The Father of the Hawaiian Kingdom

Hundreds of brightly decorated floats highlight the 105th annual floral parade honoring the father of the Hawaiian Kingdom on June 11th. All pictures courtesy of the King Kamehameha Celebration Commission.

On December 22, 1871, King Kamehameha V proclaimed a national holiday to honor and celebrate his grandfather and the father of the Hawaiian Kingdom. Originally, the people of Hawai'i wanted to mark the legacy of his birthday, December 11, but he opted to honor his grandfather, Kamehameha I instead, and pushed the holiday as far away from his own birthday as possible, hence the arbitrary date of June 11. Less than six months later, the very first Kamehameha Day celebration took place on June 11, 1872. This year marks the 150th celebration of King Kamehameha in Hawaii. But, 150 years later do we all remember why? Let's look back on the life and time of King Kamehameha I.

King Kamehameha I was born into Hawaiian royalty on the island of Hawai'i between 1748 and 1761. His mother, Kekuiapoiwa, was the daughter of a Kona chief. There were reportedly many prophetic signs that he would be great leader, including being born around the time that Hailey's Comet lit up the Hawaiian night skies in 1758, and the kahuna predicted he would become the leader who would unite the islands as one. Such a significant prophecy frightened and angered the current Ali'i who saw him as a potential threat and ordered the baby be put to death, so he was hidden away for years to keep him safe. It was during that time that young Kamehameha earned his nickname "The Lonely One." To save his life, the infant was whisked away to Waipio Valley where he was raised in secrecy by foster parents until he could safely return to his parents in Kailua-Kona. He lived there with his parents until his father's death, then continued to receive special training from his uncle King Kalani'opu'u, the ruler of the island of Hawaii. According to the National Parks Service website on Kamehameha, "this training included skills in games, warfare, oral history, navigation, religious ceremonies, and other information necessary to become an ali'i-'ai-moku (a district chief). By the time James Cook arrived in the Islands, Kamehameha had become a superb warrior who already carried the scars of a number of political and physical encounters. The young warrior Kamehameha was described as a tall, strong, and physically fearless man

HELLO SUMMER!

Summer is back, and so are the visitors! I flew back to town a few days ago, and flights are packed! It didn't help that my airline changed the aircraft from a 777 to a 737 a week before my flight. I spent an hour on the phone with the airline looking for a bigger plane to take home. (I hate single-aisle aircraft over the Pacific. They are just so cramped!) I was willing to fly anywhere to change planes, and since they changed my flight, they were ready to change my flight for free, but there were absolutely no seats available anywhere. I was coming home on a Sunday. The agent told me the only way he could put me on a 777 was if I flew home on Thursday. If this is what it's like in May, I can't imagine what mid-June and July will look like. Activities continue to surge back to life on the bright side, so there will be no end of options to share with your guests.

Sadly, the Pan-Pacific Festival decided to hold off one more year before returning, so although we will miss the cultural activities, their parade, and those fireworks, we have another celebrated event coming back. The King Kamehameha Day Parade is a not-miss event for visitors and locals alike, and on its 150th Anniversary, this parade should be bigger and better than ever before. Speaking of fireworks, there have been some off of Waikiki recently. I'm not sure if Royal Cosmetics has made it back, but they were a sight for sore eyes, and I have a feeling we might be seeing more of those in the future.

Remember, we have a few new sections in the book. A few concierge discounts are back and featured on the back page. Remember, you don't need to show the magazine to get them. Simply mention the offer and show your hotel ID or business card. We've also started a Help Wanted section. Yes, I know those of you who see the magazine are working, but there are many people who used to be in the industry that are not, so please share the word. Plus, if you want a few more hours, there are options!

We have a few concierge events this month, so email me, and I hope to see you soon!

BEYOND Monet

Experience offers guests another art event of infinite potential for wonder and sheds new light on what the world thought it knew about Monet. It promises to provide an even more satisfying art experience with its stunning set pieces and inspiring musical score.

Claude Monet (1840-1926) was a French painter considered the father of impressionism. Impressionism is a 19th-century art movement that is "characterized by small, thin, yet visible brush strokes, open composition, emphasis on accurate depiction of light in its changing qualities (often accentuating the effects of the passage of time), ordinary subject matter, unusual visual angles, and inclusion of movement as a crucial element of human perception and experience." Monet was especially adept in his attempts to paint nature as he perceived it. But that desire to paint things he saw as he perceived them went against the norms of art at that time. Impressionists faced harsh opposition from the conventional art community in France. It ignored the rules of academic painting, using freely brushed colors over lines and contours, and portrayed overall visual effects instead of details, angering the established art community of that time. Eventually, he won the public over, and they came to believe that the Impressionists had captured a fresh and original vision, even though it took some time for his critics to come around.

