NARRATIVE

THE CURRENT HOUSING SITUATION IN GHANA

According to a current report by the World Bank, Ghana alone, has an estimated housing deficit of 1.7 million units, which continues to grow at an alarming rate.

SIROCO INTERNATIONAL FINANCED PROJECT

- The current housing shortage is a major issue that has been plaguing the country for decades. With a population estimated of over 35 million people, there is a significant shortage of adequate and affordable housing options.
- One of the main contributing factors to this housing crisis is rapid urbanization. As more people move from rural areas to cities in search of better economic opportunities, the demand for housing increases exponentially. This has led to overcrowding in urban areas and informal settlements, with families living in cramped and unsanitary conditions. Another factor is the high cost of traditional construction methods.
- The vast majority of Ghanaians cannot afford to build or rent homes built with bricks and mortar due to the expensive materials and labor costs involved. This leaves many individuals and families living in substandard structures or struggling to pay exorbitant rental fees.
