In Memory of Our Founder

John F. Hightower

Our founder, Mr. John Freeman Hightower, was born in August 1, 1913 in Paris, Arkansas. He attended public schools in Oklahoma, graduating from Moton High School in Taft, Oklahoma. Before entering high school, all eight grade students had to take a prerequisite state exam in the state of Oklahoma. John Hightower was recognized for having the highest score in his county (Muskogee).

He attended college at Huston-Tillotson College in Austin, Texas.

He graduated Cum Laude with degrees in biology and mathematics. He later earned his Master's degree in Administration from Texas Southern University. He completed further study toward a doctorate at the University of North Texas at Denton and the University of California at Sacramento, California.

He arrived in Plano in 1957 and education in the community has never been the same. He worked as a science teacher, basketball coach and later principal of the Frederick Douglass School in the 1960s. In 1970, Mr. Hightower founded the Plano Child Care Learning Academy, a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization, formerly known as the Plano Day Care Center with other concerned "civic leaders" of the Plano community.

Mr. Hightower died June 1, 2005. The seeds he planted continue to bloom today. His involvement in educational, community, and civic affairs remains an inspiration to the students and families in Plano.

As we honor Mr. Hightower, we should take note of his involvement to transform and unify individual communities. He worked as an advocate for all children and supported education as a means to make Plano a better place to live. In his honor, he and his wife, Myrtle Nash Hightower have an elementary school named after them, Hightower Elementary School.

About Plano Child Care Learning Academy

The Plano Child Care Learning Academy (PCCLA), a 501(c)(3) non-profit organization has been providing affordable child care for Collin County area children since 1970. This year we celebrate 54 years of service.

The Academy was started by concerned "fathers" in the Douglass Community of Plano, led by the late John Freeman Hightower. He and other founding members goal was to provide affordable childcare for working parents in the area. Now PCCLA provides a "Home Away from Home" that allows children to develop morally, socially, emotionally, physically and intellectually.

The Child Care Learning Academy located in the Historical Douglass School, 1111 Ave H, Plano operates Monday - Friday, 6:30 a.m. until 6:00 p.m. Programs provide experiences in language, math, science, art, creativity and motor development skills and activities. Two nutritious meals are provided daily (breakfast and lunch) and a mid-afternoon snack. Naps, resting periods, and outdoor play are incorporated in the day.

The Child Care Academy added an Infant Center in September 2015 to assist back-to-work moms. Currently licensed to serve 73 children from 3 weeks to 10 years (after school care). Transportation from school to the Child Care Learning Academy is available.

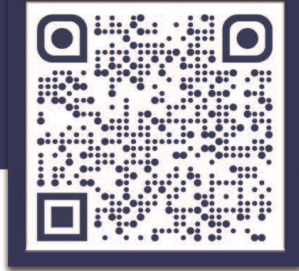

Academy fees continue to be the most reasonable/affordable in the area. PCCLA sets no limit on the number of families accepted who qualify for County assistance programs, e.g., Dallas County Child Care Group (CCAP) or Collin County, Child Care Management Service (CCMS). However, the CCAP or CCMS process can take months leaving families without care. To assist these families, PCCLA has a Family Assistance Program/ scholarships to allow families to enroll their child(ren) and go to work during the processing time period.

Staff are required to meet all state training standards. Their training and prior experiences are used to guide and ensure the children's natural curiosity and self-confidence is nurtured. Each child is encouraged to flex their mind, body and spirit. Our children move on to kindergarten well prepared and socially mature.

Currently, a 10-member Board of Directors provides oversight of the operation of the academy.
