FROM THE PRESIDENT MARK KUBANCIK

Is your name on the list? Inside this issue of The Sidelight you will find several additional photos from the 2022 KYANA Swap Meet. In addition, the KYSWAP staff has provided a thank you to all the KYANA members who worked to support the swap meet. If your name is on the list, your efforts helped ensure another successful swap meet. Allow me to say “ditto” to KYSWAP’s thanks for your volunteer efforts. While we celebrate these volunteers, we are mindful that there are several fellow KYANA members who were unable to work due to health or age related issues, work travel, family situations, etc. Many of these folks have supported prior swap meets and are now simply unable to physically serve as they did previously. To those who served when they were able, we extend similar thanks.

Perhaps you did not know that despite KYANA now having nearly 300 members, we still supplement our swap meet volunteers with folks from the American Legion, church, and other civic groups. We had 33 such outside volunteers work this year’s swap meet. The organizations that those workers represent will receive a donation-in-kind for their work effort. If your name does not appear on the thank you list found later in The Sidelight, please consider working at least one shift and adding your name to the list. We need our list of outside volunteers to shrink and the inside list of KYANA volunteers to grow.

Fred Trusty and I recently returned from the Charlotte Spring Auto Fair. This was the first Spring Auto Fair since 2019 and the impact of the Covid cancellations as well as other factors appeared to significantly impact attendance by both vendors and general admission alike. To further challenge attendance, the Auto Fair was held the same weekend as the Spring Rod Run in Pigeon Forge. Despite all the headwinds, the AACA judged show field at Auto Fair had some ~260 cars on display. Joining Fred and I as judges were KYANA members Jeff Brown and Jim Snyder.

Since my last article, Pat and I attended a week-long AACA tour in Mobile, AL. We drove our '86 Pontiac and caravanned with Fred and Marcia Trusty in their '77 Cadillac. We toured east to Gulf Shores, AL, and west to Biloxi, MS, and multiple points in between. It was a great time and the tour saw strong attendance despite high gas prices. If you have the chance to attend one of the various tours offered by AACA, I highly recommend it. It was great fun.

Thanks, Mark

Remember...it's supposed to be fun!

KYANA EVENTS BY CHESTER ROBERTSON

With our cool spring and rain showers daily, it's hard to get outside and do our usual spring work. This includes pulling the old buggy out of the garage and parking it under our favorite shade tree and tinkering with it. Hope this can happen in May.

May has two events with the first one being on May 14, 2022 out at the fairgrounds in Bullitt County. The Pack/Troop 81 is having their 2nd annual car show and has invited KYANA to attend. The other show, Shirley's Way, is on May 21, 2022 at Holy Cross High School. There will be more room for the cars this year which should make this a spectacular show.

Please consider making an overnight trip into the Appalachian Mountains for an AACA National Show in Beckley, West Virginia on the 17th-18th of June. Here you can attend the AACA Judging School, and begin a career of judging like myself and other KYANA members. On June 11th the KYANA Yard Sale is back for your enjoyment. Looking at June 12th, there is a play and dinner at the Little Colonel Playhouse. Please look for the details listed in this Sidelight. The Hayes Family are having a car display out in J-Town on the 24th of June. This looks like an active year. Let's all get involved.

KYANA EVENT REGISTRATION

After two years of Covid, we are all ready to get back to normal. For KYANA, that means a steady stream of fun and informative events. With several events already in the books, the balance of 2022 has several events already scheduled that are sure to interest our members. While we enjoy and encourage active participation in our events, this is a friendly reminder that nearly all scheduled events require some form of advance registration. We have and enforce event registration deadlines as we must prepare the meeting venue and often provide advance attendee count to the caterer or activity organizer. As you can imagine, showing up unannounced at a planned event can create chaos for our event sponsors and volunteers. Please be considerate of your fellow members and event sponsors and register by the deadline if you plan to attend a KYANA event. Thanks in advance for your understanding and cooperation.

HAPPY 90TH BIRTHDAY JEANNE CRAWFORD

Long-standing KYANA member (64 years!) Jeanne Crawford recently celebrated her 90th birthday at the KYANA clubhouse, surrounded by her family, KYANA friends, and church friends.

KYANA EASTER EGG HUNT

Event sponsor Beverly Foster, with an assist by special guest Easter Bunny, ensured KYANA's children and grandchildren had a great time hunting for candy and prize filled eggs at the Easter Egg Hunt on Saturday, April 16. Following a pizza and fruit lunch, the kids headed outside where hundreds of eggs were scattered throughout the front lawn of the KYANA clubhouse. Each child was allowed one "special" egg that held a coin they exchanged with the Easter Bunny for a stuffed animal. Props to Beverly and her assistants, and especially to Easter Bunny, for a great party!

2022 KYANA SALVAGE YARD TOUR

The KYANA Region conducted another salvage yard tour this year, visiting Partin & Sons Auto Salvage in Salem, IN. Twenty KYANA members braved the brisk early April weather and were joined by another five guests from local Pontiac and Thunderbird clubs. Although cold, the weather was dry and the group enjoyed several hours inspecting and removing parts from Partin's collection of older cars and trucks. Prices on removed parts were very reasonable. After the yard tour, we all enjoyed a hearty lunch at a local pub in Salem. Looking forward to another salvage yard tour in 2023!