Monet's ambition to document the French countryside led to a method of painting the same scene many times to capture the changing of light and the passing of seasons. One of the best-known examples of this work is his iconic Water Lilies series. A project that is said to have occupied him continuously for the last 20 years of his life.

In the second half of the 20th century, Monet's fame and popularity soared when he became one of the world's most famous painters and a fountain of inspiration for burgeoning artists.

Beyond Monet: The Immersive Experience gives guests a glimpse into the emotions and perspectives of this artistic genius. After entering the Garden Gallery, the Prism transports visitors into the largest feature area of the exhibit. Taking inspiration from Musée de l'Orangerie in Paris, where most of Monet's masterpieces reside, guests can freely roam the oval-shaped Infinity Room to absorb the artist's bright and colorful paintings the way they were intended. Monet's stunning imagery encompasses the entire room's surface from floor to ceiling. The room is a haven for awakening the senses, as the ebb and flow of the artwork are accompanied by the rhythm of an original musical score, transporting guests inside the paintings themselves.

Beyond Monet promises to break conventions with this spectacular audio-visual journey through impressionism. The exhibit's three-part multi-sensory experience combines music, sound effects, and projection and brings guests on an unforgettable journey through the artist's most iconic works. Featuring masterpieces such as Poppies, Impression: Sunrise, and the iconic Water Lilies series, guests will become one with the paintings as larger than life projections of Monet's works swirl around the space, immersing the viewer in color and light and bringing art to life in front of your eyes.

The exhibit runs from June 15 - July 31, 2022, at Hawaii Convention Center. The show will be open from Sunday through Thursday: 10 a.m. to 9 p.m., and on Friday & Saturday: 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. The last sale will be one hour before closing. Tickets start at $18.99 for children, $30.99 for students and military, and general admission is $34.99 and sold on a timed entry basis. Premium tickets allow guests to enter up to two hours before or after the start time as stated on your ticket, subject to exhibit opening hours, and are $10 more. VIP tickets cost $73.99 and include all premium perks, priority access to the exhibit, and a special merchandise package.

King Kamehameha Day

who "moved in an aura of violence." He was said to have been so strong that he could lift the 2.5-ton Naha Stone, a feat that, according to prophecy, indicated the man who would unite the Hawaiian Island. His uncle gave him the training he needed, including taking Kamehameha with him when he went to meet the famed Cook, giving Kamehameha the opportunity to learn about foreign ships and weapons.

When King Kalaniopuu died in 1782, his uncle left him the island's war god while giving his own son Kiwala'o control over the island, thus setting the stage for a civil war. It wasn't long before Kamehameha started challenging Kiwala'o authority and they began battling over the island's lands. Kamehameha battled Kiwala'o and others for control of the island, and eventually triumphed in seizing control of the island. From there, he took his newfound knowledge of the foreigners and their weapons, making allies with a few of them and building a strong army. He then used his relationships to build up an armory of Western weapons and over time, he and his army were able to use their superior firepower to take charge of most of the Hawaiian Islands. By 1810, Kamehameha had become ruler of all the Hawaiian Islands, becoming the founder and first ruler of the Kingdom of Hawaii, bringing peace to the land and justice to his people.

Kamehameha's unification of Hawaii was significant not only because it was an incredible feat, but also because under separate rule, the Islands may have been torn apart by competing western interests. Despite being an autocratic ruler, he sent governors to lead the administration of each island and implemented the "Law of the Splintered Paddle", which later served as a guideline for the creation of human rights laws in regard to how civilians and other non-combatants are to be treated during acts of peaceful assembly, peaceful association and/or peaceful navigation and has been incorporated into Hawaii's State Constitution. He took steps to ensure the islands remained a united realm after his death. He unified the legal system. He went on to establish foreign trade and ushered in the modern Hawaiian flag with 8 stripes representing the main Hawaiian Islands with the Union Jack in the corner. Eventually, he had completely fulfilled the prophecy the kahuna's made about him at his birth, accomplishing what no man in the history of the Hawaiian people had ever done. By uniting the Hawaiian Islands into a viable and recognized political entity, Kamehameha secured his people from a quickly changing world.

