The Waco Project is a collaborative initiative to tell the stories that comprise our community's unique, complex, and diverse identity in order to connect and inspire us.

Started in 2018 by the Communications Co-op and funded by The City of Waco, The Greater Waco Chamber of Commerce and Waco Foundation, The Waco Project's small production team takes the input and suggestions received from community partners to our editorial team and, with their help, chooses and develops these stories into the pieces you see today.

Waco is the City we love and call home, and it is important to share these stories not only to tell who we are, but also to remind ourselves of the things that make us a great community.
