Profile

Sean Moran is a Chartered Engineer with thirty five years' experience in process design, commissioning and troubleshooting. He started his career with the international process engineering Contractors Doosan (now Enpure) and Water Engineering Limited (now WABAG), and worked on many water and environmental engineering projects worldwide before setting up his own consultancy practice in 1996.

His specialist area is the design, commissioning of water, sewage and industrial effluent treatment plants and he has designed, commissioned and consulted on a vast range of projects, from individual residential plants and specialist industrial units through to large municipal projects across the UK, Europe and the Middle East.

Sean has also authored three textbooks on process and water treatment plant design and layout, a dictionary of chemical engineering, and many papers and articles in his area of expertise.