Kamehameha died in his hometown of Kailua-Kona on May 8, 1819, and as tradition dictates, his bones were hidden to protect their mana. To this day, no one knows his final resting place. This is the man that the Hawaiian Islands has been celebrating for the past 150 years, and for some of you, maybe it's a bit clearer now as to why.

King Kamehameha Day was one of the first holidays adopted by Hawai'i when it achieved statehood in 1959. In the early years, the celebrations featured carnivals, fairs, and lots of racing – foot races, horse races and even velocipede races. The Hawaiian Language newspaper "Ka Lāhui Hawai'i," dated June 14, 1877, reported more than 4,000 people gathered at the horse racetrack where Kapi'olani Park now sits with King Kalākaua and his consort Kapi'olani were also in attendance. The pictures of the event from the 30s shown throughout this issue show every square inch of every shot filled with people to watch the festivities. Look at all the people that fill the balconies and the roof of the Palace. In recent years, The King Kamehameha Day Celebrations have evolved into statewide celebrations with lei draping ceremonies, parades, rodeo's and ho'olaule'a's happening in June.

So how do we celebrate Islands' most famous historical ruler in this day and age? In as many ways as possible of course. To begin with his statues are ceremoniously draped with flower lei. Where is that you might ask? Well, it depends where you are, as there are actually five commissioned statues standing in honor of King Kamehameha's memory.

The most recognized statue of Kamehameha stands in front of Ali'iolani Hale across from Iolani Palace. Dedicated in 1883, this statue is actually the second statue created, after the ship delivering the original statue from Europe was lost at sea, and officials decided to commission a second cast using the insurance funds collected after the loss of the original.

Unbeknownst to Hawaiian officials, the original statue was miraculously recovered after fishermen managed to recover the sunken statue from the wreck near the Falkland Islands and brought to the Hawaiian Islands by a British ship captain who sold it to the Hawaiian government for $875. Officials now had two identical statues and decided to place the newer one that had not been damaged in the shipwreck in the originally selected location in downtown Honolulu, and after a few years of work fixing up the first statue the restored statue was installed near Kamehameha's birthplace in North Kohala in 1912.

Crowds packed the grounds of the Palace in the 30s for the celebration

A third replica was commissioned when Hawaii attained statehood and was unveiled in 1969 in the U.S. Capitol's National Statuary Hall where statues of historic figures from all 50 states are on display. Initially placed in the back corner of the Hall, it was told the location was chosen because of the fact it is the heaviest statue in the Hall, weighing in at over 6 tons, and moving it safely was a concern. However, after multiple staffers were overheard in the early 2000's saying the statue was placed in the back because he "wasn't wearing any clothes," "he was naked," "wasn't decently dressed," and "morally indecent" a letter writing campaign was begun to educate people that those statements were not only factually incorrect, but highly insulting as well, the statue was moved in 2008 to a prominent position in Emancipation Hall in the Capitol's new visitor center where he dominates the gallery, as he should.

A fourth statue can be found in Hilo at Wailoa State Park. The tallest of the statues standing at fourteen feet, the Princeville Corporation commissioned this statue initially to be installed on the north shore of Kauai, but decided to donate it to Hilo instead, home of the afore-mentioned Naha Stone, which a young Kamehameha was said to have overturned in a feat of incredible strength. Today, the Naha Stone is located in front of the Hilo Public Library.

A fifth statue is located at the Grand Wailea Resort on Maui. The statue, made by Hawaiian artist Herb Kane is often said to be the most lifelike of them all, incorporating Polynesian features into his facial features.

Expect each of the statues to be draped in lei on June 11th. There will be a special Lei Draping ceremony at Ali'iolani Hale on Friday, June 10th from 1 – 4 p.m. Have a visitor interested in watching the ceremonies or getting involved? Loose plumeria are needed by the thousands to string these lei and donations will be accepted as of 8 a.m. that day, as will volunteers willing to help string those 30-foot leis that adorn the statue. Watching the ceremony where the fire department brings its hook and ladder to place these lei around the statue – and then place their head against the statue, in the Hawaiian exchange of ha – is extremely powerful to behold. Ha, of course, is the Hawaiian greeting that welcomes the other person into their space by sharing the breath of life, which was sacred to the culture. Ancient Hawaiians recognized that their breath was the key to good health and believed it possessed mana – and is a trait one will often see to this day, especially on a day as important as this one to the Hawaiian culture.

