

Creative Uses for a 12 x 12 Inch Painted Embroidered Block – A Seven Year Review through 2024

For seven years, I've been lucky enough to teach a bunch of awesome students how to color on fabric. This has been my favorite thing to do, and I can't wait to keep sharing this fun with as many people as possible for as long as I can. Students often ask me what they can do with their colored blocks. As you can see from this collection, the possibilities are endless when it comes to turning a simple colored block into a piece of art.

I am super excited to show off the amazing work my students have done with these embroidered blocks. They've taken their creativity to the next level by coloring these designs and turning them into some really cool stuff like tote bags, wall hangings, artwork, table runners, wearable art, and quilts. It's incredible to see how a 12 x 12 inch painted embroidered block can be transformed into such unique pieces of art. These projects are a testament to their talent and should inspire you to dive into the world of textile arts. So grab some fabric, and paint or your favorite coloring tool, and let your imagination run wild!

If you are interested in some of the designs you see here please check out my website: www.medinadomarts.com. Not only is there a store, but there is a ton of free downloadable instructions, reference materials and videos to help you with learning this fun and creative way to embellish fabric.

Before you browse through this collection looking for your own work, I need to mention something: Many of you sent me pictures, but I didn't always keep them organized. That's my bad! So if your artwork didn't make it into this first edition, please don't take it personally. I promise to do a better job next year by saving all your photos in a special file, making it easier to include them in the next review.

Coloring on fabric - so simple even a child can do it!

I've had several children in my class, and their fearlessness in embracing this art never ceases to amaze me! While I regret not having more photos of some of the other talented young people, this little girl's smile truly says it all. I hope you have been inspired by her and the many others featured in this booklet. As I always say on YouTube: "Thanks so much for watching!" Happy Coloring!
