KEEPING THE HOSPITALITY INDUSTRY INFORMED SINCE 1998

The 43rd annual Hawaii International Film Festival presented by Halekulani, more commonly called HIFF, returns from October 12 - 22. Established in 1981, HIFF is one of the longest-running and most prestigious film festivals in the United States, focusing on showcasing Asia-Pacific films. HIFF provides a platform for local and international filmmakers to exhibit their work and connect with audiences. As the only Academy Award® qualifying film festival for short films in the State, HIFF43 will screen 95 shorts from around the world. Highlights include a focus on local filmmaking, indigenous voices, and environmental short film competition. There is also a curated selection of films eligible for Oscar consideration.

HIFF bridges Hawaii and the Asia-Pacific region, fostering cultural exchange and understanding through cinema, highlighting the region's rich diversity. The Festival features a diverse selection of films, including narrative features, documentaries, short films, and animation from around the world.

HIFF43 also marks the Festival's return to fully in-theater programming. Attendees can watch the international showcase of over 186 films featuring Asian-Pacific Rim cinema, Pasifika (Pacific Islander), and Indigenous voices at Consolidated Kahala and Ward Theatres on O'ahu, with more venues to be announced in the future.

The Festival starts with its Opening Night Film, Next Goal Wins, Oscar® winner Taika Waititi's latest comedy (Jojo Rabbit, Thor: Ragnarok). Shot entirely on Oahu in 2019, the movie follows the story of the notoriously bad American Samoa soccer team, known for a brutal 2001 FIFA match they lost 31-0. With the World Cup Qualifiers approaching, the team hires a maverick coach played by Michael Fassbender, hoping he can turn around the world's worst soccer team around in this underdog comedy.

Celebrated Aboriginal Australian director Warwick Thornton's Cannes-selected film, The New Boy, which just had its debut at the Cannes Film Festival, stars Cate Blanchett, Deborah Mailman, Wayne Blair, and newcomer Aswan Reid in a charming story of spirituality and survival set in 1940s Australia, supposedly loosely inspired by Thornton's own upbringing as an Aboriginal child attending a Christian boarding school.

Another feature film this year will be Monster, a 2023 Japanese drama film which premiered in Cannes & was a Best Screenplay Jury Award winner. Monster follows a battle between the mother of a young boy who begins to act strangely, who discovers that a teacher is responsible for her son's distress and storms into the school demanding the truth and that they discipline the teacher. As the battle between mother and school intensifies, Director Hirokazu Kore-eda (HIFF42 Vision In Film honoree) deftly switches perspectives, and everything the mother thinks she knows comes into question, and the truth gradually emerges.

HIFF has a legacy supporting the film industry in Hawai'i. HIFF43 will also present the best from the local creative content industry, including Kanaka Maoli (Native Hawaiian films), in providing a forum of authentic experiences and perspectives on the complicated history and cultures beyond the mainstream view of Hawaii as just "paradise." "HIFF43 is a celebration of Pacific voices and powerful storytelling. We are

The entrance to Polynesian Cultural Center in the 70s. All photos courtesy of PCC.

In the mid 1800s, Mormon missionaries landed in Tahiti and surrounding Polynesian Islands, where they lived among the people and learned their languages. By 1850, they had reached the Sandwich Islands (Hawai'i) and soon purchased a 6,000-acre plantation in Lā'ie. The LDS Temple started in 1915, was dedicated in 1919, and began to lure more members from the South Pacific. Church leader David O. McKay first conceived of a school of higher learning to educate the young people who flocked to Lā'ie, and in 1974, the Church College of Hawai'i became a campus of Utah's Brigham Young University. From these humble beginnings, the idea of revitalizing cultures from the South Pacific was born and has slowly and steadily grown over the decades.

In the 1930s and 40s, Lā'ie was a small fishing village with only a few hundred families, and they would often try to get enough food by throwing a hukilau on the beach. What we now know as the Polynesian Cultural Center found its first inspiration in the 1940s when church

Publisher's Letter

Happy Halloween! Initially, I planned to do a Halloween Wrap-Up as I have done in years past, but there wasn't enough information available by the time I finished this issue. I know two of the favorites are happening, Waikiki Trolley's Interactive Haunted House and Haunted Plantation, but even Hallowbaloo hasn't locked in a date yet. That being said, this town loves to hit the town for Halloween, so keep your eyes open. There should be lots more festivities announced closer to the time. And, to all of you who work that Tuesday? Good luck! Waikiki is always a madhouse.

