

DuoYūgen was founded by Eleni Dafeka and Laertis Kokolanis in 2013, making its debut at the Athens State Orchestra Chamber Music series. In addition to performing in various concert halls throughout the years, they have collaborated with the Benaki Museum to offer unconventional performance experiences at Museum of Islamic Art and Ghika Gallery. They have since continued to perform throughout Greece, receiving enthusiastic praise from critics and audiences alike. The duo focuses their repertoire on "restless and highly ambitious programs," bringing listeners into contact with original and rarely performed works. It has stood out for its perfect stylistic interpretations, and the honest approach to each composition

DuoYūgen's mission is to bring their audiences closer to the greatness of classical music, inviting them to discover a path of deeper understanding and respect of the human condition through art.

Review: "The given modesty of Kokolanis and Dafeka - who consider themselves only 'participants' in a musical event - should not lead to misunderstandings: the osmosis of the two artists is a direct result of in-depth preparation, a sharp perception of each note, its content and musical style."
