

Webinar 229 About the Purpose of Having Human Rights

In webinar 226 I have asked the question: What is the purpose of having human rights? In this webinar, I argue the fact that, without having human rights formulations, it is very hard, and probably impossible, to define what decency and what corruption is in human terms. Therefore, it is important to recognise that rights are only human. These are different than divine rights. However, without formulating human rights it is harder to talk about corruption and decency.