Before the costumed craziness, there's lots to celebrate in the cinematic world. HIFF returns with a completely in-person program from October 12 -22 this month. Remember, HIFF is also the only Oscar®-qualifying festival for short films with programming presenting Pasifika and Kānaka Maoli films, and this year's Made in Hawaii line-up is outstanding. With 186 feature films and shorts to watch, there is something for everyone. You can find the full line-up of films at hiff.org, and individual ticket prices are around $14 per screening.

Lastly, sixty years ago this month, the Polynesian Cultural Center officially opened its doors. I enjoyed researching its history to write the story, and honestly, I could have filled every page in the book. If you ever have some time, it's a great rabbit hole to go down, I highly recommend it. We all get lost in our day-to-day, recommending guests head out to the Marketplace for the villages or the show. But have you ever really followed the timeline of how the Center came about? It goes back to the Mormom's arriving on the islands in the 1850s. They thought about this concept for decades before applying it, and my write-up doesn't do it justice. This community got behind this project and volunteered their time and labor to create what was a 15-acre site at the time, an amazing undertaking. It reminds me of that quote from Field of Dreams, "If you build it, they will come." They knew that the Center would provide a much-needed boost to the area and meaningful employment to the residents and students. I was thrilled to go through the picture archives. I only had room for a few of them but spent hours looking through them all. I'm not sure what PCC has planned for the next sixty years, but I sure hope an on-site museum is part of it. Their story deserves it. Aloha!

Edwin Torres, Complex General Manager for the Waikiki Beachcomber by Outrigger and OHANA Waikiki East, has been promoted, moving to Maui to take over as General Manager of the newly acquired Outrigger Ka'anapali Beach Resort. That means there were two General Manager positions available, and huge congratulations go out to Cecilia Hamao and Kiana Beimes, who were both promoted. Ceci is now the GM at the Beachcomber and Kiana at the East! Watching these two move up the ladder these past few years has been exciting. I couldn't be happier for both of them! • Speaking of watching people move up the ladder, it's equally as exciting to announce that Adrian Perez has been named General Manager at the Coconut Waikiki Hotel. It's pretty cool to watch everyone work their way up from my side, knowing you all as I do. The people in this industry are amazing! • Another amazing stat is that the Waikiki Safe & Sound Program just celebrated its first anniversary, with Waikiki crime stats showing a marked improvement since before the program began. The Waikiki Business Improvement District has hired Katie Kaahanui as the Program's Executive Coordinator to keep Waikiki safe and reduce crime. Her duties include coordinating with everyone involved to identify obstacles, working with social service organizations to find solutions for people in need, maintaining a list of repeat offenders, working with HPD and prosecutors to keep them off the street, and exploring funding for future efforts.

Celebrate Restaurant Week on the Grand Lānai

The International Market Place hosts the 5th Grand Lanai Restaurant Week, October 2nd - 8th. Its collection of open-air restaurants from award-winning chefs like Michael Mina and Roy Yamaguchi, alongside locally owned island favorites like Moani Waikiki, will welcome diners with special prix-fix menus, offering multi-course pairings at a special price. These menus allow guests to check out select menu items and beverage selections at special pricing. The limited-time menus are a draw for frequent visitors to the Market Place, giving them a chance to try new items at some of their favorite eateries, while others appreciate the value and variety offered throughout the week.

During Restaurant Week, Kūhiō Ave. Food Hall will offer grilled Spanish octopus, smashed fingerling potatoes, and ancho chili hash aioli for $24.

Each of the restaurants on the Grand Lanai — Eating House 1849 by Roy Yamaguchi, Herringbone Waikiki, Liliha Bakery, Moani Waikiki, Shorefyre, Skybox Taphouse, and StripSteak Waikiki—will offer three-course menus, and several locations will provide diners with a choice of entrees. special prix fixe menus specifically for this week. Downstairs at Kūhiō Ave. Food Hall, diners can choose from several a la carte courses, including the Pulpa con Papas pictured above and Avocado Brulee for $12.

"International Market Place is offering visitors and locals the opportunity to try new restaurants or visit their favorites to try unique-to-the-week menus at great prices," says Malia Zannoni, Marketing & Sponsorship Director. "This year, all eight of our Grand Lanai restaurants as well as Kūhiō Avenue Food Hall are participating, so diners will have plenty of options!"

