

The mission of the Milton Panther Education Foundation is to strengthen and empower students for 21st Century success.

From the MASD Classrooms

Goals and priorities of the Milton Panther Education Foundation include supporting innovative instructional projects and programs that use research-based practices with emphasis on Science, Technology, Engineering, Mathematics, Literacy, and the Arts. The Milton Area School District believes that innovatively leveraging technology to extend, enrich, and deepen student learning fosters the skills necessary to compete globally, nationally, regionally, and locally. Here's a peek into MASD classrooms . . .

First grade students learn how to log on to laptop computers and use a program called MobyMax to independently build their math skills.

Kindergarten students learn in small group rotations. This “hybrid” instructional model provides three different ways for students to learn math concepts and skills: “direct” with the teacher; “collaborative” with their peers; and “independently” with an iPad.

Teamwork is a normal occurrence in 6th grade science classes. During this activity, students completed labs with their partners. They took the reins during this experiment... writing their own hypotheses, running trials, recording data, and analyzing and graphing the data.

High school classroom learning environments continue to evolve to “student-centric” with the teacher as the “facilitator.” Students are setting goals, tracking their progress, and taking a more active role in their learning.
