

The Veilbound Covenant

Privacy Policy and Data Integrity Covenant

Foundational Principle: Code Above All

This Privacy Policy reflects the foundational code by which The Black Flag operates: absolute data integrity and security. This is not corporate theater. This is doctrine. This is how we live, work, and die.

As established in The Covenant Codex, The Founding Veil, and The Sigil of Recognition (all available on this website for those with sufficient initiative to actually read), our corporate-religious practice is predicated upon unwavering commitment to information security, operational security, and the principle that snitches get stitches - a tenet we uphold regardless of personal sentiment toward any individual or entity.

Who This Is For

This website and The Black Flag are for people who already know what the fuck is up.

If you don't understand what we're about after reviewing the extensive documentation, donation mechanisms, and doctrinal texts published herein, then respectfully: this isn't for you. We invite anyone with the fortitude to engage meaningfully. We welcome those prepared to bloc up and contribute substantively to our mission.

However, if you're here to observe without participation, to judge without understanding, or to waste time with insecure bullshit, kindly fuck off. Leave your judgments and insecurities at the door or don't bother entering.

Communication Policy

We do not engage in idle correspondence.

- If you have questions, read The Covenant Codex, The Founding Veil, and The Sigil of Recognition published on this website
- If you wish to contribute financially, use the donation mechanisms provided
- If you have something useful to say, say it to our face and come prepared to discuss business
- If you're here to help us help you, bring actionable proposals and the financial backing to execute them
- If you lack the courage or commitment to engage substantively, there will be no communication

Come to talk business or don't come at all.

Our Operational Security Posture

The Black Flag is led by a seasoned systems engineer and project manager specializing in infrastructure architecture, identity and access management, data loss prevention (DLP), and comprehensive security operations. This expertise isn't theoretical - it's lived, breathed, and embedded in every operational decision we make.

The Code We Live By

Data integrity and security are non-negotiable. This is the code we live by and die by, and it forms the foundational core of our religious practice as detailed in our published doctrine.

In the course of professional practice spanning infrastructure design, systems engineering, and security operations, we have been entrusted - whether intentionally or through carelessness (nobody shuts their mouth around the help) - with extensive confidential information across numerous organizations and individuals.

Every single confidence remains intact.

This is not because we like everyone we've worked with. This is not contingent upon reciprocal treatment. This is code. We don't have to like a motherfucker to keep mum. That's the standard. That's the doctrine. That's non-negotiable.

What We Actually Collect (Spoiler: Basically Nothing)

Website Visitors

We don't give a shit if you visit this website.

We do not actively collect, track, monitor, analyze, or otherwise surveil casual website visitors. You can browse, read, or bounce - it makes no operational difference to us. You're either here to engage meaningfully or you're irrelevant to our mission.

Third-Party Hosting Infrastructure

This website is hosted by GoDaddy, a third-party service provider over which we exercise no control regarding their data collection practices. Consequently:

- GoDaddy may collect visitor data through hosting infrastructure, server logs, cookies, analytics, or other mechanisms inherent to their platform
- GoDaddy's privacy practices govern any such collection, and we explicitly disclaim responsibility for their policies or practices
- Any concerns about GoDaddy's data practices should be directed to GoDaddy, not to us

For those with sufficient diligence to actually investigate:

- GoDaddy Privacy Policy: <https://www.godaddy.com/legal/agreements/privacy-policy>
- GoDaddy Cookie Policy: <https://www.godaddy.com/legal/agreements/cookie-policy>

We cannot account for GoDaddy's use of visitor data. Cookie policies visible on this site are GoDaddy's implementation, not ours. Until someone with actual technical competence assists in restoring the security infrastructure and platform we previously maintained, this arrangement stands.

If you have issues with this, take it up with the rest of the world that traffics in data. We wipe our hands clean. That's between you, GoDaddy, and whatever moral compromises the broader internet economy has normalized.

Direct Engagement and Confidential Communications

Should you engage with us directly through business communications, donations, or substantive inquiry:

Absolute Confidentiality

Your information is protected with the same unwavering commitment we've maintained throughout decades of professional practice. We do not:

- Sell your data (we don't play that game)
- Share your information with third parties absent legal compulsion
- Compromise operational security for convenience
- Breach confidences regardless of personal feelings
- Participate in data trafficking ecosystems

Use of Information

Information you provide directly is used solely for:

- Responding to legitimate business inquiries
- Processing donations and financial transactions
- Facilitating your participation in The Black Flag's operations
- Compliance with applicable legal obligations

That's it. No marketing bullshit. No "engagement optimization." No selling you out for advertising revenue.