So, what's up for grabs throughout the week? At most places, there will be a three-course menu, several with different options to choose from for each course. For example, diners can grab a Seafood Bisque followed by a 10 oz. Carved Prime Rib w/ Lobster Tail, served with rice, corn, and mixed greens and the Original Coco Puff for dessert from Liliha Bakery, or head over to Shorefyre and select your choice of Thai Larb Lettuce Cup or Ahi Crudo Sliced Cucumber for your starter, then choose either Roasted Rack of Pork or Peppercorn Parmesan Au for your main followed by either a Bread Pudding or Guava Cheesecake Cannoli for dessert. Each restaurant offers a unique menu and pricing. Live musical entertainment will also be offered at several venues throughout the week.

See all the menus in full on the website at shopinternationalmarketplace.com.

DUTY FREE HAWAII REOPENS WITH A NEW TWIST

Duty Free Shops in Waikiki reopened last month for the first time since COVID, but unlike in years past, you don't need a passport to shop there - and they still cover sales tax! Offering more than 100 brands, they are also featuring 45 local vendors. Find bath, beauty, fashion, watches, kids items, food and more from 11 a.m. - 10 p.m. dfs.com/en/hawaii.

CUDDLE WITH KITTIES AT THE CAT CAFE MOFF

Japanese-based Cat Café MOFF opened a pop-up at International Market Place last month. In contrast to the cat cafés we are familiar with, this is not an adoption-based business, but rather a place where people can get to spend time with the kitties and get to know more about them from the professional caretakers. Visitors can get their cuddle on with the kitties in 30-minute intervals for $23 and 60-minutes for $28. Admission fees include one drink. Open daily from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. This location will be open until at least May 2024. moff-usa.com.

members started hosting a hukilau as a fund-raising event, and it proved that tourists would come to La'ie and that the various Polynesian groups could work together as one. Conversations soon began about the idea of building authentic houses from several Polynesian islands, and in early 1962, construction began. Over 100 labor missionaries volunteered to help build the Polynesian Cultural Center's original 39 structures around a twelve-acre taro patch. By importing materials and artisans from the South Pacific, village houses were crafted in authentic style, and 60 years ago this month, the Polynesian Cultural Center officially opened on October 12, 1963.

Early reports show that the media on Oahu were not impressed with the venture, predicting PCC would never make it because it was simply too far away from the tourist hub in Waikiki. What did they know? After performances on the Ed Sullivan Show, the famed Hollywood Bowl, and Elvis Presley filmed part of "Paradise, Hawaiian Style" at PCC in 1966, the show at PCC quickly outgrew its 750-seat theatre, expanding to nearly 1,300 seats by the late 1960s. In 1968, over one million guests had walked into the Center. By 1970, the Polynesian Cultural Center really began to thrive. In 1977, a state survey named PCC as Hawaii's top-paid attraction, which has continued to top the list ever since.

The Center's popularity and the grounds continued to grow with a significant expansion in 1975 that relocated and enlarged the Hawaiian village, added a Marquesan ceremonial compound and several other new buildings, including a new amphitheater that seated nearly 2,800 visitors, and the 1,000-seat Gateway Restaurant in 1979. In 1980, attendance at PCC surpassed the 10-million mark.

The next decade brought many more additions to the Center, including the Hawaiian Mission Settlement, Migrations Museum, a 1920-style store, and a totally re-landscaped village. Many will remember the introduction of their night show "Horizons, Where the Sea Meets the Sky" in the 90s, which met with critical acclaim for over 14 years and more than 4,000 performances, along with an IMAX Theatre, the Ali'i Luau, and an extensive $1.4-million shopping plaza.

When the Center geared up for its 40th anniversary, it spent over a million dollars in improvements to the front entrance. Hand-carved replicas of voyaging canoes and mini-museum artifact displays now give visitors a glimpse of what's to come before they even pass through the front doors. Rapa Nui or Easter Island was added to complete the Polynesian Triangle, including an exhibit featuring moai statues created onsite by native artisans and creating a new home for the Alii Luau. To celebrate its fifth decade, PCC introduced a revitalized farm-to-table menu for the Luau, re-opened the Hawaii Village, introduced a brand new interactive cinematic experience, and opened the Hukilau Marketplace in 2015. The Marketplace thoughtfully weaves in the stories of La'ie, including the history of the hukilau and celebrating the birthplace of the shaka and the steel guitar.

