Speaker Panel: Sheriff Sesker, Lt. Mewshaw, Sgt. Feliciano

Sheriff Everett Sesker

On October 22, 1990, Everett Sesker started his law enforcement career in the Prince George's County Police Academy as a member of recruit class Session 76. During his career, Everett worked various assignments while on a path to the rank of Major including Patrol Officer, Sergeant Narcotic Enforcement Division, Special Assignment Sergeant for the Deputy Chief Bureau Patrol, Shift Commander, Assistant Commander, Press Information Officer, Executive Officer for the Deputy Chief, Bureau of Support Services, Commander of the Training and Education Division, Executive Officer for the Deputy Chief, Bureau of Support Services, and Commander of the Training and Education Division.

After retiring from the Prince George's County Police Department, Everett was appointed by Governor Larry Hogan to be the Executive Director of the Maryland Police Training and Standards Commission, where he oversaw law enforcement officers in the State of Maryland.

During the past five years, Everett traveled the state of Maryland as a law enforcement consultant for Local Government Insurance Trust, where he provided training and guidance to over 100 Police and Sheriffs agencies. Sheriff Everett Sesker was sworn in on December 6th, 2022 and is now the first African American Sheriff for Anne Arundel County.

Adrian Mewshaw

Training Coordinator, Anne Arundel County Office of the Sheriff

Adrian Mewshaw is a twenty six year veteran of law enforcement. In 2019 after 23 years of service, Lieutenant Mewshaw retired from Prince George's County (PG) Sheriff Office. After six days of retirement, he joined the Anne Arundel County Sheriff Office as a Deputy. He is presently the Training Coordinator for the agency and focuses on improving training to better equip deputies in the ever changing climate of policing.

During his career in Law Enforcement he has been involved in every type of criminal investigation at the local, state, and federal levels. For nine years Mewshaw served as a PG Department of Correction Special Operations Division. During that time, he was a member of the VIPER team, a dignitary protection and high risk team that supports the SWAT team and handles all high profile trials, prisoners, and witnesses. In 2012, Mewshaw graduated from SWAT school. Sergeant Mewshaw was the team leader of operations and training. His responsibilities were the SWAT Team, Crisis Intervention, and Emergency Petitions. On average, his team served approximately 70-100 orders a month. Throughout this time period, he was also actively assigned to a full time warrant team.

At the Anne Arundel County Sheriff's Office, Mewshaw was immediately assigned to Warrant Team 2 where he was involved in high risk arrests while serving as a member of the warrant team, and recently was a critical pertinent piece in the successful capture of an escaped inmate from Jennifer Road Detention Center. Mewshaw is now the Training Coordinator for the Anne Arundel County Office of the Sheriff.

Sgt. Saadia Feliciano

Acting Sergeant of Field Operations Warrant Team 1, Anne Arundel County Office of the Sheriff

Saadia Feliciano obtained her Bachelors and Masters in Criminal Justice from the University of Maryland Eastern Shore (UMES). While at UMES Feliciano joined Alpha Phi Sigma's Gamma Omicron Chapter where she served as chapter President. In 2013, Saadia was elected as National Student President and served two terms in office. Feliciano was instrumental in the formation of the Alpha Phi Sigma National Capital Region Alumni Circle and serves as Secretary and on the Veteran Scholarship Committee. As an Alpha Phi Sigma Alumna, Feliciano continues to focus on supporting students, alumni, and military veterans.

After graduation, Feliciano completed an internship with the U.S. Department of Agriculture Investigative and Enforcement Services (USDA IES) in Raleigh, NC. With USDA IES Saadia was instrumental in creating an 1805 Investigative Analyst Question Library for a USA Jobs announcement. She was offered a full time position but decided to continue with her education. While in graduate school, Feliciano was employed at Wicomico Partnership for Families and Children where she served as a System Navigator. She provided screening for linkages to services for families in need, performed intakes, and processed applications through ETO software. She also served as an individualized education program (IED & 504 behavioral) advocate. After obtaining her Masters degree, Feliciano was employed with the U.S. Secret Service as an Operations Support Specialist holding a top secret clearance. In 2019 she decided to expand her work experience and graduated from the Anne Arundel County Police Academy, and in 2021, completed Field Training Officer School becoming a certified training officer. She is presently Acting Sergeant of Field Operations Warrant Team 1 with the Anne Arundel County Sheriff's Office. She has also served as a member of the employment hiring interview board and applicant testing.

Guest Speakers & Presenters

Jason Michael Williams, Ph.D.

Associate Professor, Justice Studies at Montclair State University

Dr. Jason M. Williams was born in the City of Passaic, he grew up in the Alfred Speer Village Housing Project and was raised by his maternal grandmother; and the experiences of living in public housing, poverty, and a single-parent home is what led Dr. Jason Williams to his commitment to social justice and the study of criminal justice and law.

While growing up at Alfred Speer Village he was introduced to the importance of sustained activism by elders in the community on issues involving housing, food, and education insecurities, and he developed an affinity for philosophy and a strong propensity for questioning inequality and the mechanisms that create and sustain social-economic and racial disparities; and after graduating from Passaic High School, he attended New Jersey City University where he earned a BS and MS in Criminal Justice, he credits NJCU with preparing him for a lifelong commitment to both social and academic activism. He later earned his Ph.D. in Administration of Justice from Texas Southern University and is currently employed by Montclair State University.

He has published books and articles on race, justice, social control, and social justice. He recently published a co-edited book titled, Black Males and the Criminal Justice System. Much of his work is grounded in community-based projects around the NY Metro community—and he's been recognized for this work as he was awarded a Proclamation by the Passaic County Board of Freeholders and received many academic awards for his scholarly contributions. But he has also gone to places such as Ferguson, Missouri, Baltimore, Maryland, and others to engage in community-based research around issues of community and police relations and broader justice issues. Dr. Williams is regularly sought for comment by local and national media press around justice issues. When he isn't in the field researching and engaging in social justice work, he is on the college campus teaching courses on policing, prisoner reentry, social problems, and theory.
