do - so let's support them and get yourself a cool shirt!

After spending a magical weekend by the beach listening to the best music the island has to offer, what better way to follow it up than by diving into Hawaii's next best pastime, paying homage to Hawaii's favorite food? SPAM JAM® is one of the biggest festivals in Waikiki each year, and this year marks its 20th anniversary, so you can expect even more of everything Spammy!

To cap off a month full of Hawaiian-style events, the Honolulu Museum of Art is hosting an entire exhibit dedicated to the history of the Aloha shirt and all other types of Aloha Wear.

Aloha abounds across the island in April. All you need to do is look for it. Enjoy!

Waimānalo Kanikapila

fame grew, so did the attendance at these backyard jam sessions. Over the years, this weekly gathering attracted most of the best-known artists and their families. In addition to the names above, Auntie Genoa Keawe and her ohana, the Beamers, George Na'ope, and the hula community often attended for a chance to dance with the masters and, of course, the young generation of musicians at the time, such as Palani Vaughan, Peter Moon, Jerry Santos, Larry Kimura, Henry Kapono, and even Kawika Kahiapo would often stop by. It wasn't uncommon for more than a hundred musicians and fans to show up on some weekends to jam with or listen to the slack key master. Gabby was also known for his role in preserving traditional Hawaiian culture and music. His recordings and performances continue to inspire musicians and fans of Hawaiian music worldwide and is remembered as one of the most important figures in the history of Hawaiian music.

Pahinui's sons, Bla, Philip, Martin, and Cyril, literally grew up at the knees of some of the best musicians in the industry. Cyril and his brothers share their father's musical legacy and have become award-winning performers and recording artists in their own right.

Cyril began playing the ukulele at seven and joined his father's band by the early 70s. In 1979, he joined the Peter Moon Band and continued to expand his musical horizons. In 2014, he received a Nā Hōkū Hanohano Lifetime Achievement Award for perpetuating the craft of slack-key music through performance and teaching. In 2017, he was awarded a National Heritage Fellowship by the National Endowment for the Arts, the United States government's highest honor in the folk and traditional arts. Like his father before him, Cyril's musical legacy will live forever.

When Cyril and his wife Chelle decided to launch the event in 2007, it was not only to honor his father and perpetuate Hawaii's musical identity but also a way to acknowledge Waimānalo's heritage, its community, and its contribution to the Hawaiian Renaissance. The Pahinui music was a big part of that. Many of Hawai'i's greats come from Waimanalo or have learned from Gabby and others from the community. According to Chelle Pahinui, "Gabby felt that preserving Hawaiian music and the language was important. He often told Cyril and the other young artists, "You can't talk in Hawaiian, but you can sing in Hawaiian; stick to your Hawaiian music. That is what represents your culture." So, in the countryside far from the city lights, Hawaiians would gather and just play the music that they chose, and that is how the Kanikapila began at the Pahinui household. Cyril had such deep memories and a love for these gatherings. He also listened to his dad's words and often advised his own students to stick to their Hawaiian music. Hawaiian music literally took Cyril around the world to standing ovations at major theaters across Europe, Japan, and every state in the U.S., including playing Carnegie Hall twice." Hawaiian musicians today follow this path and have expanded their travels into China, Korea, India, South America, and Mexico. Each time a Hawaiian musician travels to another country, they are sharing a bit of Hawaiian culture and heritage with them through their music.

When Cyril died in 2018, there was never a question as to whether the event would continue or not. "It was Cyril's wish that we keep his events going," says Chelle, "so one of the things I am working on is his archive and legacy website and passing the events to others as things are put in place. I promised that I would keep them going, and the Na'alehu Theatre has always been the organization that presented the event, so we imua, move forward until the community is ready to take it on." They decided to rebrand the event as the Waimānalo Kanikapila and not use either name in the hopes that the community would adopt the event and wouldn't need to worry about name usage rights, etc., in the future. They began featuring signature shirts in Cyril's memory to honor him for initiating the festival. Pictures and artwork related to Cyril are featured on the shirts and could also feature Gabby. The event is FREE to attend and supported by these T-shirt sales. The shirts are a one-time print only and are very collectible.

