Memories

- Memories dance against the backdrop of a distant time. They reemerge with our senses, dreams and flashes of images, sounds, smells, sensations, and energy held in the atmosphere we are exposed to.
- Do they connect or isolate?
- What is their place in your present moment?
- Are they writing your story alongside of you or are they changing as the moment passes and integrating into the old ; emerging new.
- Do they come in waves to steal your day and force you to feverishly build a dam with drugs and alcohol.
- Do they stay locked away and run the show ?
- Are they your prison or comfort?
- Own them, let the crafting of their place write Your Story .

A person wearing a purple long-sleeved shirt is weaving a colorful geometric pattern on a wooden table. The pattern is made of wooden sticks in shades of blue, orange, and yellow. The sticks are arranged in a complex, interlocking design. The person's hands are visible, carefully placing the sticks. In the background, there are more sticks and a partially completed woven piece. The overall scene is a close-up of the weaving process.

Weaving a new story by unraveling the old

We are slowly gifted transparency:

by walking into my story

by revealing our heart

by holding our own truth

by letting the facts go and disempowering their relevance

A new story emerges that respects the past but no longer allows it to smother the present

The Dance of making Transparent ART

- ART=Life=Stories=Systemic Change = Evolving Narratives
- How do we create safe spaces for transparency where people are not imprisoned for/by their truth ? A place where truth can be held safely by those who hold the space open with inclusive spirits and hearts. A space that does not ask for a societal constructed admission price. A space where all voices are relevant without cost.
- Communities Safe Spaces must be rebuilt on foundations of transparency and to do so it no longer means being asked to a table built by others but to build a new table. The table must be crafted in a way that it is ever expanding in its goal of true inclusiveness. Its design is dependent by the collective people it seats.
- Systemic frameworks are collaboratively designed with PWLE. The bounty of collective community energy is spectacularly expansive.
- People need safe spaces to craft, expose, learn , expose, create and share their story ,expose, and feel safe enough to Let in Go .
