

Dear God

I need a moment of your time
To talk about things on my mind

I need to find some clarity
(Without committing Heresy)

I'm finding things in life concerning
And this is how my mind is churning:

One grain of sand below the sea
Invisible to you and me

Impossible to pinpoint, and yet each individual grain makes up the beach.

One drop of water in the great sea
Holds no power until you see
Each drop together in waving motion
Makes one immense and powerful ocean.

A particle of flour in a 10lb sack,
Even a grain in a 2lb pack
Cannot be counted, though try you might
But it IS there, hiding in plain sight.

Lone stars, flickering in celestial sphere
Hard to pinpoint in the dark skies clear

Still there in daylight, but can't be defined
Although they do their best to shine

The flashes of light in Middle Eastern skies,
Shooting stars or fireworks in a parallel guise?

Dear God

Why?
