Submitting Advertising Art

Image Format and Resolution.

All images in the East Capers are printed in grayscale. For your image to print clearly with enough detail, the original file resolution needs to be at least 300 dpi. The greater number of squares or pixels per square inch of your image, the more detail or resolution your image has. Web site will be in full color.

What Determines an Image's Resolution?

Short answer - the way it was acquired. If using a digital camera, set the resolution as high as your camera will permit. If using a graphic design program, insure the file is saved to at least 300 dpi.

When an image is saved on your computer, you will typically be able to hover over the file or view its details to see the pixel dimensions. An image from your digital camera might be 2048 pixels x 1536 pixels. To determine what size you can print this image at 300 dpi divide each side by 300 - this number will be the printable dimension (in inches) of your image at 300 dpi.

$1,050/300 = 3.500$ (8.9 cm.)

$1,050/300 = 3.500$ (8.9 cm.)

This means your image printed at 300 dpi will measure 3.5 x 3.5 inches (8.9 x 8.9 cm.). Your image can be printed at this size and smaller without sacrificing its print quality. If you try to print it at a larger dimension, your image quality will most certainly go down. Once you have determined if your image can be sized to the dimensions of your ad, you'll need to have them sized and saved to at least 300 dpi.
