Title: Protect Wildlife and Drivers: Support Safe Roads for All

Across Montana and beyond, roads connect our communities—but they also cut through the natural habitats of countless animals. Each year, thousands of wildlife–vehicle collisions result in injuries, fatalities, and significant property damage. More importantly, they take a toll on both people and wildlife.

Initiatives like WexRoadsToo.com, a Gold Award Girl Scout project, are raising awareness among young and new drivers about the importance of being Safe & Aware Drivers—learning how to recognize animal crossing zones, reduce speed in rural and dusk/dawn hours, and stay alert. But education alone isn't enough. We need infrastructure and policy support to make our roads safer for everyone.

Montana House Bills 855 and 932 provide an excellent framework, outlining strategies to fund animal deterrent systems and create designated wildlife crossing structures that help prevent collisions and protect migration paths. By supporting similar measures in your own state or community, we can make a meaningful impact on road safety and conservation.

I urge our leaders to invest in driver education, wildlife deterrent technologies, and safe crossing zones—and to champion legislation modeled after MT HB855 and HB932. Together, we can protect drivers, preserve wildlife, and build safer, smarter roads for generations to come.

Title: It's Time to Make Our Roads Safer for People and Wildlife

Every year, thousands of animals are struck and killed on our roads — and drivers, too, are put in danger. These collisions don't just damage vehicles; they shatter lives, disrupt ecosystems, and cost millions in preventable accidents. It's an issue we can no longer ignore.

Projects like WexRoadsToo.com, created by a Gold Award Girl Scout, are shining a light on the urgent need to educate new and young drivers about live animal strikes and how to prevent them. But awareness alone isn't enough — we need policy action to match.

In Montana, House Bills 855 and 932 have set the stage by funding wildlife deterrent systems, safe crossing structures, and data-driven education programs that protect both humans and animals. It's time for [Your State Here] to take similar steps. By investing in prevention, we can reduce collisions, save lives, and safeguard the wildlife that makes our state unique.

Let's urge our legislators to follow Montana's lead — to build safer roads for everyone, human and wild alike.

Subject: Urgent Need for Wildlife–Driver Safety Measures in [Your State]

Dear [Senator/Representative ____],

I'm writing to urge you to consider legislation that addresses the growing number of wildlife–vehicle collisions in [Your State]. Each year, thousands of animals are struck on our roads, resulting in significant human injury, loss of wildlife, and millions of dollars in damage and emergency response costs.

Initiatives like WexRoadsToo.com, a Gold Award Girl Scout project, are already educating young and new drivers about being Safe & Aware Drivers—teaching them how to prevent collisions and respond responsibly. However, education alone cannot solve this problem. We need comprehensive, data-driven policy solutions that combine public awareness with infrastructure and technology.

Montana has recently taken important steps forward through House Bills 855 and 932, which fund animal deterrent systems, wildlife crossing structures, and research-based driver education. These measures represent practical, bipartisan solutions that save both lives and resources.

I urge you to explore similar action in [Your State]. By investing in prevention, education, and safe crossings, we can create safer roads for people and protect the wildlife that defines our natural landscape.

Thank you for your leadership and consideration on this vital public safety and conservation issue.

Sincerely,
