ISOBEL LORING

UNITED STATES / 1933

Isobel Loring was born in Flatbush, Brooklyn, New York on May 23, 1933. She attended Brooklyn College, obtained her degree, and became a special education teacher who worked with autistic children for 30 years.

She was married to her husband for 47 years, and together they had three daughters and seven grandchildren. Family has always been important to Isobel, and she finds meaning in being closely connected to them. Recently, Isobel officiated at her grandson's wedding ceremony.

Isobel has taken sculpting classes and uses alabaster when she sculpts. Currently, she's writing stories for her memoir. She also loves to read, socialize, invite people to dinner, and play canasta. She stays active and involved where she lives and makes sure to greet newcomers and help them feel welcome.

When asked about love, Isobel described it this way. "When I was young, love was lust, but love comes from a different place. It is a feeling you get in your gut when you want to be with the person and share a future."

The creation of Israel was important to Isobel. As a result, she became a Zionist.

WORDS OF WISDOM

Learn to forgive others.

Be sure to laugh.

Ask your elderly relatives for their family history.

Find something that is fun and nourishes your soul.

Accept diversity in our world and embrace it.

Stay in touch with the current political situation and make sure to vote.

Be caring of others. Realize that they may have a greater burden than you do.

Take care of yourself. Stay healthy, exercise, eat well, keep hydrated, and find someone to love.

Be as good as you can be with whatever you choose to do in your life.

Put on a smile each day and greet the world in that way.

ENDORSEMENTS

Having just turned 82 this year, I am not yet old enough to attain this level of 90-and-over wisdom. I have two hopes: (1) live at least eight years more to reach this great goal, and (2) once having reached this number, to come close to being as wise as they are. What might get me close is growing up in a loving and learning family, having my own loving and learning family, all the good books (especially history and biographies) I've read, and taking the time to listen, really listen, especially to those who look at the world often quite differently from myself. These are really smart people. Even better, they are wise.

— David Lawrence Jr., retired Miami Herald publisher and chair of The Children's Movement of Florida

Time is our best teacher. Those of us who have been gifted with an abundance of it are obliged to share our journeys with those we leave behind. Wisdom of the Century is more than just a beautifully crafted coffee table book; it's a treasure trove of life lessons waiting to be discovered.

—Dr. Marvin Dunn, Historian

"Experience is not what happens to you; it is what you do with what happens to you." This quote by famed author Aldous Huxley reminds me of the wonderful personal accomplishments of the men and women shared in this book. Wisdom of the Century is about life, and those who have reached the tenth decade are a cause for celebration and admiration. The people in the photos represent decades of experience, and with experience comes wisdom. They share precious moments and remarkable insights as they reminisce about the past with words for the present.

—Carol Damian, Ph.D., Art Historian

We have all smiled at the wit and truth of the saying—that youth is wasted on the young. This book shares the wisdom one can only come by after decades of lessons from life and God. By sharing them they offer a way not to waste youth but rather to flourish in it.

—Howard Finkelstein, Retired Public Defender, 7 News legal expert, Help Me Howard