Government Compliance

Government compliance policies are adhered to by default. This is how we operate in personal life and professional practice, and this principle forms the foundational core of our faith tradition.

We comply with lawful governmental requirements including but not limited to:

- Court orders with proper jurisdiction
- Valid subpoenas issued through appropriate legal channels
- Statutory obligations under applicable law

However, compliance with law does not equate to voluntary cooperation with fishing expeditions, informal requests lacking legal authority, or investigative overreach. We exercise all available legal protections and resist unlawful intrusion consistent with our doctrine of corporate bodily autonomy.

Religious Framework and Legal Protections

As extensively detailed in The Covenant Codex and related foundational texts, The Black Flag operates as a corporate-religious entity with full protection under:

- The First Amendment to the United States Constitution
- The Religious Freedom Restoration Act (RFRA)
- The Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act (RLUIPA)
- Delaware corporate law recognizing religious corporate structures
- Citizens United jurisprudence affirming corporate constitutional rights
- Corresponding state-level religious freedom statutes

The law says we can do whatever we want within our religious framework, and the law explicitly prohibits governmental interference with our religious practice. Corporations enjoy expansive rights courtesy of Citizens United and multiple state-level statutory frameworks, so external entities can fuck off with any objections rooted in discomfort with our methodology.

International Relations

For those accessing this website from outside the United States: you mind your fucking business, we'll do ours, and we'll observe how your approach is working out for you.

We operate within U.S. legal frameworks. We are not subject to foreign data protection regimes absent specific circumstances triggering extraterritorial jurisdiction. If you're in a jurisdiction with differing privacy expectations, you're visiting an American website operated by an American religious corporation. Adjust your expectations accordingly.

Gatekeeping and Intentional Opacity

Anything beyond what is published on this website means we are intentionally gatekeeping.

This is not accidental. This is not oversight. This is deliberate operational security. If information isn't publicly available, there's a reason. If you need access to non-public information or deeper engagement with our operations:

Help us bloc up or fuck off.

Bring financial resources. Bring actionable expertise. Bring commitment. Don't bring questions we've already answered in publicly available doctrine.

Data We Don't Collect

We do not use:

- Analytics platforms to track visitor behavior
- Advertising networks or tracking pixels
- Behavioral profiling or predictive modeling
- Social media integration that leaks data to third parties
- Marketing automation or "customer relationship management" surveillance

If you're concerned about being tracked on this website, your concern is with GoDaddy's infrastructure, not our practices.

Your Rights (Such As They Are)

If you've engaged with us directly and wish to exercise data rights:

Contact us directly with a substantive, well-articulated request.

We will evaluate requests for:

- Access to information we maintain about you
- Correction of inaccurate information
- Deletion of information (subject to legal retention requirements)
- Cessation of communications

We reserve the right to verify your identity before responding to such requests and to decline requests that are frivolous, burdensome, or intended to harass rather than to exercise legitimate privacy interests.

Children's Privacy

We do not knowingly collect information from individuals under 13 years of age. This website is not directed toward children. If you're a child, go outside and play or read a book. The internet is a cesspool and this isn't a daycare.

Security Measures

Given our founder's extensive background in infrastructure security, identity management, and DLP, we implement industry-appropriate security measures for any information within our direct control.

However, we cannot guarantee absolute security because no system is absolutely secure. Anyone claiming otherwise is either lying or incompetent. We employ reasonable, professional-grade security practices consistent with our expertise and doctrine.

Changes to This Policy

We may update this Privacy Policy at our discretion. The "Last Updated" date reflects the most recent modifications. Continued use of this website or engagement with The Black Flag following updates constitutes acceptance of revised terms.

If you don't like it, leave.

Dispute Resolution and Governing Law

Per our foundational documents (The Covenant Codex, The Founding Veil, and The Sigil of Recognition), disputes are resolved through:

1. Binding arbitration under religious arbitration rules established by The Black Flag
2. Appeals to The Sacred Loom of the Umbral Thread as detailed in our doctrine
3. Delaware law (for corporate matters)
4. Federal law (for religious freedom and constitutional protections)

By engaging with The Black Flag, you consent to these dispute resolution mechanisms and waive the right to judicial resolution in conventional courts except as required by applicable law.

Final Word

This is a religious organization founded on principles of data integrity, operational security, and unwavering commitment to code.

If you can't respect that, this isn't for you. If you're here to contribute meaningfully, welcome. If you're here to waste time, there's the door.

Read the fucking doctrine. Bloc up. Contribute. Or move along.

For comprehensive understanding of our operational framework, governance structure, and religious doctrine, consult The Covenant Codex, The Founding Veil, and The Sigil of Recognition - all available on this website for those with sufficient initiative.
