

MEET THE PROF

Professors speak out

Every parent knows something of the risks of sending a child to college. Not only is it expensive but we're also subjecting them to other influences. We always hope that their professors are good and godly people who will be partners with us in helping our child grow into an adult. As staff members with Cru we are actively working to help professors live out their faith so they can have a positive influence. Many of them have identified themselves on a website called "Meet the Prof" (meettheprof.com). Here are two faculty members at IUPUI who have expressed their faith in Christ and desire to be used by Him on campus.

Dr. Ian Webb is fairly new to IUPUI. A native Virginian and graduate of the College of William and Mary, Ian did his PhD at Purdue and now teaches and does research in Chemistry. A fan of Steven King's movies, Dr. Webb prefers his coffee black and strong, drove a Toyota Corolla in college and after graduate school wanted to get as far away from academia as possible. He says he is most proud to be a husband and father of a 5 year old son and newborn daughter. We have enjoyed getting to know Ian through an almost weekly Zoom study of A Grander Story, a book designed to mobilize professors to actively engage in campus ministry.

Dr. Chris Rogers serves as the faculty advisor for Cru. A tenured professor in the Purdue School of Engineering & Technology at IUPUI, Chris is married with 4 boys, and says that if he wasn't a professor, he would be a designer. His favorite coffee is a cafe mocha and his favorite author is C.S. Lewis. Having been involved in Cru as an undergrad, Chris has a passion to see a spiritual movement grow on campus.

We are grateful for the privilege we have to work with these very accomplished and godly people. Thank you for helping to make it possible for us to invest our lives in partnership with Christian faculty like Ian and Chris.
