There are already many Career Guide in the market. More over in these days of Information Technology and Internet, most of the information are available on the fingertip through click of a mouse. In such an environment is there any need of another website? The answer is yes, as most of the career guides available in the market devoted only on giving routine information and could not clear doubts of a vast majority of students. I strongly feel that there is need of a career guide in the form of FAQs (Frequently Asked Questions) which can provide a wider collection of information, as well as a guide to the younger generation and enable them to make their own decision.

Career Queries: is specially written in the form of question-answer for the students of rural India and North East India, on the basis of my 15 years' experience with the Assam Tribune in writing a column named "Career Queries" As information changes very fast and it is difficult to collect and compile all the information, there may be omission of many information which a student may require. Author shall be highly obliged and glad if the readers point out these shortcomings be corrected in the next edition.*
