

FURTHER GUIDANCE

Here's how you can explain each bullet point of your resume:

KEY ACHIEVEMENTS: In this section, you have highlighted your top achievements that demonstrate your skills and experience. These achievements should be quantifiable, so others can understand your impact and results. For example, you have mentioned that you led a $50 million program to enhance warfighter capabilities, managed over $400 million in jet aircraft, and planned and executed the logistics of moving over $600 million in assets. These bullet points showcase your leadership, project management, and operational skills.

AREAS OF EXPERTISE: This section lists your key skills and areas of expertise, which help recruiters and hiring managers quickly assess your abilities. You have highlighted skills such as program management, operations management, data analysis and presentation, customer service, and federal government experience. These skills demonstrate your ability to manage complex projects, analyze data, and work effectively with diverse stakeholders.

PROFESSIONAL EXPERIENCE: In this section, you have listed your work experience in reverse-chronological order, starting with your current or most recent job. For each job, you have included your job title, company name, and employment dates, and written 3-5 bullet points highlighting your key responsibilities and achievements. These bullet points describe your roles and responsibilities, along with the impact you made in each position. For example, you have mentioned that you ran a $50 million five-year cost-sharing program, trained over 200 new Naval Flight Officers, and ran operations for Maxfield Airfield at McGuire-Dix-Lakehurst.

EDUCATION: In this section, you can list your educational qualifications, including your degree, major, university name, and graduation date.

CERTIFICATIONS: This section is optional but can be useful if you hold any relevant certifications or licenses that demonstrate your expertise. You have mentioned that you have an active Top Secret, Sensitive Compartmentalized Information Clearance.
