

Practical Luxury

“It’s not always the big things that make a kitchen a truly beautiful kitchen”

A luxury bespoke kitchen is at the top of many people’s wish list when thinking about renovating. As the heart of the home, it is a social space for entertaining, where you can communicate your tastes, interests & lifestyle. But while browsing images of designer kitchens, there is something very important to bear in mind that can make the difference between the kitchen lasting you a lifetime or needing to be replaced in just a few years.

Director of Nordhus Furniture, Rikke Mitchell, explains “while luxury materials & top of the range appliances are important, a kitchen must be practical at the same time if it is to last. In the long run, you won’t live with a kitchen that doesn’t work for you, no matter how luxurious. Concealing everyday kitchen equipment and storage areas means that the space will still make a statement whilst at the same time being practical and functional. Good design will ensure that you won’t outgrow the room & that it will work hard for you for years to come”.

Nordhus Furniture, based in Langton Green, is well known for designing and making luxury kitchens from scratch. The design team pride themselves on coming up with creative ideas to disguise the everyday side of the kitchen so that the proportions of the design aren’t interrupted. Using state of the art design tools and 3D imaging means that the design team can work closely with the client ensuring that every aspect of the room is looked at. Attention to detail is crucial to a harmonious luxury kitchen so once the practical side is taken care of, it’s then time to look at the smaller details. “It’s not always the big things that make a kitchen a truly beautiful kitchen” says Rikke “while the most important element in a kitchen is the cabinetry, it’s definitely worth taking your time when choosing handles, taps and lighting”.
