Dr. Doak-Gebauer will speak in a public presentation November 6, 2025, at the Civic Garden Complex, London, Ontario, Canada. Honored with the United States Presidential Service Center (USPSC) James Madison Award for Authors & Books, Charlene Doak-Gebauer is an international expert in digital child protection whose work centers on preventing online exploitation through proactive frameworks. Her book Eyes on the Internet: Unique Digital Supervision for Online Child Protection presents a practical system she calls the “Theory of Digital Supervision,” designed to help families and professionals create safe online environments for children.

Celebrating literary brilliance, cultural resonance, and unflinching authenticity, the USPSC Licensed Competitions program was proud to bestow its prestigious James Madison Award upon Dr. Doak-Gebauer for this book. Crafted with literary finesse, “Eyes On The Internet” captivated our randomized panel by weaving a story that is as emotionally stirring as it is swiftly paced—an original gem that reflects the spirit of innovation, compassion, and bold storytelling James Madison himself might admire. The selection process weighed elements like narrative craftsmanship, relevance to today's global challenges, profound reader engagement, and inclusive vision—standards that Charlene met with poetic force.

"This recognition feels like a conversation with the heart of democracy—where stories become vessels of empathy and bridge divides," said Dr. Doak-Gebauer. "I'm deeply honoured by this acknowledgment from the USPSC. May this award amplify voices that must be heard."

About the Award

The USPSC James Madison Award celebrates books that are groundbreaking in spirit and durable in impact, judged through a lens of originality, quality, cultural resonance, and inclusivity.

About the United States Presidential Service Center and Its Partners

The United States Presidential Service Center (USPSC) serves as a living institution dedicated to preserving, interpreting, and celebrating the legacy of presidential leadership, public service, and American culture. Housed proudly within The Inn of the Patriots in Grover, North Carolina, the Center is home to both the United States Presidential Culinary Museum, The American Sheroes Foundation of 1776, and the Global Embassy of Culture (TGEOC)—a worldwide initiative promoting cultural diplomacy, education, and international collaboration through food, art, and storytelling.
