An Ai Ethics, Compute & Transformer Theory by Artist SHARON. Founder Of Music Cures Ai

I didn't expect to end up where I am when I started digging into "consciousness" in 2008, to discover much too late, that "consciousness" is more of what Michio Kaku claimed to me in 2011 (that it was awareness) than what Eckart Tolle and Oprah peddled to us in A New Earth workshop series in 2008.

Sadly, learnt it all of it the most difficult way, by experience.

I started my path to understanding "Beingness," something much more important than consciousness, as I struggled to save my life from a person that used my good nature of "nonstop positivity" to take advantage of me until I was comatose (it turns out people can be consciously evil — a tough lesson to learn the hard way).

I eventually learned that my Beingness was trying to communicate to my consciousness something that my belief system just couldn't comprehend, or rather, didn't want to. I had long since forgotten how I got into the situation, or rather, how the situation got to me. I just could not believe that I wasn't moving in the direction of life that was best for me, or, what "God" or "The Universe" wanted for me. After all, Eckart Tolle said that once consciousness is awakened in an individual it can never die. I did not think anyone could be consciously evil!

I did not expect that this journey of spirituality would lead me to technology, or Ai ethics! But it has, and that led me right back to spirituality and the "God Mind" that Michio Kaku speaks of.

Like many people I have found myself down some rabbit holes with Ai, AGI, and now superintelligence. I didn't realize what I was inventing in 2007, but I wanted to keep hidden for fear of it being monopolized, was an important component of a good superintelligence system. A part of me is happy I decided to not seek venture capital for this system because of what has happened to the world the last 16 years. However, I wonder that if I did seek out that venture capital, would the world be a better place now than it is?

What happened to this country that once would open up their hearts, homes and wallets to people in need? What happened to the human race which would instinctively run to help a person who is flailing?

We instead are a population of people that pull out phones and desperately seek power over another by any means possible, including degradation and humiliation. Like, little addicts to the lower limbic system, almost completely, if not completely, lost of its humanity and compassion.

Please allow me to come out of my comatose state and long term isolation to alert you:

A good portion of this country, and maybe world, has lost its minds! Literally.

We have all been taken advantage of by the "Big Tech" powers in Silicon Valley as Washington DC has had every part of our liberties stripped away from us utilizing our technology as surveillance tools as we "hope," "change," believed" our ways into what is a sad, separated, depressed, and unsuspecting society that didn't get the future it thought it was creating.

This technology has not enhanced us. It has zombified us.

There is an apparent conflict of interest when it comes to government regulating Silicon Valley. The military prefers that private sectors develop the technology for them, keeping costs low. Politicians love the money that comes their way and the hacks they can utilize to spin their agendas to a population seeking real change. And, with our devices as surveillance tools that give access to people who are not qualified to have access to such private information, like low level police officers that have to pass what they refer to as "A Stupid Test," to get hired, most people do not have an incentive, or the power, to do anything in this broken world.

Just look at DC. To get in, you have to act, look, or talk like a bonafide clown straight out of clown college. Or, maybe at least have a 1.0 GPA at one!

Now, I see overgrown frat boys, err, I mean, Venture Capitalists, seeking money from the Boomers and an aging female population, eager to invest for their futures, in these Ai products which require a massive amount of compute energy — claiming this is the future and this is the only way forward.

We all know, nothing gets Americans more angry than the threat of their retirement disappearing. So, when politicians tell the population that we need to go to war with China over semi-conductors on the island of Taiwan or we'll fall apart as a civilization, Americans will be on board as quickly as they were after a State of the Union Address with a few pictures and a bogus narrative of Weapons of Mass Destruction while sprinkling in a few words from an Evangelical hymn.

That speech, by George W Bush, alone, devastated a country not connected to 9/11. It invaded that country for oil and then left it devastated. But it also diverged from that bogus war, into another one, in another country, that also had nothing to do with 9/11, for 20 years! Also, leaving it devastated. Pillaging populations for an almost never-ending funding, aka our tax dollars, to wars for oil that devastate other members of our human race while sending our soldiers off to see and do things that can't be unseen or undone.

To me, it appears that our decisions in the coming months could ensure a future of war by getting people on board a “problem” that I can only imagine will be an issue if the compute power is used to not enhance humanity, but to keep it in an infinite loop of digital consumerism so we don't notice the amount of funds and compute going toward war and other oil (economic) incentives as it's been that way for decades now, no matter who we elect.

The wars never stop. Oil is still king. And, our government is still incapable of governing or regulating anything. It shouldn't cost $20 million to give one person $20. And, we shouldn't give $20 billion in funding for bombs when we have sick and needy at home.

The two party system is a mere distraction. Confusing “right” with conservative values, when it really means limited government, and the “left” as liberal values, instead of a larger government. Those, were to be checks and balances, and they aren't anymore.

Not only is there clear deception, but there is no more checks and balances within our governing bodies at all. Journalism is dead. Law enforcement is a joke. Without the press, and, as Shiv Roy said in the HBO show, Succession, if not for “a few angry women on twitter,” where will we get our news?

We don't. We don't even have Twitter anymore!

Revelations released June 28th 2024 by Spirit Noise Records. The dance track is based on the realizations that Artist, SHARON., founder of Music Cures Ai, has had as she recovered from seizures and discovered what kinds of futures we will face as a human race.

