

Editorial

Humanities & Social Science offers each of us new perspectives and new ways of understanding. It encourages a fresh look in our everyday activities and culture, as such Journal publications is a strong signal of thought leadership, a quality that enhances organizations. It provides a communication channel for researchers within a field, a repository of important research efforts, and a recognition mechanism for research and institutions alike. The principal purpose of this journal is to publish scholarly work in the humanities and social sciences defined in the classical sense that is in the social sciences, the humanities, and the natural sciences.

An academic journal like this is a preparatory ground which offers a wealth of knowledge for young minds to hone their skills, explore their academic potentials and gain confidence. It is a stepping stone and a springboard for them to explore the nitty-gritty of academic and scholarly writing. We only gradually grow and it does not happen in one day. There are methodologies to be learnt and writing skills to be perfected through application of the mind as each discipline demands a different set of approaches relevant to assigned or chosen topics.

'KANCHIOLI – Journal of Humanities and Social Sciences' will provide the locus to all the scholars coming from different stratum for their philosophical and intellectual dialogue without any prejudice or ideological polarization. We are committed to publish only original and quality scholarly articles/research papers relying upon our esteemed Reviewers and dedicated panel of Advisors who are working hard in back taking all miseries.

Contributions to the current issue poured in from different scholars and academicians from different fields as the Journal inherits inter-disciplinary attribute. No specific themes were decided upon for the purpose and this is actually not our intention as well. The articles & papers written by the scholars, academicians, social scientists according to their own choice are published in this issue. We are abiding by our publication policy, nothing can influence except scholarly merit.

Editor