Leohone presenting the painting to Cyril in 2015.

This year, the shirt features a painting by the artist Leohone, showing Cyril Pahinui with his father's spirit beneath the ironwood trees on a Waimānalo beach overlooking Rabbit Island. The legend of these two extraordinary artists lives on in this painting. The artist presented Cyril with the painting at Kani Ka Pila Grille in 2015, and Cyril absolutely loved it. They hung it in the entryway of their home, and it still hangs there today where Cyril's kuahu is. These limited-edition shirts will only be printed once and usually sell out. The shirts will be sold at the event but are available now for pre-sale online at cyrilpahinui.com.

The Waimānalo Kanikapila takes place on April 20th from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. at Waimānalo Beach Park. There will be hundreds of musicians onstage throughout the day, including Jerry Santos and Kamuela Kimokeo and the Kimoko Ohana, Jeff Peterson, the Keawe Ohana, Ben Kaili and Kanakapila from Hilo, and many more of the regulars. New artists this year include Kuuipo Kumukahi, and the girl band, North West Blend, is coming in from Seattle. Henry Kapono will be there with some of the students he is mentoring. They will also feature several kanikapila sessions grouping a variety of artists together so that all the musicians that stop by have a chance to play.

Although the event began as an opportunity for Hawaii musicians to share knowledge and talent through kanikapila, it has since grown to attract hundreds of Hawaiian music lovers of varying skill levels. Don't miss this opportunity to witness some truly unforgettable moments, amazing performances, and one-of-a-kind all-star jams by some of Hawai'i's greatest musicians as they get together to play music in the park, and honor the heritage of the Pahinui family and the Waimānalo community. The Waimānalo Kanikapila is what Hawai'i is all about, and everyone is welcome. For those unable to attend, the Pahinui family will live-stream the event on Cyril's Facebook and YouTube pages. Find out more info at cyrilpahinui.com.

three stages along Kalakaua. Amy Marvin, President and CEO of the Hawai'i Foodbank, a recipient of the proceeds from this event, says, "My favorite part of the event is seeing how so many different restaurants can take the same single ingredient and incorporate it into their dishes in such a variety of ways. Each dish is unique; yet, at the same time, there is a common thread that connects them all. It demonstrates our community's creative, collaborative, and versatile spirit. Fittingly, I see this same spirit every day at Hawai'i Foodbank, which has been a beneficiary of the festival for the last 20 years. It never ceases to amaze me the variety of ways in which our community converges around the shared goal of nourishing our 'ohana. We look forward to joining you again on April 27 and celebrating SPAM JAM®'s 20th anniversary together."

Entertainment will be plentiful throughout the event, with three separate stages along Kalakaua. The Hawaiian Contemporary stage is in front of the Outrigger Waikiki Hotel. Kahiau Lam-Ho kicks off the fun at 4:30 p.m., followed by Kaiona. Multiple award-winner Anuhea takes the stage at 6:30, followed by Kawika Kahiapo and Greg Sardinha and Friends.

The local artists' stage will be in front of the Royal Hawaiian Center. Entertainment will feature ukulele phenom Jody Kamisato and Friends, followed by one of Hawaii's most popular new local groups: Crossing Rain. At 6:30 p.m., Red Bull will give a special presentation, followed by the band Close the Distance.

The Hawaii Music Preservation Society will host a stage at the hula mound fronting the Hyatt Regency Waikiki, with halaus from the most respected kumu hula in the world performing throughout the evening.

As in years past, there will be food and retail booths, arts & crafts, and keiki activities set up on Kalakaua. SPAMMY and his friend Musubi will walk up and down Kalakaua from 5 - 9 p.m. taking pictures with attendees.

