INT. ICE CREAM SHOP - EARLY EVENING

PEOPLE of all ages stand scattered throughout the ice cream shop. Eric and George sit at a table with School Power Mac Today, other magazines and papers, scattered all around.

Eric reads silently then looks up.

ERIC

Okay. Here it is. Contest. Win $10,000. For my college housing deficit...We need to create a program that teaches math, reading or writing to students, in a unique way. And interesting?

GEORGE

That shouldn't be hard.

ERIC

Okay. Let's put our heads together.

George smiles as he literally places his head next to Eric's.

ERIC

Knucklehead—Remember our goal here to help students—

GEORGE

And win five thousand G's!

Eric twirls pencil in hand.

ERIC

Five thousand each, but who's keeping record?

Eric looks up, breaking pencil.

ERIC (CONT'D)

But my computer is too old and yours' is not working.

GEORGE

How about using the ones in the library?

ERIC

Yeh. Maybe Star Trek's library. We need a high-powered machine. How about the latest Power Mac?

Eric jots notes with another pencil.

GEORGE

What about the graphic standards?

ERIC

We don't need that with logical lessons.

GEORGE

Oh yes we do. I don't know what planet or decade you're in now.

Eric continues writing, stops, then suddenly looks up.

ERIC

Man! Can't—Hey, "G"?

GEORGE

Yeh, "E"?

ERIC

Let's finish this where we think best.