AS PROMISED, SWAP MEET PICTURES

THANK YOU!

The KYSWAP officers would like to extend their sincere gratitude to the following KYANA members who worked at least one four-hour shift at the 2022 KYANA Swap Meet. Thanks to their volunteer efforts, the swap meet was again a financial success. Thank you!

SATURN: A GREAT AUTOMOTIVE EXPERIMENT

SATURN: A GREAT AUTOMOTIVE EXPERIMENT

... why it came and why it so quickly went away

2005 Saturn Ion

Saturn was a so-called, “different kind of car company” that officially began in 1985. The idea for a new, innovative small car originated in 1982 with an early demonstration model revealed in 1983. Several concept versions, called Saturn, were introduced in the following years.

Saturn was to be a subsidiary of General Motors with a new, geographically-distant and independent-from-Detroit factory in Springhill, Tennessee. The original intent was to better compete with Asian and European imports that were gaining an increasing sales percentage of automobile purchases. With less good reputations, quality, and technology in their production offerings, American vehicle companies had been losing favor and market-share with the buying public. The intent for Saturn was to start from scratch with a brand-new company unencumbered by past practices to produce novel vehicles that were more innovative and exciting ... a great automotive experiment!

Originally, planning was to be away from “top-down” General Motors (GM) corporate micromanagement oversight; rather, it was founded to be “bottom-up” employee-owned with worker input, and fresh ideas that American people liked. In the beginning, Saturn had its own unique car models and automotive dealerships too, that were separate from others of GM. Production of vehicles began in 1990 for the 1991 model year. Initially, its introduction massively captured huge interest among lots of our motoring public. People instinctively liked having a new, unique car, from small-town origins - independent of a big company, with interesting differences like plastic “dent-resistant” external panels and no haggle show-room prices. Saturn was a big initial success.

Unfortunately, Saturn disappeared from the market in 2009. Franchises were closed the following year. It lasted just a few years, too bad. So, what happened? Here is the story.

Despite immediately catching many American car buyer’s attention, there was resentment within the remaining personnel at GM. They harbored dissatisfaction that resources for Saturn were taken away from their realms. That sentiment compromised Saturn throughout its corporate existence. To start with, the cars were immediately popular, but never met sales expectation and the beginning dealership numbers were suboptimal. Initially, they produced sedans and coupes, and later introduced wagons, sport utility vehicles, minivans, and convertibles. They were marketed in Canada, Japan, and elsewhere; by 1993, they produce their 500,000th vehicle. One million Saturn’s were marketed by 1995; shortly thereafter Springhill began building right-hand drive cars on the same assembly line as the left-sided versions. Production of two million cars was achieved by 1999.

However, a downward trend began with the emergence of the early 1990s economic recession. Vehicles were too pricey, the Tennessee factory costs were higher than their competition, and GM management intruded increasingly into their plans and soon forced sharing platforms with other divisions. GM management was increasingly uncomfortable with Saturn’s independence and lack of profitability. While the first Saturn’s were products of their own design, thoroughly true Saturn’s gradually disappeared with escalating encroachment by GM at design, sharing body-part assemblies, and rebadging. Engineering deteriorated over time, as did product manufacturing. Things were not going well.

In the early 2000's, even as new Saturn models appeared, they were often based on previous GM designs. Some "so-called" Saturn's were actually European-designed models, rebadged other versions, and some were built in Europe. Vehicle platforms were interchanged. Disagreement within the companies increased. Popular interest waned. The unique labor contract for Springhill was discontinued by 2004; the following United Auto Workers' plan allowed Saturn workforces and designs to be increasingly integrated into the larger GM environment. Then it got worse.

Most automotive companies were having money troubles during our most recent recession; GM was gradually becoming bankrupt. Oldsmobile had already ceased to exist in 2004. During 2008, with government planning for a financial bailout, GM agreed to discontinue Pontiac, Hummer, and Saab. That left only Chevrolet, Buick, Cadillac, and GMC in the restructured company. In early 2009, announcements were made about the shutting down of Saturn during the 2010-2011 years. Dealerships in the USA and Canada were already closing. Confidence in the brand was disappearing. Also, in an attempt at increasing GM sales and customer retention, a $2,000 incentive to existing Saturn owners was offered; it could be used to purchase new GM vehicles in early 2010, but not for a new Saturn.

Penske Automotive Group planned to buy the Saturn brand in 2009. They hoped to contract a variety of experienced other automotive factories (possibly French, Korean, or Japanese brands) to make vehicles under the Saturn name. GM still built some Saturn's through 2011; however, such manufacturing was not sustained.

Saturn ended in 2010, but General Motors continued to offer their own versions. In 2012, a rebadged Saturn Vue became a GM version, introduced as the Chevrolet Captiva Sport. Finally, to terminate operations more honorably, current Saturn customer car-service, auto part supplies, and future vehicle warranty claims were to be covered at other GM dealerships.

Too bad - a sad end to a grand experiment, one that once truly captured great public enthusiasm. Perhaps too, it is also a blow against independent innovative thinking during these times at the resurgence of big corporations that overcome the "little guy." Not an encouraging sign; yet, maybe predictive of what we have all experienced with the decline of American automotive manufacturing businesses over the past few decades. Our homegrown domestic auto companies are no longer dominant. Toyota is now the world's biggest auto producer.

Who knows what is coming next? Only time tells the future.
