

The Black Bottom & Bootleg Booze

It's summer 1921 and in New York alcohol has been illegal for over a year. Hundreds of people flock to 'Duke's Place', one of the thousands of speakeasy clubs set up in the city since prohibition started. Amongst the guests tonight are 'Snake Eyes' Stallone, the multi-billionaire oil tycoon and his glamorous girlfriend Suzie Shimmer. He disappears outside for some fresh air but minutes later, the barman, comes rushing in – Old Snake Eyes is dead! Was it an accident? Was it murder? If so, who was brave enough to do the deed?

The Guest List...

Duke Diesel

The owner of 'Duke's Place' and friend of 'Snake Eyes'. He's a bootleg booze man and all the women adore him! He arrives at the club wearing his pin striped suit, trilby and he strokes his spiv moustache - he does this frequently as it drives the ladies wild!

Slinky Stallone

Daughter of old Snake Eyes and oil billionaire. She is a fiery character and is as fearless as her brother, Buzby, a gangster in NYC. She calls everyone 'baby' and flicks her long red curls throughout the night. She arrives wearing a black dress, black gloves, a black headband and feather and a long pearl necklace - she is a true victim of fashion.

Ritzy Razzmatazz

Jazz singer at the club and 'special friend' to Snake Eyes. She speaks in low husky tones and has the voice of an angel. She arrives wearing a long red evening dress, her long auburn curls are worn loose and ruby red lipstick completes the look. Her cigarettes and holder are close by - she is a true starlet!

Luigi Lasagne

Owner of the 'Black Bottom Club' across the way from 'Duke's Place' and a regular customer to Duke's Place. A typical Italian, he is hot headed and gesticulates wildly throughout the night. He has very curly black hair which contrasts with his stark white DJ and black trousers.
