2. Mortgage Credit Availability

The Mortgage Credit Availability Index is a monthly measure by the Mortgage Bankers Association that gauges the level of difficulty to secure a loan. The higher the index, the easier it is to get a loan; the lower the index, the harder. Today we're nowhere near the levels seen before the housing crash when it was very easy to get approved for a mortgage. After the crash, however, lending standards tightened and have remained that way ever since.

3. Number of Homes for Sale

One of the causes of the housing crash in 2008 was an oversupply of homes for sale. Today, as shown in the next image, we see a much different picture. We don't have enough homes on the market for the number of people who want to buy them. Across the country, we have less than 6 months of inventory – an undersupply of homes available for buyers -- according to 'experts.' Having helped buyers and sellers for over 30 years, I feel like sort of an expert myself and I think under 4 months of inventory, not 6 months (homes for sale) is a buyer's market.

4. Use of Home Equity

The next chart shows the difference in how people are accessing the equity in their homes today as compared to the period leading up to the housing crash OF 2008. Back then, consumers were harvesting equity from their homes (through cash-out refinances) and using it to finance highER-end lifestyles. Today, consumers are treating the equity in their homes much more responsibly.

5. Home Equity Earned

Today, 58% of homes across the country have at least 60% equity. In 2008, homeowners walked away when they owed more than what their homes were worth. With the equity homeowners have now, they're much less likely to face foreclose on their homes because they can SELL and breka even or leave the closing table with a check (or wire!).

If you're considering buying/selling a home this year, there's no need to fear the market. We're not in a housing crisis, and this is nothing like 2008.

the housing market is NOT

LIKE 2008

Our housing market is nothing like it was over 10+ years ago. There are many similarities in today's housing market to the Great Recession. Let's compare the markets in order to better educate ourselves on what we should expect.

The Great Recession – the recession that started with a housing and mortgage crisis; effected many people from losing their jobs, homes, etc. Today, we face a very different challenge: an external health crisis that caused a pause in the economy and a major shutdown in many parts of the country.

As there are many similarities with the markets; however, there are also many differences.

1. Home Price Appreciation

When we look at appreciation in the visual here, there's a big difference between the 6 years prior to the housing crash and the most recent 6-year period. Leading up to the crash, we had much higher appreciation in this country than we had coming into this year. In fact, the highest level of appreciation most recently is below the lowest level we saw leading up to the crash. Prices were rising going into this economic slowdown, but not at the rate they were climbing back when we had runaway appreciation.

THE INTERNET

Today's everyday reality is pretty different than it looked at the beginning of Covid. We're getting used to doing a lot of things virtually, from how we work remotely to how we engage with our friends and neighbors. One of the big changes we're adapting to is how the common real estate transaction is being revised. Technology has made it possible for us to continue the quest for homeownership, an essential need for all, especially through the evolving health crisis.

While all regulations vary by area, here's a look at some of the new elements of the process (at least in the near-term in the Houston area), due to the country's revised guidelines and protocols, and what you may need to know about each one if you're thinking of buying or selling a home. Every market is different, so staying in touch about how these protocols continue to change is more important today than ever before.

2. Virtual Consultations: Instead of heading into an office, you can meet with real estate and lending professionals through video chat. We like 'in person,' but we want to do what YOU want!

3. Home Searches & Virtual Showings: According to the National Association of Realtors (NAR), the Internet is one of the three most popular information sources buyers use when searching for homes. Real estate agents have access to listing information and can help you request a virtual showing when you're ready to start looking. This means you can walk through digital tours of homes on your wish list while keeping you and your family

4. Document Signing: Although this is another area that varies by state, In TEXAS today more portions of the transaction are being done digitally. In many areas, agents and loan officers can set up accounts where you can upload the required documentation and sign electronically right from your home computer. We use DocuSign when you want.

5. Sending Money: Whether you need to pay for an appraisal or submit closing costs, there are options available. You may be able to pay some fees by credit card (appraisal), and wire funds from your account to closing. Sometimes you can send a check by mail, and in some states, a mobile escrow agent can pick up a check from your home.

6. Closing Process: Again, depending on your area, a mobile notary may be able to bring the required documents to your home for the closing.

Although these virtual processes are becoming more widely accepted, it does not mean that this is the way things are going to get done permanently...we could come up with a ebttter closing process!

the economic impact of a

HOME SALE

As businesses around the country move through the various phases of reopening and who knows what is ahead, it's important to understand how housing can have a major impact on the continued recovery of the U.S. economy. Buying a home is a driving financial force in this process.

The National Association of Home Builders (NAHB) notes the impact new construction can have on the job market:

"Building 1,000 average single-family homes creates 2,900 full-time jobs and generates $110.96 million in taxes and fees for all levels of government to support police, firefighters and schools, according to NAHB's National Impact of Home Building and Remodeling report."

The report shows the average economic impact of the sale of an existing home is $43,099. Given the sheer number of workers it requires to design, build, equip, and finalize the sale of the house, the impact more than doubles to $88,416 for a newly built home. According to the NAHB:

"Building new homes and apartments generates jobs in industries that produce lumber, concrete, lighting fixtures, heating equipment and other products that go into a home remodeling project. Other jobs are generated in the process of transporting, storing and selling these products.

Additional jobs are generated for professionals such as architects, engineers, real estate agents, lawyers and accountants who provide services to home builders, home buyers and remodelers."

9. the importance of correctly pricing YOUR HOME

It is crucial to correctly estimate the price you sell your home in order to get your home sold most efficiently, quickly, and easily for you.

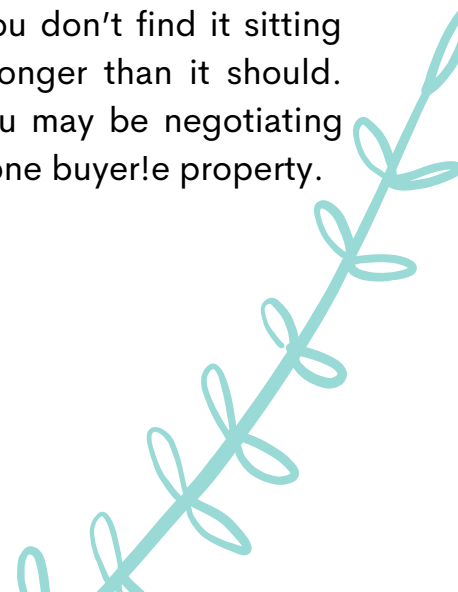

Home prices nationwide have increased in the last few year according to the U.S Economic Outlook by NAR. Experts anticipate home values to will continue to grow going into the following year. Low inventory is largely keeping them from depreciating. Mark Fleming, Chief Economist at First American, states:

"Housing supply remains at historically low levels, so house price growth is likely to slow.... The raising interest rates will have an effect."

When it comes to pricing your home, setting it at or slightly below market value will increase the visibility of your listing and drive more buyers your way. This strategy actually increases the number of buyers who will see your home in their search process.

Instead of trying to win the negotiation with one buyer, you may want to price your house so demand is maximized. This way, potential buyers don't get deterred by a high price tag and you don't find it sitting on the market longer than it should. By doing so, you may be negotiating with more than one buyer!e property.