Over the years, PCC's commitment to traditional culture has won them countless awards, and they strive to give back to their community at every turn. Six decades later, PCC continues to revamp and expand the Park as necessary, always trying to keep itself at the forefront of the future, never forgetting its past, and always focusing on the guest experience.

"Since COVID, PCC has doubled down on improving the guest experience. We are capping our attendance and doing much more for the fewer guests we serve," says Chief Marketing Officer & Vice President Eric Workman. "From one-on-one attention and 'deeper' cultural experiences to dramatically expanded culinary options and more comfortable seating in our 2,400-seat Pacific Theater, we are determined to make PCC the absolute best experience possible for our guests.

curating an exceptional line-up of some of the most anticipated films from major festivals to our home audience here in Hawai'i," says HIFF Executive Director Beckie Stocchetti.

Many films this year showcase unique coping mechanisms, the different forms love can take, and human resilience in the face of oppressive forces and internal conflict. One of those films will be the world premiere of Uncle Bully's Surf Skool, also shown on opening night. Directed by Maui-resident Leah Warshawski, the film follows surf instructor Bull "Uncle Bully" Kotter as his small business is pushed to the brink after a global pandemic decimates the tourism industry across the Hawaiian Islands. No travel means no tourists or surf lessons, so Uncle Bully turns to his community - not for help or a handout, but to give back. Uncle Bully transfers etiquette from the line-up to life on land, from surf culture to respect for the ocean to genuine kindness.

Soon after the completion of this documentary, the deadliest U.S. wildfire in over a century engulfed West Maui. Devoted to his hometown of Lahaina, Uncle Bully stepped up again to aid his resilient community. Warshawski reconnected with Uncle Bully to capture his unwavering bravery and continue his story. Realizing the enormity of the situation, Leah and her team have been on the ground in Lahaina shooting new footage that will be added as a coda to the film, post-wildfire, to capture the journeys of remembrance, recovery, resilience, and rebuilding in the community. In light of the recent Maui tragedies, the film will be screened free as a Special Presentation of HIFF43, followed by a panel and extended Q&A session with the cast and crew from Maui who will participate in a comprehensive after-film discussion to raise relief support for various #MauiStrong initiatives and the Maui community. The film will be shown on the opening night of HIFF43 followed by a panel and extended Q&A session with filmmakers and cast to amplify these voices and raise relief support for the Maui community.

"HIFF has always been a place of convening and conversation for Hawaii's community, thought-leaders, and the international creative industry. From the devastating fires on Maui to the actors and writers strikes nationwide, we are here to serve, inspire, and connect our community," said Beckie Stocchetti. "At HIFF, we strongly adhere to our community, and we have worked collaboratively to create an incredible slate of short and feature films to showcase the resiliency, care, and creativity we all experience living in Hawai'i. We are acutely aware of how powerful cinema and media is as a tool to unify, and to reshape perspectives of our culture. Our identities are fortified by the stories we tell and the connections we forge. We are proud to present films from a variety of perspectives that serve as springboards to a brighter, more vibrant future."

"NYAD," the true story of marathon swimmer Diana Nyad will have its Hawaii premiere on October 18 at Consolidated Ward 16 Theatres. Photo: HIFF.

HIFF43 presents two Centerpiece Galas on the same night in a true celebration of international cinema. NYAD, the first narrative feature from Oscar® winning documentary filmmakers Elizabeth Chai Vasarhelyi and Jimmy Chin (Free Solo), is a biopic on 64-year-old marathon swimmer Diana Nyad (played with gusto by Annette Bening) in her journey to become the first person ever to swim from Cuba to Florida. Two-time Academy Award winner Jodie Foster portrays her coach. The next HIFF43 Centerpiece Gala is the U.S. Premiere of the riveting South Korean disaster epic Concrete Utopia, directed by Tae-hwa Eom and starring Korean superstars Lee Byung-hun and Park Seo-Joon, who will be seen next in the upcoming film The Marvels. This big-budget extravaganza chronicles survivors from a massive earthquake who struggle for a new life in Seoul.

On Friday the 13th, HIFF brings back its popular After Hours Shorts. These shorts range from the fun and hilarious, to the terrifying and odd.

HIFF has partnered with various organizations in presenting thematic spotlights, including the Asian American Diaspora, in honor of the first Koreans who immigrated to Hawaii 120 years ago, a new section sponsored by the Korean American Foundation of Hawaii (KAFH). There are also spotlights on Japan, Hong Kong, China and Taiwan with multiple films in each section.