The next morning, the 105th annual King Kamehameha Celebration Floral Parade will begin at Iolani Palace at 9

Dining Dish

Truffle lovers, get ready! Margotto e Baciare is an exquisite French restaurant in Japan known for offering diners the world's best truffles in the world as well as one of the top wine cellars in the world - and they have decided to expand to Hawaii! Chef Kenta Kayama, known for innovative French cuisine, having trained under several Michelin-starred chefs, will open Margotto Hawaii on June 1st on Piikoi Street. Offering a French menu rooted in Italian and Japanese techniques with an abundance of seasonal truffles, Chef says he is striving to create a restaurant along the lines that Hawaii has never seen before. I can't wait to try it. Bonus points? Margotto is also a designated Krug Ambassador restaurant. Really delicious bubbles, anyone? More to come after they open, but this one definitely has my interest. You can read more about Chef in this month's Chef's Corner. 592-8500. • Following along the lines of high-end fine-dining restaurants, Mugen recently introduced a new seasonal tasting menu carefully curated by Chef Jason Yamaguchi. The restaurant recently received the coveted five-star rating from Forbes Travel Guide, one of just two Hawaii restaurants that have received five stars.

Mugen's 11-course tasting menu is priced at $225, with an optional wine pairing for $110. Although the tasting menu changes based on the availability of rare ingredients, the current menu includes such luxurious dishes as Sasanian Osetra Caviar (Andagi. Creme Fraiche. Cured Yolk), Dutch Asparagus (Black Truffle. Edamame. Sakura Vinaigrette) and Miyazaki A5 (Kakiage Panisse. Chawanmushi. Carrot Puree. Aka Shiso. Veal Jus). Open Tuesday through Saturday with one seating each evening at 6:30 p.m. 377-2247. • Sho's Kitchen at 808 Center is known for its budget-friendly bentos, but Chef Shoji Namatame is a man of many skills and explores them every Friday and Saturday night with an upscale special Chef's Table. Presenting a seven-course menu for $80, the menu changes each month and can be found on their website. The former executive Chef at the Trump Waikiki has a wide range of culinary talents. His ingenious menus take diners around the world, incorporating the flavors of Spain, Italy, Japan, and Hawaii, to name a few, depending on what's in season and his mood. This is one of those secret dining events that isn't such a secret any more. The dinners are usually sold out a month in advance but well worth your time to see if you are looking for an upscale, refined dining experience at an unexpected location. Reservations required. 376-8067. • Ala Moana Hotel by Mantra has re-opened Café 410, offering guests and locals a bountiful breakfast buffet seven days a week. Located in the original Plantation Café space, Café 410 boasts murals by well-known Hawaii artist Kamea Hadar, and an overall upgraded look. Open daily from 6:30 a.m. to 10 a.m. on weekdays and 7 a.m. to 10:30 a.m. on weekends. Reservations are not needed. • Hearing some good things about Fig & Ginger Honolulu. Offering a new brunch & graze cafe concept, their toasties look delicious and have a nice selection of pressed juices. Open for brunch from 7 a.m. - 3 p.m. daily at McCully Shopping center. 351-3424. • Holey Grail Donuts has opened its flagship store at Ae'o in Ward Village. Their first permanent brick-and-mortar location will open to the public on National Donut Day, Friday, June 3rd. Open daily at 7 a.m. Call 482-0311.

Chef's Corner

Margotto Hawaii Exec. Chef Kenta Kayama

Margotto e Baciare is a world-recognized truffle-centric restaurant in Tokyo. An exquisite French restaurant where guests can enjoy the world's best truffles paired with an exquisite wine list chosen from their cellar of over 20,000 bottles. Executive Chef Kenta Kayama trained in the Japanese and French disciplines working the kitchens of three Michelin-starred restaurants, and lucky for us, he and his partners have decided to begin their expansion in Hawaii.

Why did you want to open a restaurant in Hawaii?

Hawaii is special. We have dreams of global expansion and this is our preferred starting point. A number of celebrated chefs have opened world-class restaurants in the islands over the past few years. As with London 30 years ago and Dubai 15 years ago, their foodie revolutions began when prominent chefs opened restaurants there, spurring other notables to consider the destination for their next location. I feel Hawaii is at point where the food culture and scene is conducive for even more world-class establishments to open.

What first attracted you to culinary?

My father, a cook who still runs a restaurant, prepared some of the most exquisite meals in my life. As a child, I helped him in the kitchen and recalled the customers' faces as they savored his cuisine. Their smiles sparked my desire to follow in his footsteps.

