Efoil Above All: Learn to Fly Above the Water

More than 10 years ago, Larry and Gina Nunnery discovered the thrill of foiling behind their ski boat on a Colorado lake. They eventually progressed to efoiling, and what began as an exciting hobby soon became a shared passion—and a business.

Recognizing that Lake Las Vegas offered the perfect setting, with its clean water and calm, no-wake conditions, Larry and Gina moved to the community and established Efoil Above All.

A retired airline transport pilot and certified Fliteboard instructor, Larry has traded flying above the clouds for teaching others to fly above the water. With an extensive efoil inventory and years of experience, he makes the sport look easy while providing patient, personalized instruction for beginners.

Lessons are offered behind Reflection Bay Golf Club and through the Lake Las Vegas Sports Club. When they aren't on the water, Larry and Gina remain active in the Lake Las Vegas community and can often be found playing pickleball or enjoying a round of golf together. Beyond teaching people to fly above water, Gina also enjoys her part-time passion of caring for other people's dogs, giving them plenty of love, attention, and exercise while their owners are away.

Whether you are looking for a new adventure or simply want to experience the excitement of gliding above the lake, Larry and Gina are ready to help you take flight with Efoil Above All.

Under the Surface:
Lake Mead: Challenges, Progress, and the Road Ahead

By James Schaedler

Lake Mead, formed by Hoover Dam on the Colorado River, is the largest reservoir in the United States by water capacity. Located in Nevada and Arizona, just 24 miles east of Las Vegas and minutes from Lake Las Vegas, it plays a vital role in supplying water and electricity throughout the Southwest.
As of June 30, 2026, Lake Mead's water level stood at approximately 1,044.68 feet above sea level, with the reservoir at roughly 30% capacity.
What would happen if Lake Mead were to dry up? The consequences would be severe. Hoover Dam would lose its ability to generate hydroelectric power, placing significant strain on the regional power grid. Millions of acres of farmland and major cities, including Las Vegas, Phoenix, and Los Angeles, would face serious water shortages.
Lake Mead is a critical lifeline for the Lower Basin states. It supplies drinking water, supports agriculture, and generates hydroelectric power for more than 40 million people across Nevada, Arizona, California, and parts of Mexico. Created by Hoover Dam, the reservoir serves as the primary storage and delivery point for Colorado River water under the Colorado River Compact.
The 1922 Colorado River Compact divided the river's water between the Upper Basin states of Colorado, New Mexico, Utah, and Wyoming and the Lower Basin states of Nevada, Arizona, and California.

Lake Mead's operations are governed by a series of agreements based on that compact.
According to the Bureau of Reclamation's June 15, 2026 report, Lake Mead is projected to drop to 1,040 feet above sea level during July 2026, matching the record low reached in July 2022. At that elevation, the reservoir is 189 feet below full pool. For comparison, "dead pool"—the point at which water can no longer pass through Hoover Dam—is 895 feet above sea level.
The Bureau's long-range projections are even more concerning. Lake Mead could decline another 30 feet over the next two years, reaching approximately 1,011 feet by May 2028. A record-low Rocky Mountain snowpack and unusually warm winter temperatures have resulted in historically poor spring runoff into the Colorado River Basin. Snowmelt from Colorado, Wyoming, and Utah normally replenishes the river and ultimately Lake Mead.
The Southwest has endured an ongoing "megadrought" since 2000, now recognized as the driest multi-decade period in at least 1,200 years, based on tree-ring records, soil moisture data, and streamflow measurements.
To help stabilize the river system, the Bureau of Reclamation has transferred 2.48 million acre-feet of water from Flaming Gorge Reservoir into Lake Powell while reducing releases from Lake Powell to Lake Mead through September 2026. Although these actions protect upstream storage, they also accelerate Lake Mead's decline and could reduce Hoover Dam's hydroelectric generating capacity by as much as 40%.

Lower water levels continue to affect recreation as well. Boat launching may become more difficult, marina access more limited, and reduced river flows could impact rafting and fishing throughout the Colorado River corridor.
Experts warn that another exceptionally dry year could leave both Lake Powell and Lake Mead with very limited usable storage, forcing the river system into run-of-the-river operations with little reserve water available. Such conditions would have far-reaching consequences for water supplies, agriculture, hydroelectric power, recreation, and the economies of the American Southwest.
Current operating guidelines for the Colorado River expire at the end of the 2026 water year. The seven basin states have yet to reach a long-term agreement on how the river will be managed after that deadline, although negotiations remain ongoing.

