

Lanterna Consulting Supports Alcuin Capital Investment in Muve

Lanterna Consulting is pleased to have supported Alcuin Capital on its recent investment in Connect2Law Limited, a leading UK conveyancing provider that combines legal expertise with advanced technology and offers its services through the Muve and Nova brands.

As part of the transaction, Lanterna Consulting undertook a focused review of Connect2Law's technology strategy and environment, assessing the company's platform and operational systems. The insights contributed to the investment process by providing clarity around the current technology position and the opportunities available as the business continues to expand.

Adrian Lurie, Partner at Alcuin Capital, said:

"Lanterna provided expert insight that was essential to Alcuin's assessment and their collaborative and flexible approach made them both a valuable and constructive partner to us in our evaluation. Our thanks and gratitude to them for their work support."

Simon Farthing, Partner & Founder at Lanterna Consulting, said:

"Working with both the Alcuin and Connect2Law teams was characterised by openness and a clear shared intent; to deliver best in class technology driven legal services. Our contribution was to provide calm, independent insight to support good decisionmaking, and it was encouraging to see such alignment around building a scalable, technologylated conveyancing platform"

Alcuin's investment marks a further phase of growth for Connect2Law as it develops its digital capabilities and strengthens its technologylated operating model within a competitive and increasingly datadriven conveyancing market.

Lanterna Consulting continues to support private equity investors, founders, and management teams across the legal and professional services sector, providing independent technology due diligence, strategic advisory, and delivery support to enable confident investment decisions and sustainable growth