Nia Tero sponsors the HIFF43 Indigenous Lens Showcase and expands HIFF's mission to spotlight new works from First Nations and Indigenous creatives, both in front and behind the camera. Supporting Indigenous creatives and creating networks between these filmmakers and our Pasifika and Kanaka Maoli filmmakers is paramount for HIFF.

Aside from feature-length programs, a collection of short films is also programmed annually. Some of those showcased include:

The Roof - A leaky roof. And the truth. After being sent to stay with their grandfather, a Northern Cheyenne teen discovers a connection to their family and community in a way they never thought possible. From Kanaka Maoli and Oahu-based director Alexander Bocchieri. The Roof was funded through Disney's Launchpad Short Film Program.

The Road - The story of how a controversial road project through a Wildlife Refuge along Alaska's Aleutian chain has impacted the lives of the local indigenous community from director Cale Green.

HIFF43's annual Green Screen, presented by the HEI Charitable Foundation, highlights new fiction and non-fiction features and short films that embed the urgent and critical theme of the climate crisis across a large swath of fiction and non-fiction storytelling genres. For the second year, the Festival will present the best environmental shorts from across the globe eligible for the Deep Blue Environmental Shorts Award presented by the U.S. Department of Energy's Water Power Technologies Office.

The HIFF43 Shorts Jury will choose the Grand Prize winner, who receives a cash prize of $5,000. Some of the environmental shorts that will be competing for this award include:

Our Children's River - The Kofan indigenous community in the Ecuadorian rainforest has been bearing the brunt of the effects of colonization for the last several hundred years and is now threatened by large energy companies that aim to extract resources from their territory.

Rising Nations - Tuvalu, a tiny island nation stands at the epicenter of the climate crisis. Unless the international community acts urgently, Tuvalu and other Pacific Atoll island nations face complete inundation of their lands via rising sea-level. This short film introduces the urgency of this existential crisis of nearly unimaginable proportions, the resilience of the Pacific people determined to fight, and the growing international effort in support of them.

Burning of the Gods - With his island at risk from industrial tourism and environmental degradation, a boy travels back in time to reconnect with his ancestors.

In addition to film screenings, HIFF offers educational programs and workshops for aspiring filmmakers and film enthusiasts. These programs may include panel discussions, masterclasses, and filmmaking seminars. Beginning this year, a newly launched industry pipeline program, HIFILM, will offer panels, masterclasses, and workshops with a specific focus on exploring new pathways to sustainable careers in the creative content industry based in Hawaii, both on production set and remotely. This includes some real time frank discussions about what happens when Hollywood goes on strike as it is now. HIFF stands in alignment with SAG/WGA, and because of the strike going on now, the focus of conversations will regard the support of local creatives and building careers in Hawaii/Pacific. HIFF will speak with local crew members about their past and how it applies to their lucrative career in Hollywood in an informative session moderated by location manager and producer Kent Matsuoka on October 14th at the Entrepreneur's Sandbox.

This year's Closing Night Film is The Boy and the Heron, the highly anticipated new film from the legendary Academy Award-winning Hayao Miyazaki, co-founder of Japan's celebrated animation house, Studio Ghibli. 12-year-old Mahito struggles to settle in a new town after his mother's death. However, when a talking heron informs Mahito that his mother is still alive, he enters an abandoned tower in search of her, which takes him to another world.

Over the years, HIFF has grown into an essential event in both the local and international film calendar, attracting filmmakers, industry professionals, and film enthusiasts worldwide. An incredible amount of care and dedication is put into the selection of films each year, and the Festival presents locals with a tremendous opportunity to see World, U.S., and Hawaii Premiere movies and mingle with some of the world's best filmmakers. Tickets for all films are on sale now. Individual tickets range from $12-$15 per screening, and Festival Passes are also available. To purchase tickets and/or peruse the complete line-up of films and events, head to at hiff.org.

