Golden Rules

1.	I prefer tattooing too shallow rather than too deep. I know that if I tattoo too deep, the brows will appear blue and won't have a chance to show their true color. Additionally, after the first layers of pigment sloughs off, my client will have blue brows.
2.	As a general rule, I will make two passes for each hair stroke. In most cases, 2 slow passes with the tip of the needle produces good results. Sometimes, one pass is enough, but sometimes tough skin need 3-4 passes for the pigment to enter the skin properly.

3.	I won't choose colors that are too dark. The best practices technique is to darken during a touch up

	I will never create something I'm not proud of. The client should like the shape of the brows, but I'll kindly refuse clients in cases that I don't want them walking around saying I did these.
1	0. I'll enjoy going to work. The day I feel like this industry is not for me, I'll put the machine down and concentrate on something else.