In honor of the 20th anniversary, there have been a few special activities added into the mix, including a SPAM® museum with photos, videos, and T-shirts from past SPAM JAM®

Dining Dish

You might have heard that Chart House Waikiki is now closed, but never fear; the restaurant only shut its doors temporarily for a long overdue renovation. The 55-year-old restaurant plans to reopen this summer with a modern vibe, brand-new furnishings, and a bigger bar with an eye towards the next fifty years. Stay tuned for updates on their reopening. • Merriman's has unveiled new nightly specials. There's a new special for every night of the week, from a Raw Bar on Mondays to Prime Rib on Thursdays to Champagne, Caviar, and Chips on Saturdays. Check their website for all the details at merrimanshawaii.com. • The LookOut Food & Drink at Wai Kai has also unveiled new menu items, including a stellar line-up of burgers, wings, and seasonal cheesecakes to help satisfy those hunger cravings after a fun day on the water. • Kai Coffee, a big favorite among the visitors in the market, has opened a new location in the Kalama Valley Shopping Center. It is more of a new local hangout; visitors have been finding their way there on their way back from that side of the island. Open from 7 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily. • Texas de Brazil seems to be adding something new each month. They now offer an all-you-can-eat weekend brunch, available on Saturdays and Sundays from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. • 100 Sails Restaurant is offering a winemaker dinner with special guest Michael Jordan of Jackson Family Wines on April 8th at 5 p.m. Tickets are $150 per person. 944-4494. • MARA, a new Mediterranean restaurant, is opening for dinner at The Renaissance Honolulu Hotel & Spa on April 3rd, with breakfast and lunch service beginning on April 15th. Check out our Chef's Corner to read more about the guy in charge of orchestrating the slew of new restaurants coming to town. Another project they just consulted on is the new set of eateries downtown in the AC Hotel Honolulu. The Dotted Line is open for breakfast, lunch, and dinner and is quickly becoming a hotspot for business, and the AC Lounge, inspired by the idea of "draft and craft," is becoming popular for after-work and dinner. The best of all is Yours Truly, the hidden speakeasy on the ground floor that you must see to experience. It's worth the trip downtown to see!

TableOne Director of Culinary Michael Ocampo

As Director of Culinary for TableOne Hospitality, and its entire portfolio of restaurants in the Pacific region, Chef Michael Ocampo is responsible for overseeing the culinary programs for ALL forthcoming TableOne Hospitality restaurants in Hawaii, and its mentorship programs so that our emerging culinary talent can stay in Hawaii and work within their field of expertise. With multiple restaurants on the schedule, the next one up is Mara, opening this month at the Renaissance Hotel offering Mediterranean cuisine with a local flair.

What is your favorite childhood food memory?

My favorite memory was at the College of San Mateo Farmers Market. I was 6-years old and my grandmother handed me a raw, fresh snap pea still in the pod. I remember how sweet it was and how surprised I was that you could eat peas in the shell. It was an early childhood, core food memory, which is why I believe it is so important to encourage kids to get curious about fresh foods at an early age.

What was your first job in the industry?

My first industry job was at 16 at Round Table Pizza.

Where did you go from there?

From Round Table, I continued my 'illustrious pizza career' at the Pizza Factory. After that, I graduated High School and started Culinary School at City College of San Francisco (CCSF).

Who would you consider your mentor and why?

David Varley (Executive Vice President of Culinary Operations at TableOne Hospitality) is my mentor. He taught me that time outside of the restaurant is just as important as the time spent inside as nature inspires the possibilities of culinary wonderment.

Favorite job prior to moving to Hawaii and why?

Off The Grid Culinary. I was in a unique position to create responsible partnerships with local farmers and small businesses around the Bay Area. Helping a business grow and flourish in my hometown brought me so much joy.

What made you decide to leave the kitchen and move into culinary operations?

The kitchen will always be home to me, and on any given day you will find me in a TableOne restaurant kitchen alongside my appointed Executive Chef and his culinary team. I never 'left the kitchen per se', but rather embraced the opportunity to helm the individual visions for each one of our executive kitchens and to further mentor our teams to execute with excellence daily.

What makes consulting so rewarding for you?

