

All Comments 14Viewing Options Steven 2 weeks ago

Poor old Harry , you gotta feel for him..... NOT !!!

thumb_up  ReplyRob 2 weeks ago

Betcha Harry doesn't live in one of his 'luxury' apartments.

thumb_up 2  ReplyCraig 2 weeks ago

I think they will end up paying less , so many new units vacant that developers are dropping prices at a rate of knots , pandemic has seen alot of the overseas investors disappear , good story though

thumb_up  ReplyROCHELLE 2 weeks ago who will buy them? There are so many overpriced units sitting vacant in Sydney. I hope that these greedy developers get stuck with them. Enough is enough, Sydney is getting to be the most over priced ghetto in the world. Meriton, Mirvac and other developers have ruined Sydney with the help of the State Government.

thumb_up 4  ReplyMichael 2 weeks ago

Pagewood Green anything but green, ugly, ugly ugly!

thumb_up 3  ReplyCraig 2 weeks ago

The only thing green is the golf course across the road

thumb_up 1  Reply

John 2 weeks ago

Harry, at almost 90 isn't 17 billion enough for you?

thumb_up 7  Reply

Jacko 2 weeks ago

If he thinks NSW is bad, he should try the ACT. Diabolical just does come close to describing the mess that is the ACT Planning & Approval process.

thumb_up 1  Reply

Ricardo 2 weeks ago

Developers would build a block of flats over the top of Martin place if they thought they could get away with it.

The planning system does need to be more consistent and fair but there does need to be checks and balances so the community expectations are met. As an example, instead of building concrete canyons along our major rail and road corridors perhaps it was time for a new metropolis somewhere on the south or north coast. Why does it all have to be in Sydney.

thumb_up 3  Reply

Rob 2 weeks ago

Harry - check domain. There are thousands of vacant units.

thumb_up 5  Reply

Rob 2 weeks ago

The Greater Sydney Commissions plans of high rise over railway stations so we can all commute into the city is finished. COVID has shown us we don't all need to work in the CBDs. Time to buy house and land rather than air rights. The government needs to release house and land space rather than approving ugly residential towers. maybe Harry's business model is finished.

thumb_up 4  Reply

Tony 2 weeks ago

Poor Harry Triguboff still hasn't made enough money

thumb_up 9  Reply

Craig 2 weeks ago

Asking price may go up but will buyers pay it?

thumb_up 4  Reply

dave 2 weeks ago (Edited)

These ugly oversized blocks are ugly.. Pagewood looks gross.And now his doing his best to destroy little bay on the coast.. On the Gold coast his building across the road at surfers.. At 1pm the sun is gone from the building .. It's going to be a beach without sunlight sooner then latter..

thumb_up 10  Reply