Dining Dish

TBD... Hawaii permanently ended its Pop-Up Bar + Lounge at the Lotus Honolulu last month and has reopened as Arden. Michelin-trained and award-winning Chefs Makoto Ono and Amanda Cheng, previously at Senia, will be in charge of the kitchen, offering an exciting new menu that will be announced at the beginning of the month. Follow them @arden_waikiki for details. • Chef Hideo Ohmi has launched a 6-seat pop-up sushi counter adjacent to Artizen by MW in Velocity Hawaii featuring a $79 lunch omakase and a la carte sushi. Sushi Amaterasu will curate fine Japanese ingredients flown in several times a week, served alongside some of Hawaii's freshest seafood. The counter is reserved for those who order the lunch omakase featuring an appetizer, ten pieces of sushi, a handroll, miso soup, and atsuyaki tamago. A la carte sushi starting from $5 per piece will be available throughout the day, and Artizen patrons can add some nigiri sushi or handrolls to their order. Reservations for the omakase are to be made directly to Sushi Amaterasu (808) 570-4200. Open from Wednesday to Saturday, from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. For reservations or more information, call (808) 570-4200. • Speaking of sushi... Aloha Bento Co. opened downtown in the former Aloha Beer space in the CPB Tidepools building, offering sushi omakase-style. Open Monday to Friday 11 a.m. - 7 p.m. alohabento.com. • A new Korean-style sushi place called DEBU has opened on Ke'eamoku Street, offering mostly inari sushi. Open daily from 9 a.m. - 9 p.m. debuyubu.com. • Lastly, there's a new place for Southern food fans. Southern Love quietly opened at 753 Queen Street at the end of July. Serving home-style Southern favorites such as Fried Chicken, Po' Boys, Biscuits & Gravy, Shrimp & Grits, Chicken & Waffles, and they fly in Catfish directly from Louisiana. Get there early if you're craving Southern food, as it seems word has already gotten out and they tend to sell out of items daily. Oooh, and don't forget the cornbread. Food Guru Melissa Chang says its magical! Open Tuesday to Friday for lunch from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. and dinner from 4 to 8 p.m. It's open Saturday from 3 to 8 p.m. Find them on Instagram @southernlovehawaii.

Chef's Corner

Celebrity Chef Tyler Florence

Tyler Florence got his start with the Food Network in 1996, when it had only been around for three years. He excelled on TV and all the live events they used to have, and has been part of the family ever since. His show The Great Food Truck Race is on its 17th season. Hawaii trucks have done well, and Tyler says he keeps in touch with most of the winners from each season, so I wonder if he'll show up at some while he's here? He's in the process of opening a new steakhouse, Miller & Lux at the Four Seasons Hualalei later this year.

What is your first childhood food memory?

I grew up in Greenville, South Carolina, with a lot of relatives nearby. My dad was the youngest of 8 kids, so somebody was always celebrating something. We'd cook every week, pack up the food and head to one of their houses. My earliest memories revolve around those weekly gatherings, with tons of food and family.

When did you decide you wanted to be a chef?

I think I knew when I was 13. I was fascinated by what was happening on PBS. I loved Julia Child and the In the Kitchen block on Saturdays. My dad was great in the kitchen, so he's the one who would be in charge of cooking for all of those family gatherings, and I would help him. I knew I wanted to do this before it was an acceptable thing to do for a living. Chefs like Wolfgang Puck and Emeril Lagasse were just starting to pop up and somehow ended up on my radar. I got myself into a kitchen as soon as I was able to work.

What was your first job in the industry?

My first job working in restaurant was when I was 15, and I did it both because I loved cooking and because I wanted to buy a car. I worked full time for 3 or 4 years at the nicest restaurant in town, called The Fish Market. I started as a dishwasher and worked my way up to the line.

Who would you consider your mentor and why?

I've been really lucky to have several mentors, but one that stands out is Charlie Palmer, who I had the privilege of working under at his restaurant Aureole in New York, right out of culinary school.

How did you get your start on the Food Network?

I first started in 1996. I was 25 and working as the executive chef at a little Italian restaurant in New York City called Cibo. One night I walked off into the dining room to make the rounds, and met a Food Network executive. She wanted to know if I wanted to host a guest segment, and I said yes. I had grown up in a TV studio - my mom was a business manager for a local news station in Greenville, and she used to take us there on the weekends. So when I went to do my 1st segment, I was pretty comfortable out of the gate. I remember going back to the restaurant that night and having this epiphany that my life was about to change. They asked me back, and after doing 100s of those guest segments, I was asked to host my first show, Food 911, a few years later.

Being such a familiar face is a huge launching pad. How did you maximize that potential in the beginning?