Let me be clear (and I am laughing as I write this): Chefs are always hungry and rarely satisfied, not literally, but more in that we're always experimenting with new ingredients, industry trends, regional agricultural advancements and of course, guest feedback. Each restaurant is completely distinctive in its culinary identity and offerings - so I am amply rewarded in perpetually creating varied culinary experiences. I am never, ever bored...or done ;)

Where do you find your culinary inspiration?

When I see fresh fish or fresh produce at the market my creative nature is stimulated and that is where my best work comes from.

How do you approach opening 12 outlets?

The brilliance of TableOne Hospitality is that each restaurant has its own individualized concept, cuisine and culture, with each place empowered by its own culinary team, appointed and trained under our management. We are thrilled to be investing in Hawaii, as this approach will also lend to sustainable new jobs and opportunities for young chefs to stay in Hawaii and pursue their culinary dreams.

What can we expect from MARA opening April 3?

MARA offers the wonders of Mediterranean cuisine paired with Hawaii's leading local purveyors. Guests are invited to relax amidst the expansive 6,700-square-foot modern restaurant as MARA Executive Chef Franz Wohlrab and I offer family-style tapas, fresh seafood and grilled proteins with a choice of Greek or Italian preparations. Think great food shared among great friends, using reimaged yet sustainably-sourced ingredients that support Hawaii's eco-minded agricultural community. We will also offer a lively, full-service bar and lounge, private dining room, wine cellar, & al fresco dining.

What do you like best about Hawaii so far?

The beauty of the land, the kindness of the community, diversity of palate's, and the most vibrant, fresh local seafood! Its a chef's dream to call this home! I am really looking forward to getting to know my fellow chefs throughout the islands. I really enjoy learning from my culinary community.

Will you be in the kitchen of any of these outlets?

YES, 100% YES! We just consulted on the dining outlets at the AC Hotel Honolulu, and look for me at the upcoming The Romer House Waikiki later this year. We love what we do, and more so bringing the community together to break bread. I can't wait to share MARA with you. Thank you for your support

MARA Hummus

Ingredients:
Chickpeas	940 g	Lemon Juice	80 g
Salt	20 g	Confit Garlic	50 g
Tahini	100 g	Evoo/Garlic Oil	28 g
		Chickpea Water

Directions:

Gather all ingredients and tools and read recipe thoroughly prior to beginning. Place soaked Garbanzo Beans in a sauce pot and cover with water. Cook until the chickpeas are soft and gummy, almost melting in your mouth. Remove chickpeas from stove and strain, getting rid of any extra water. Place drained chickpeas inside robo coupe, blend with Tahini until smooth and then add all remaining ingredients besides the oil. Slowly add the oil until you reach the right consistency, which is key!

Fashioning Aloha

Explore the clothing revolution of the island

"Aloha" is not just a word; it's a way of life, representing a spirit of warmth, affection, and mutual respect for others and the natural world. It's also the name of the clothing associated with Hawaiian culture, its colorful patterns and casual comfort reflecting the laid-back lifestyle of Hawaii. Beyond a fashion statement or tourist souvenir, Aloha wear is recognized worldwide and symbolizes local identity.

Have you ever wondered how this style of clothing began? Aloha wear was invented in 1930s Hawai'i by Honolulu tailors and dressmakers using imported printed silks and cotton. Explore the story behind these beloved Hawaiian garments and exports in this special exhibit at the Honolulu Museum of Art, opening on April 12.

"Fashioning Aloha" tells the story of the clothing and its symbolic motifs through aloha shirts, holokū (gowns), mu'umu'u, and holomu'u (fitted dresses). This textile exhibition showcases designs and narratives spanning nearly 90 years and more than 50 garments. Dive into the history of fashion in Hawai'i, exploring the stories of the people who created the iconic garments and examining the broader cultural impact and global connections behind the eye-catching designs.

This exhibition explores how aloha-wear and its local and global design references can signal identity, culture, and connection to place from its birth in the 1930s to the present. It traces the evolution of aloha-wear with a feast for fashionista eyes.