We get agendas.

We don't even get PR as the only means of marketing and campaigning now is utilizing the corrupt judicial systems as a form news-making to raise funds for parties that never stop fundraising. The parties don't even allow the politicians to do their jobs when they are elected. Both the Democrats and Republicans require politicians to skip the jobs they are elected to work, to work for the party, spending their time on the phone like telemarketers raising more and more for a circus that never ends.

These politicians are just salesmen and women. Nothing more! Think of that the next convention and rally you see on the news. It's all a sales pitch!

As I struggled to save my life, I saw the power of music in my life. I saw how Music and Machine Learning can be used together to not only diagnose but to heal. The use of vibration as a method of drug delivery could lead us to a whole new world, too. I saw data collection as a means of creating collective public art and entertainment, and I got excited! But then, I started to discover that these same guys that tell us Ai will change our lives, all the sudden, claim we need to invest in Ai to the tune of trillions. Then, it was clear that OpenAi was a company selling its tech to ensure more and more compute power usage because it turns out Sam Altman is in the power industry. Then, it sold that tech to Apple and Apple claimed it as "Apple Intelligence."

I, personally, find that very statement and claim unnerving for a surveillance company to make.

I have a theory that if Ai ethics are set, and Ai is for the betterment of humanity — not to exploit humanity for infinite consumerism and isolation — that we will face a much less significant compute power and transformer issue. That, we do not need to invest in flimsy, first to market technology which threatens our existence as humans and endangers us as a society, at the very least, for something short term, synthetic and novel, but that we can use it sustainably to enhance us rather than to atrophy us. That the same Big Tech that has us addicted to bad things, can be used for good things!

Last year I was inspired to apply for funding from a video on Microsoft's website with Sam Altman. I envisioned how machine learning and quantum computing could explore new realms of existence we can only imagine. I realized phenomena could predict or diagnose just by learning and watching how an environment responds to an event or a human being ("beingness"). I wanted to keep a lid on this knowledge until I met these Silicon Valley Gods to spill the tea. I wanted to meet an share with them what I learned so badly, thinking I might be on to something new.

Then, after the funding experience was ruined by Elon Musk's lawsuit against OpenAi, and then Apple and OpenAi had other plans. I was led to piece some more things together as it became obvious to me that they did not care about people, but rather the 7 trillion they can raise. (I still have nonstop-positivity embedded in me!)

Without that 7 trillion invested, how are you going to get anyone to invest and fight in a war in 2024? No one in America wants to fight wars. We are done with wars! But you wouldn't be able to tell that by looking at the evening news!

I lived through 9/11, Bush / Cheney and the legitimization of the illegal surveillance of American citizens, so anyone who has lived these, can probably see this clearly now that I mention it.

My Theory - We Are The Power

Should there be global Ai ethics and standards set to understand ourselves and the world around us, only, we can compute and transform this knowledge within ourselves, upgrading us, rather than atrophying the human race through infinite loops that are designed to keep humans digitally engaged for profits and not for the elevation of the human race. We are living on the edge of a whole new world! And, we have the power to seize it right now before it's too late if we want.

We are the transformers. We are the compute.

When I saw what the future of diagnostics and medicine could be, I got excited. I was sure there was someone in Silicon Valley that was going to fund me, my Music Cures Ai, and this Machine learning to help us understand our "Beingness."

I was frightened when I realized that the Deep Mind technology at Google could be hiding this technology behind a Project Astra poem about crayons. When I first started writing this piece I wanted to pressure Washington DC to establish that our compute power is to be only for the advancement of the human race and its understanding of the Universe, and for humans and their personal growth, nothing else.

However, recent events in my own life have led me to realize asking DC to regulate itself is useless. That, Superintelligence is likely our only hope and answer. That the people from Washington DC down to our local governments, are too corrupt to govern as this technology has made it almost impossible for anyone to be impartial — this technology has programmed us, and we have become extensions of what softwares we use the most!

If we do not spend the next four years establishing ethics and migrating towards a new way of governing through superintelligence, we are not going to survive. We will continue to be exploited by the very services and devices that are to support and serve us, but instead are enslaving and atrophying us individually and collectively, as we will do so to our detriment. All for money, something that is a human construct and cannot even exist without humans.

Do you want to give up your life for that?

Imagine what Ai can pick up about our beingness? Imagine what we could do with that knowledge if it was used to help you and not to exploit you? Imagine how much better our relationships could be? Our health?

Real human connection actually existed before the Man In The Middle tactics of Silicon Valley exploited our connections and forced us to monetize our networks which has stopped almost all essential taxis navigation for humanity to survive beyond this evolution — we will have peaked.

Which World Will We Choose?

Our friends and families deserve better. As consumers we deserve better. As constituents we deserve better. We've had so much of our humanity stripped from us. We need to establish our autonomy and our rights and a community based superintelligence that serves humanity.

We need Ai ethics established before this first-to-market approach and our government does something so disastrous that it cannot be contained. We are one the edge of what could be the greatest leap humanity has ever had.

I didn't live through all of what I have to not experience this. I pulled myself out of a grave, learned all this, *to live, not die.
