Souza Hauls in Marlin
Members of the marlin-fishing fleet fared equally well their last week. According to results from around the island, Eddie Souza, Jr. on his little cruiser Mokone which he recently converted to an inboard-outboard at the Anchorage Marina where he works with his father. This fish vaults him into third Big Game Fishing Club's Fall Halibut. The event has two more days to run—October 30-31. Young Souza was fishing off Waianae Bay with LeRoy Nappenberg when he landed the marlin. Coming home he bagged a 47-pound mahimahi, largest female seen in months. Waianae coast, several marlin were landed by the skiff fleet, Howard Kiyama's Claire K accounted for a 120-pound early Saturday off Lualualei with Birc. Souza's Tiny L came up with a 140-pounder for a 120-pounder on the rod. Henry Chang's fish himself, his first of 1966. The skipper landing the Sugano and Henry Malo. On board were regulars, the Sugano and Henry Malo. Pointe Okimoto's Alii Kai accounted for an 80-pounder. Kipuh. Okimoto worked the Kaena Point ledge in the morning, picking up 48 kawakawa, a lot of fun on light reel.

Good Neighbor Policy Works
When Fred Hiedemann planned his current trip, he asked Eddie Souza Jr. of the Anchorage to take care of his cruise. Souza and his son Ed Jr. took it from time to time to keep it in shape. Young Eddie took it for a spin Sunday down the coast towards Haleiwa and came up with not one but a pair of marlin. Eddie landed a 100-pounder while Mike Kim came through with a lousy 570-pounder. Only marlin landed off Honolulu Sunday was a 120-pounder picked up by police detective Frank Roberts and wife Gladys on the little Gypsy off Ewa Beach. Skipper Cornelius Choy bagged a 185-pounder Saturday on Corone C 30 miles off Honolulu. Lucky angler was on Corone C 30 miles off Honolulu. Lucky angler was on Corone C 30 miles off Honolulu.

Fantastic Luck On Trip
Eddie Souza who operates The Anchorage marina on Kaneohe Bay tells of delivering Zedoc Brown's Keawiki a Kawaihale on the Big Island last weekend. Crewman for the crossing were son Eddie Jr. and son-in-law Gerry Carvalho. They had fantastic luck, arriving at the Big Island home port of the boat with all four flags flying for a clean sweep. With ahl, one and mahimahi already on board, they filled out the slam with a 140-pound marlin that struck shortly before they arrived at Kawaihale. . . Eddie Jr. making the catch. Up to the present, Brown has used a 31-foot Bertram deep-V fiberglass hull . . . for cruising and running back and forth to his beach home down the coast from Kawaihale. For the past few weeks, Souza has had the boat The Anchorage, converting it for use as a sport fisher man . . . and from the results of the first cross-channel trip, he did a good job. It was an auspicious start for Keawiki as a fishing cruiser.

Profitable Fishing Trip
Ed Souza and son Ed Jr. spent a profitable three days on their little sloop Mokutu fishing off Lanai, Maui. The long trip produced an excellent catch to boot. A 100-pound marlin caught off the Lanai cliffs by Ed. Although entered in the contest, they voluntarily qualified the fish when they elected to carefully handling to gaff after spotting a badly frayed spot on the line near the swivel. Veteran charter skippers began to think they were being up. Accused of robbing the small winter-sized marlin started to come for a party headed by C. E. Garber. Even smaller was a perfect little 24-pounder caught on Maysie, skippered by Gordon Wilkinson. Navy wahine Jo Eiles, a regular patron of the charter fleet, made the catch and will have it mounted.
