These Will Be the 10 Biggest Christmas Decorating Trends for 2025, According to

Experts

This year is about to feel a *lot* more nostalgic.

BY JAIME MILAN PUBLISHED: SEP 15, 2025

When it comes to decorating for the holidays, you probably tend to stick to your tried-and-true pieces like your heirloom china, family stockings, and dozens of ornaments collected over a lifetime. And while we're all about originality and one-of-a-kind Christmas decorations, it can still be fun to look ahead to what will be trending for the upcoming holiday season.

To see what Christmas decorating trends will be popular this year, we reached out to the pros who scope out the latest finds from all around the world—including those found at holiday markets in Europe—to get the pulse on what consumers are eyeing and buying right now. So before you reach for the same old red and green ribbon and traditional tableware, you may want to pay attention to what experts say will be the biggest Christmas decorating trends for 2025 and beyond. Keep reading for their predictions.

Bows

Christy Fennen, Frontgate's merchant for holiday and seasonal, predicts that bows of all shapes and sizes will continue trending this year. "We saw this gain popularity last season and anticipate a major surge this year. Imagine bold, oversized bows, dramatic ribbons cascading from wreaths, or even just the iconic shape of a bow being featured on textiles,” she says. “This trend is so fun because it can be as simple as choosing a new ribbon for the season and adding it to virtually anything in the room to give it a festive touch.”

Perigold's Design Service's designer Elisabeth Gunshenan adds that this year's bows are moving away from traditional red velvet—and they're being used in more creative ways. She says, “We are now seeing bows used as bold pops of color and pattern. We are also no longer limiting bows to just the top of the Christmas tree. Spread them throughout the tree in conjunction with your ornaments to add additional color and pattern to your tree for a unique and curated look.”

Extra-Large Garland

Gunshenan says that oversized, dramatic garland is a great way to make a statement this holiday season. “Large-scale garland brings a lush appearance to mantles, doorways, or staircases during the holiday season,” she says. “The garland also adds visual interest through texture and dimension. You can leave the garland as is or further accentuate it with ribbons, ornaments or decorative bells!”

Antique and Vintage Finds

Derry says, “We think people will continue to lean into vintage- or antique-inspired decorating trends for Christmas for a number of reasons, including nostalgia which brings emotional comfort as people look back to earlier or simpler times, or things that remind them of home. Another reason is sustainability as vintage or antique items are by nature, reused, crafted to last for generations.”

Fahden adds, “Whether it’s rattan Christmas trees, luxurious designer stockings, or blue-and-white holiday table settings, special vintage finds are setting the stage for truly unforgettable gatherings.”

Bold, Nontraditional Colors

Gunshenan says that trends “are leaning away from muted grays and beiges and moving towards bolder colors and patterns that are typically not associated with Christmas, such as pinks, teals, and oranges.”

Fennen notes the butter yellow trend we've been seeing in the fashion and interior design world is now making its way to holiday decor. She says, "Personally, I'm loving our Partridge & Pear collection this year. The butter yellow is unexpected for Christmas, but blends beautifully with holiday greens."

Derry notes, "We have seen blue in all shades coming on strong in the market for the past couple of years. This year we see a newer light steel blue making an appearance." Fahden adds, "We're predicting a trend towards stunning blue and white holiday table settings this season."
