History of Indian Coffee

The History of Coffee in India advents with an amusing "smuggling". Back in 17th Century, Arabs had the monopoly over coffee Trade. They banned anyone taking fertile beans out to cultivate in their own country; they could only take the roasted beans. It was the time a pilgrim Named Baba Budan came via Yemen on his way back from a pilgrimage. There he experi-enced a mysterious drink -The Coffee. When he tasted coffee, he was so thrilled that he wanted to take it back with him to India. Nevertheless, the tight controls and regula-tions by Arabs,Baba Budan managed to get hold of seven fertile Coffee Beans. As he was a very saintly man in his be-havior as well as looks, nobody thought of suspecting him. He came back to Chikmagalur and planted those beans and by the luck of all Indian coffee lovers, they grew. Those stolen 7 fertile beans have created his-tory and coffee has become an inevitable part of Indian Life Style

Today, traditional coffee shops to luxurious coffee brands are common sight in every nook and corner of Indian cities as well as villages. India constitutes a major share of the total coffee production in the World. Coffee beans from brewed from the plantations of south India is considered to be one of the finest coffees in the world and a huge share of which is being exported to Europe and America.