Throughout the exhibit, garments are paired with their textile motifs' source materials from the museum's collection, like a kapa cloth, a Hawaiian quilt, a Japanese kimono, or a Chinese garment. By pairing them with their sources of inspiration, the exhibition explores how the end design was a product of Hawai'i's unique mix of cultures, natural resources, economic influences, and global trade.

Another source of inspiration for aloha-wear throughout the years has been the music and hula of the islands that is fundamental to Hawaiian culture. Many aloha-wear designers have come from the hula tradition.

The exhibition is grouped into nine themed sections that celebrate the many influences that inform aloha wear and the creative culture of the Hawaiian Islands. They include Polynesian bark cloth, flowers, location, the Hawaiian Kingdom, Asian motifs, Tahitian pareu, Hawaiian quilts, music, and hula. Browse through these areas to learn more about how the clothing we take for granted every day came to be.

Local residents were invited to share stories and photographs of themselves, their family, and friends in aloha wear fashions. See this local touch with photos dating from 1935 to the present in a video that one can view throughout the exhibition.

How has aloha wear retained its relevancy over all years? Contemporary designers have helped carry the legacy forward. Bold colors, detailed designs, and modern aloha-wear styles continue to flourish today. Modern-day designers such as Nike'u Awai, Kenneth "Aloha" Victor, and Roberta Oaks take inspiration from Hawaiian history, language, and architecture, preserving the culture while maintaining relevancy in the 21st century.

On Friday, April 19, Tory Laitila, curator of textiles and historic arts of Hawai'i, moderates a talk-story session with the designers named above whose works are featured in the exhibition. Held in the Doris Duke Theatre, the talk is free with museum admission, but reservations are required—7 p.m. Two more discussions are scheduled before the exhibition closes: one in June and another in August. Check the website for details.

The exhibit runs through September. General admission includes entry to the exhibit: $20 for adults and $10 for Hawai'i residents, free for members and ages 18 and younger. honoluluuseum.org.

SPAM JAM® turns 20

Festival, an arch sculpture made from SPAM® cans, and speaking of SPAM® cans, artist Kamea Hadar has designed an exclusive label to commemorate the anniversary that will be available only in Hawaii stores.

Aside from the fun, the delicious chef creations, the live entertainment and the swag, Waikiki SPAM JAM® is first and foremost, a benefit for local Hawaii charities like the Hawai'i Foodbank.

Remember, not only is the SPAM JAM® fun and delicious, but it's also all for a good cause. A portion of the proceeds will be donated to the Hawai'i Foodbank, Visitor Aloha Society Hawai'i (VASH), and the Waikiki Community Center. "It is such a privilege to be with the Foodbank and bear witness to this genuine, steady outpouring of aloha — which is also reflected in SPAM JAM®'s impact on our mission. Through SPAM JAM®'s combined support over the last 20 years, Hawai'i Foodbank has provided food for nearly 1 million meals — with more to come this year." says Marvin, "We are incredibly grateful for SPAM JAM®, the SJ Foundation, Hormel, all the vendors and participating restaurants, and the generous support from our community. Mahalo for helping us nourish our 'ohana today while we work to end hunger tomorrow."

The Waikiki SPAM JAM® will be held on April 27 from 4 – 10 p.m. along Kalakaua Avenue. For those who can't make the street festival, there will also be a dine-in promotion portion of the event from April 20 to May 5 where about a dozen restaurants will place unique SPAM® dishes on their menu. Many of these special dishes will only be available during this two-week event. Don't miss the 7-11 special where if you buy 2 musubi, you get 1 free (offer good from April 23 - 28 only).

To see a detailed list of who will be participating in both the street festival and the dine-in promotion – and to see what dishes will be featured, head to spamjamhawaii.com.

CocoNene's flagship was destroyed during the Maui fires. The company quickly rebounded and opened multiple locations to replace the lost store and keep their employees, including a new flagship at the International Market Place. Known for featuring island artists and their hands-on activities, they invited in hospitality members to make their own Longboard Letters and take them home. Everyone had a blast learning about the store and choosing icons to make their own creation to take home. Stop by to see for yourself. coconene.com.
