SYNOPSIS

A weekend road trip goes terrifyingly wrong when five young travelers are detoured off the main highway and find themselves lost in the middle of nowhere. Their car dies, the GPS fails, and night falls fast over the endless desert.

Seeking help, they come upon a crumbling farmhouse, A relic from another time they soon discover it's home to a secret far more dangerous than isolation. The group is being watched, hunted, and chosen by The House of Black, a sadistic cult that worships the darkness itself.

As sanity fractures and loyalty fades, each must decide how far they'll go to survive, and what they'll sacrifice to escape the House.

Stylish, haunting, and relentless, House in the Middle of Nowhere is a modern indie horror rooted in classic Americana terror, where the road ends, and the real nightmare begins.
