The Writer

Dad makes books. He is a printer.

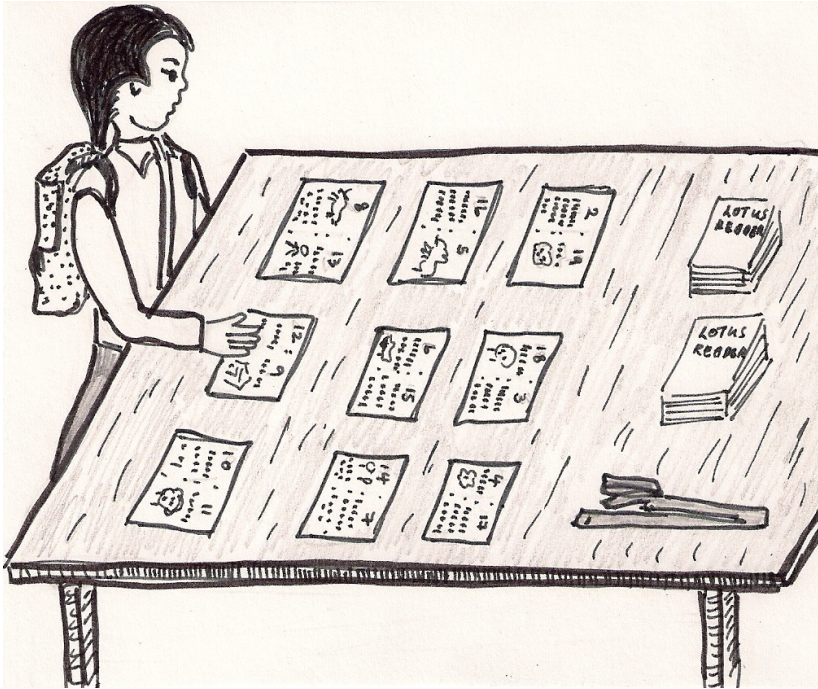

Pema goes to see Dad at work.
He printed school books today.

Mrs. Jones comes into the shop.
Hello Mr Sogyal, how are you?
Hello Mrs Jones, how are you?
This is Pema. She is ten years old.

Mrs Jones is a writer, Pema.
She writes books for children.
She writes the words and she draws.
I print the books.

I want to be a writer when I am big, Mrs Jones.

You can be a writer now, Pema.

Can you draw?

Yes, I can draw a little.

Will you write a story for me,
Pema?

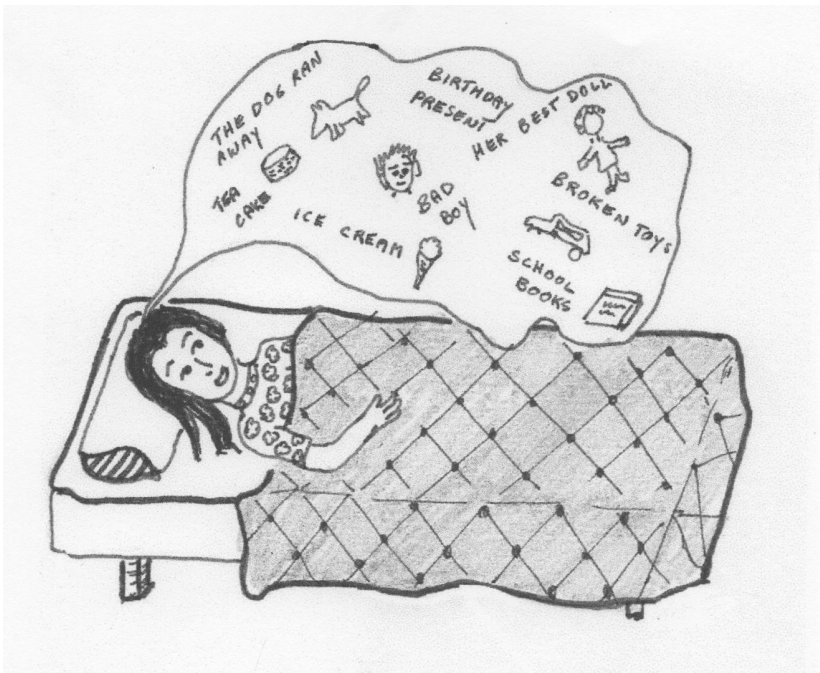

The words must not be too hard.
They must not be too long.
And I want many drawings.