I think in those early days of Food 911 we were filming so many episodes I was always busy and on the road. Pretty quickly I got my first book deal for "Real Kitchen," and toured to promote that. Food Network also had us going from city to city for these live events. The network was still young and there were about 25 of us who were part of the swell back then. This was all before social media, so you maximized potential by getting on the road and meeting fans. I was part of this epic crazy ride early on and I just kept saying yes. I think that drive to be busy and getting facetime with my audience is still part of the fabric of who I am today.

Do you have a favorite show you've been on?

The Great Food Truck Race is going into its 17th season, so it's hard to argue with that longevity, plus I've been able to see so much of the country while filming. But Food 911 was my first show, so it will always have a special significance for me.

How did the Great Food Truck Race first come about?

In 2010, food trucks were just starting to pop up in cities like LA and Portland. We thought it was an amazing thing to wrap a show around - nobody had done it yet. We got a little crazy out of the gate. In the first two or three seasons we crossed the entire country, and the prize was much bigger than it is now. But eventually we settled into a rhythm and we're still at it 17 seasons later. Now, it's hard to think about a time period when food trucks weren't popular, but when we launched it was a foreign concept. I feel really proud about it because we've taken a niche and blown it into a category. There are now something like 47,000 active food trucks and we were instrumental in helping to ignite that.

What do you think Hawaii trucks do so well?

The food feels like vacation flavors. As soon as you see a Hawaiian food truck show up, you know you're getting something fun and delicious that will immediately transport you.

How often do you visit the islands?

I used to go more sporadically for food events or vacation. Now, with the upcoming opening of our new steakhouse, Miller & Lux, at the Four Seasons Hualalei, I'm thrilled to be able to come more often. I'll be there at least four times a year. I'm excited about spending the next decade or so rediscovering what makes Hawaii special.

What's your favorite thing about Hawaii?

The people. There is just an incredible energy on these islands that you don't find on the mainland. Everyone is friendly, relaxed, helpful, and looking to connect and have a good time.

What do you have planned for this year's HFWF festival?

We're going to be bringing a taste of our new steakhouse, serving wagyu beef tenderloin with toasted popovers & green peppercorn béarnaise

Do you do a lot of these festivals?

I love them and try to do as many as I can. It's a chance to connect and cook for my community, & hang out w/people who love to bond over food.

You can meet Tyler Florence at this year's Hawaii Food & Wine Festival!

He will be at Crush'd at the Hawaii Convention Center on November 3rd. For tickets go to HFWF.me

PCC Turns 60

A peek at the opening sign.. and prices!

We are already consistently voted the Best Oahu Attraction and Best Oahu Luau, but our goal is to become even better, one tiny improvement at a time."

As for the future, Workman says in the next decade, you will also see an increased effort by PCC to share the aloha they have been blessed with and spread aloha with anyone and everyone they can around the world. "We don't yet know all the ways we are going to do this, but we have some great things in the works."

Part of spreading that aloha is caring for their community, including when they launched the Ohana Club, a loyalty program for kama'aina back in 2017. The program is free and provides locals with exclusive offers and deals, including a specials to celebrate their anniversary.

So what does that mean for you? This month PCC will invite its Club members to PCC's Birthday Celebration. This month-long celebration includes family activities, free prizes, PCC swag, and other fun opportunities. So, for any hospitality members with an Ohana Club membership, this is your chance to celebrate along with PCC while supplies last. None of the goodies below are available to your guests, but some things need to be just for us! All giveaways available while supplies last. If you're not an Ohana Club member, you can sign up at no charge at polynesia.com/residents.

October 2-7 - Special anniversary PCC T-shirt and swag giveaway.

October 16-21 - Ice cream and cookie giveaway.

October 25 - Common Kings concert from 7 to 10 p.m. Entry into the show is free, but you must reserve a ticket in advance. Tickets available online beginning October 2.

Happy Anniversary to the Polynesian Cultural Center. It's been an amazing ride, and we can't wait to see what you come up with next. Here's to sixty more!

PARK WEST Park West Fine Art Gallery has taken concierge events to a whole new level. They invited hospitality members and managers from surrounding properties to meet their new team, see the current Peter Max exhibit, and gifted every person that came with a framed artwork valued at over $1,000! On top of that, they raffled off gift cards to Ruth's Chris Steak House and a 7-day cruise on Celebrity Cruise Lines!! Offering artwork for every budget, Park West will extend a 10% discount to any guest that mentions you referred them. 859-4871.