Living Grace Homes:
Giving Young Mothers Hope for a Brighter Future

For more than two decades, Living Grace Homes, a Henderson nonprofit organization, has been changing lives by providing pregnant and parenting young women with the support, stability, and encouragement they need to build brighter futures.

Founded by Kathleen Miller in 2007, Living Grace Homes grew from a simple but powerful realization. While working with pregnancy resource centers in the late 1990s and hosting a Christian radio program, Kathleen saw firsthand that many pregnant teenagers had nowhere to turn. At the time, Clark County had one of the highest teenage pregnancy rates in the nation, yet few programs focused on helping these young women experience healthy pregnancies while preparing for motherhood.

Many young women found themselves without family support or stable housing. When placed in group homes, the focus was often on behavioral or mental health concerns—not prenatal care, proper nutrition or the practical skills needed to become successful mothers. Determined to fill that gap, Kathleen created a program centered on healthy pregnancies, education, personal growth and hope.

Today, Living Grace Homes provides much more than a safe place to live. Young mothers receive mentoring, parenting education, counseling and assistance completing high school or pursuing college and career goals. The program helps each resident move from dependence to independence, giving her the confidence and skills to create a successful future for herself and her child.

An exciting new chapter will begin at the end of August, when Living Grace Homes opens its new campus. The expanded facility will welcome mothers ranging from their teenage years into young adulthood, offering a safe and nurturing environment where they can continue their education, strengthen their parenting skills and work toward lasting independence. The new facility will be open to woman in the valley that are pregnant and homeless of any age..

“Our goal has always been to help young moms believe they can have a successful future,” Kathleen says. “With the right support, encouragement and resources, they truly can.”

For young women facing unexpected pregnancies, Living Grace Homes offers something often in short supply—hope. Through compassion, education and unwavering support, Kathleen Miller and her dedicated team continue transforming lives, one mother and one child at a time.

WHAT'S NEW AT THE VILLAGE

A New Era for The Village at Lake Las Vegas

By Lori Archer

There's a renewed excitement sweeping through The Village at Lake Las Vegas, and it's becoming increasingly clear that a new chapter has begun. With new businesses opening, fresh investment throughout the community, and exciting events in the works, The Village is once again emerging as one of Southern Nevada's premier waterfront destinations

Leading the wave of new additions is Rio, an upscale steak and seafood restaurant that will occupy the former Tokyo restaurant location. Expected to open this October, Rio is already generating excitement among residents who have been looking forward to another exceptional dining experience overlooking the lake.

Joining the growing list of businesses is Eliza Floral Atelier, a boutique flower shop that will soon bring beautiful floral arrangements, gifts, and a touch of elegance to The Village. Just steps away, another new sushi restaurant is preparing to move into the former wine bar location, adding even more variety to the area's expanding dining scene.
These new businesses represent more than new places to eat and shop—they're signs of renewed confidence in Lake Las Vegas and its future.

Significant investment continues throughout the community, bringing fresh energy, new opportunities, and a growing sense of optimism for residents, visitors, and business owners alike.

The excitement doesn't stop there. Plans are underway for additional community events, entertainment, and family-friendly activities designed to make The Village an even more vibrant gathering place throughout the year. From live music and seasonal celebrations to special events that bring neighbors together, there's plenty to look forward to in the months ahead.

For longtime residents, this momentum is especially rewarding. The Village has always been one of the jewels of Henderson, known for its stunning waterfront, Tuscan-inspired architecture, and unique sense of community. Today, it's building on that foundation with a renewed vision that embraces growth while preserving the charm that has made Lake Las Vegas such a special place to call home.

As storefronts fill, new restaurants prepare to open, and more announcements are expected in the coming months, one thing is certain: The Village is alive with possibility once again.

The Waterfront Review will continue to bring you the latest updates as this exciting transformation unfolds. If the current momentum is any indication, the future of The Village has never looked brighter.

Charitable Donation Can Reduce Your Taxes?

If you're retired, the tax benefit of a charitable donation depends on how you give and whether you itemize deductions. Cash donations may be tax-deductible if you itemize your deductions.

Qualified Charitable Distributions (QCDs) from a traditional IRA (available if you're age 70½ or older) are often the most tax-efficient option.

A QCD sends money directly from your IRA to a qualified charity, keeps the donation out of your taxable income, and can count toward your Required Minimum Distribution (RMD) if applicable.

Donating appreciated stocks may help you avoid capital gains taxes while supporting your favorite charity.

Before making a significant donation, talk with your tax advisor or financial professional to determine the strategy that provides the greatest tax benefit for your situation.
