Stuart is British Record producer based in the south of England who has worked with Elton John many many years ago and other artists and has surprisingly described Elton John as being "unexciting" despite trying to big note himself by having an "Elton John" page on his website.

He's talking nonsense when he says that he's the "best record producer" in the UK!

He's a judge for the UKSC songwriting competition which I have entered in the past and which attracts entrants internationally. I copyright registered my songs using the company that UKSC recommended, and have discovered that none of my registrations exist, but luckily I have other proof that they are copyrighted. The link now takes one to Musicaid.org which has nothing to do with copyright registration.

I have asked Stuart what has happened to the copyright registration company that was on the UKSC website when I registered my songs and where my copyright registrations are, but he has declined to tell me.

He had the audacity to try to intimidate and threaten me, so the matter has gone to a barrister and the police for investigation when all the other people who have been threatening me have been arrested.
