Police officer resumes and employment applications in Minnesota are governed by Minnesota Statutes, Section 13.43, the state's personnel data statute. The law classifies specific portions of an officer's job history and application data as public, while the remainder of the resume remains private.

Under Subdivision 3 (Applicant data) and Subdivision 2 (Public data), the following details on an officer's resume are legally public and must be released upon request:

Job history: Previous employers, titles, and dates of employment.

Education and training: Degrees, certifications, and coursework.

Veteran status: Any applicable military preference status.

Relevant test scores: Scores on qualifying examinations.

Rank on an eligible list: The officer's standing among candidates being considered.

Work availability: When the applicant is available to start.

Per the MN Data Practices Act, you are not required to give your name for your request to be processed. However, if you refuse to supply this information, then it is your responsibility to contact the Police Department to determine the status of the request.