What is your first childhood food memory?

My father's hamburger steak, it's absurdly good.

I understand you were a snowboard champion. How did you jump from that to becoming a chef?

When I was in high school, I had a major accident at a tournament. As a result, I decided to attend culinary school to become a cook, and pursued what was my original dream.

Who would you consider your mentor and why?

Hiroyuki Kanda, chef owner of the three Michelin-starred restaurant Kanda in Tokyo. Through him, I learned the depth and delicate nature of Japanese cuisine. He also taught me how to be close to customers, and from that, I realized that even Japanese people do not fully know Japanese cuisine.

Will you be moving to Hawaii for this?

I can't live here full-time since I must oversee our flagship location in Tokyo, but my work visa will allow me to return to Hawaii regularly so that we may continue to develop new menus. My delegate, Chef Yohei Yanagishita and our GM will be moving here full-time. Our owner Kazutomo "Robert" Hori, has already moved to Hawaii, and we already feel like kama'aina.

Tell us one dish that you remember.

The black truffle and mushroom tart that I first crafted when I became a Krug Ambassador. It is most certainly an unforgettable presentation.

Tell us what your menu will offer?

My goal is to develop a menu that embodies Margotto's special style of cuisine which is based on French culinary principles but infuses techniques and knowledge rooted in Japanese and Italian cuisine, yet incorporating fresh ingredients sourced in Hawaii all kissed by seasonal truffles from around the world.

Do you have future plans for Hawaii?

Right now, we are focused on this opening and making it a success. However, Chef Yohei, is quite adept at making noodles and bread. One day we hope to expand in Hawaii with a Margotto noodle shop and possibly a Margotto bread shop.

This will be the only Krug Ambassador restaurant designated in Hawaii. What does that mean?

The designation means that we will have ease of access to Krug Champagne, which may at times be challenging to obtain in Hawaii. We are looking to also have a Champagne pairing dinner event, possibly a collaboration with other chefs from Hawaii or beyond.

What do you like best about being in Hawaii?

I just love the warm climate, the fresh air, and the welcoming local people!

What's on your to do list when you have free time?

I want to hike Diamond Head, surf and golf!

Margotto e Baciare's Fried Egg Toast

Ingredients:

4 slices of white bread	10g balsamic vinegar
80g bacon, preferably thick cut or pancetta	4T butter
20g arugula	4 egg yolks
20g endive (chop into bite-sized pieces)	12g black truffle (if not available, use some truffle oil)
50g noisette oil (hazelnut) (or almond oil, or some other type of fragrant nut-based oil)	Parmesan cheese
	Salt and pepper to taste

Directions: Using a cookie cutter around 4 cm in diameter, punch a hole in the center of each slice of bread. Lightly toast the bread slices evenly on both sides. Soak the arugula in cold water to crisp, then pat down dry with a paper towel. Fry the bacon and then cut the cooked bacon into bite-sized pieces. Season the endive and arugula with hazelnut (or other nut-based) oil, balsamic vinegar, salt and pepper. Melt a pad of butter in a frying pan. Place a slice of toast atop the heated butter in the frying pan and drop an egg yolk into the hollowed-out hole. Fry the bread until golden brown. Repeat for steps 6-8 for all slices of toast. Plate each slice of toast, sprinkling chopped bacon over each slice, also topping them with the endive and arugula salad. Shave some parmesan cheese over each salad and decorate with thin slices of black truffle, or drizzle with some truffle oil. Makes 4 servings.

Margotto Hawaii is located at 514 Piikoi Street

Magic Returns to Waikiki

Magic is heading back to Waikiki! For 30 years, Magic of Polynesia was a staple in Waikiki's entertainment options, but although there were already plans to leave their showroom as Roberts had purchased a new space, COVID moved up that timeline, and they closed the show for good during the COVID shutdown.

Although Robert's has hinted at perhaps bringing back some sort of illusion show in the future, the closure left a void in Waikiki's entertainment industry – until now.

"The Magical Mystery Show!" will debut at the Hilton Waikiki Beach Hotel on June 30. The show will take guests through a "portal" back in time into the styles of the Victorian era. The theatre is designed to recreate a bespoke, Victorian environment, when parlors were built in American and European homes. Back then, the parlors in America were beehives of social relations allowing the well-heeled in society to interact, relax, dine, cocktail and most importantly, enjoy the arts. These rooms allowed small groups of people to be entertained in an intimate setting, often referred to as Parlor Magic.