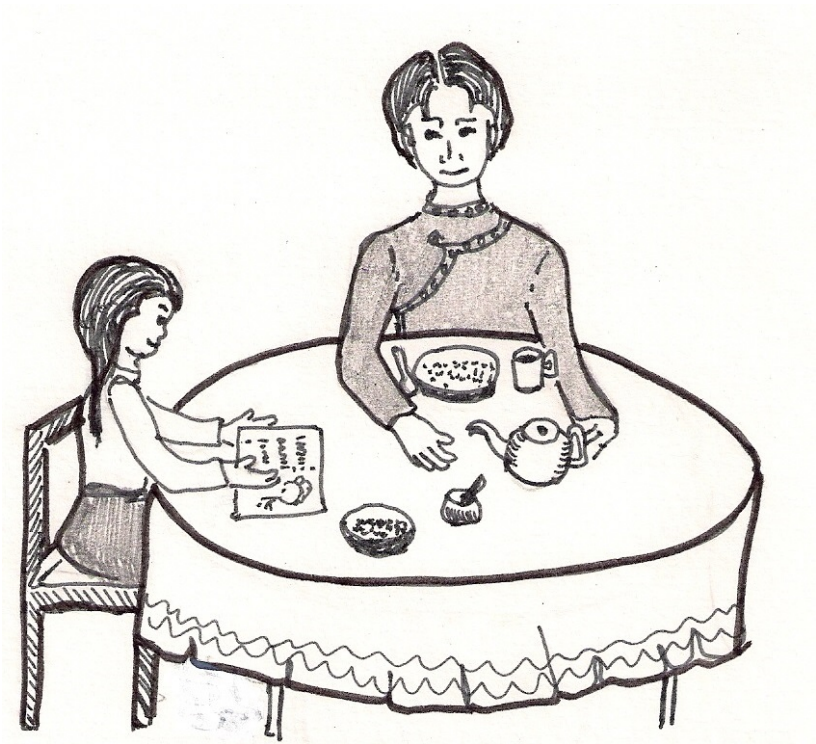

They are all in bed, but Pema cannot sleep.

There are too many stories in her head.

There are too many drawings in her head.

My book is ready, Dad.
The words are not hard and not long.
I made many drawings.
Will you give it to Mrs Jones?

Dad comes home from work.
Here is your book, Pema.
Mrs Jones is very happy with it.
I have printed it. This is yours.

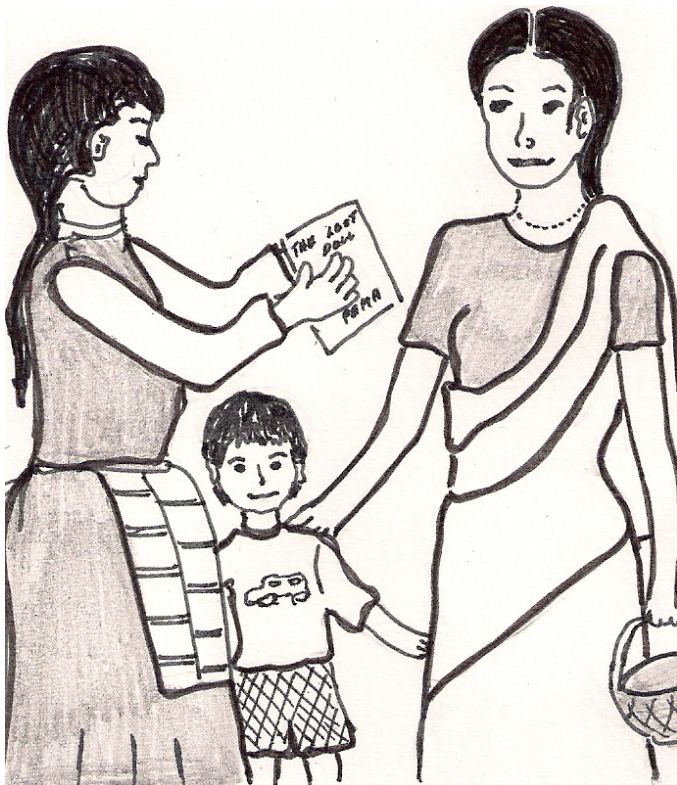

Mom is also very happy with the book.

She goes to see Mrs Sharma.

My Pema wrote this book.

My Pema is a writer.

Nam also wants to be a writer.
Nam cannot write very well.
But he can tell good stories.
Pema writes them down for him.

Dad goes to see his friends.
Look, I have two writers in the house.
It is good that I am a printer.
