Governance notes

Colorado law permits a nonprofit board of one director and lets one person hold several offices, and IGCT's Bylaws (Sections 4.2 and 6.1) adopt that structure while the organization is starting up. These controls apply from the first day:

- Conflicts of interest. Bylaws Article VII requires disclosure of any personal interest, and each director and officer signs an annual conflict statement. While the Board has fewer than three directors, Section 7.7 requires written disclosure and a written fairness review by an independent reviewer before any related-party transaction or compensation arrangement proceeds.
- Compensation. Pay for any director or officer is set using comparable-pay data, approved by disinterested directors, and recorded in the minutes (Section 7.4).
- Financial oversight. The Board reviews financial statements at least annually, an independent review or audit is required once revenue passes $500,000, and an annual IRS Form 990 series return is filed (Sections 9.6 and 9.7).

- Restricted funds. Grant money given for a specific purpose is tracked and used only for that purpose (Section 9.4).

IGCT plans to seat at least two additional unrelated directors by the end of fiscal year 2027. Until then, the interim procedure in Section 7.7 of the Bylaws applies: an independent accountant, attorney, or advisor reviews any compensation or related-party transaction, and the review is documented in the minutes or a written consent. After that, Sections 7.1 through 7.6 apply in full.

Key staff biography: Ashley K. Adkisson

Executive Director and lead grant personnel, IGCT Ltd.

Ashley K. Adkisson founded Clothes Concierge, a fashion-technology startup in 2018 and ran it through 2022 as CEO and CMO, with hands-on responsibility for every part of the business. Ashley worked directly with financial officers to prepare the company's key financial and business documents, oversaw its marketing, and managed day-to-day operations while raising capital for the company. At IGCT Ltd., Ashley applies that start-to-finish operating experience to lead the organization's private community, courses and app for women who have survived sexual exploitation or trafficking, and to manage its grant applications, finances and compliance.

Ashley's commitment to this mission is personal. Before founding the fashion-technology company, she survived exploitation and trafficking. Healing took a long and hard fight, including recovery from addiction, and none of it came easily. She went on to become an entrepreneur and to make a successful exit from the company. Today she is dedicated to giving back to women on the other side of this experience and making it easier and more possible for them to succeed.