Getting its name from when magicians used to perform in a formal setting in the best room of a person's house, parlor is performed for audiences smaller than you might get at a full-sized theatre, but larger than can gather around comfortably for a close-up experience such as when your uncle would pull a coin out from behind your ear.

Many people consider the term "parlor" to be old-fashioned and think parlor magic is magic performed long ago by gentlemen in top hats and long coats in the living rooms of the privileged. And at one time it was exactly that. But today it means magic that is intimate, that doesn't require expensive, large-scale stage equipment, and is performed close to the audience and without a stage. The Parlor Magician was the King of Entertainment during these golden years. Now, all these years later... they're back!

That is the experience "The Magical Mystery Show!" is bringing to Waikiki.

Each show is limited in seating to ensure an elegant, intimate experience. The seats in the theatre are either plush armchairs, bar stools or loveseat type sofas, are all easily movable, allowing parties to move within their comfort zone while being just feet away from the world class magicians performing in front of them. Guests can expect to be within six to fifteen feet of the magician as items float, disappear, and literally change forms. Interactive participation by audience members is a key ingredient for making each show unique and special.

The show is a partnership with a local company in Hawaii, Hotel Magic, LLC. Jonathan Todd, CEO of Hotel Magic and long time resident of Maui, has been involved in the production and management of many major celebrities and events including Mick Fleetwood of Fleetwood Mac for over 30 years. He conceived and executed Fleetwood's on Front St. in Maui and has a proven production expertise. "Providing magic and mystery in these times is awe-inspiring and brings people back to the wonder of childhood, instills infinite possibilities and creates awe that's uplifting and simply makes people feel good again" says Todd.

To ensure guests may experience an entirely new show each time they visit, the headline magician will rotate out every two months. The inaugural magician will be Nathan Coe Marsh. The company has been hosting shows at the Kea Lani in Maui since February to rave reviews, and Nathan was also the opening magician at that show and simply thrilled every member of the audience with world class magic and laughter. The company has 27 of the world's best magicians under contract so audiences can return again and again.

The theatre will be open six days a week, offering two shows a night at 5 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. Tickets are limited as shows are kept to less than 60 people per performance to ensure the intimacy of each show. The theatre is dark on Tuesdays.

Magician Nathan Coe Marsh

The show will also be offering magic classes at 3 p.m. daily (except Tuesdays). Open to guests 6 years of age and older, this is a great opportunity to learn magic from some of the finest magicians in the world. Magic classes are free for guests of the hotel and local residents with ID but cost $39 for others.

The magic begins on June 30th. Tickets are $139 plus tax for the public; however, discounted tickets will be available for hotel guests of the Hilton Waikiki Beach Hotel and local residents, starting at just $99. Children aged 6 - 17 are available for $39. Tickets can be purchased at the concierge desk in the lobby or online at oahumagic.com.

People lined every railing and even the roof of the Palace to watch the festivities a.m. Starting on King Street, the parade will head down Punchbowl Street before turning left on Ala Moana Boulevard before eventually making their way to Kalakaua Avenue. The parade comes to a finish at Monsarrat Avenue and Kapi'olani Park.

Known for its elaborately decorated floats, the parade never ceases to amaze all spectators young and old. Since the early 1900s, pa'u riders have brought a quintessential Hawaiian style to floral parades across the state. Adorned in the colors and flora of the islands, pa'u riders are integral to regal parades such as this and are often the highlight. Each island is represented by a unit of riders, including that island's Princess and her attendants. With the pa'u queen and her unit leading the way, each pa'u princess presides over her own unit representing one of the eight Hawaiian islands. They are joined by their respective attendants, outriders, and page — all adorned in the flowers and colors of the islands they are representing.

Every year, members of the visitor industry show up on the Lei Court or as a Pa'u rider, and this year is no exception as Ed-Lyn Mahina Sniffen and Michael Chow from the Aulani Resort will be decked out on all their royal glory. Don't forget HVCB's Kainoa Daines is also the Commission Chair, so you can expect to see him on his bicycle of Segway throughout the parade making sure all goes to plan.

Following the parade, the public is invited to enjoy the King Kamehameha Celebration Ho'olaule'a at Kapi'olani Park from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. There will be live music, plenty of food for sale and a variety of vendors set up for people to browse through as they enjoy the day.

For more information, please follow them on Facebook, or head to their website at KamehamehaDay.Hawaii.Gov.
