A large portion of the men in these armies were from the New England States, and they were very much impressed by the territory, so much so, that some of them eventually returned to settle along the new frontier. At least they must have carried back many stories, for we find most of the early inhabitants coming from New England, principally Massachusetts. The first one to actually take up land was a short distance up the Chenango or "Ochenang" River in 1787.

Maine was situated within a tract of 230,000 acres of land known as the "Boston Purchase", or "Massachusetts Ten Townships", purchased by a group of sixty residents of Berkshire County, Massachusetts, on November 7, 1787. The purchase price was 333 Spanish Dollars. The land cost twelve and one-half cents per acre but was subject to any title that the Indians might have. Previously, Samuel Brown, with three other grantees; Elijah Brown, Orringe Stoddard, and Joseph Raymond, representing the Boston Company, and two white settlers, Amos Draper, a trader living near Vestal, and James McMaster, a farmer near Owego, made a satisfactory treaty with the Indians of this territory on June 22, 1787.

The first settler in Maine was Benjamin Norton from Stockbridge, Massachusetts who settled about three-fourths of a mile north of the present village site, in 1794.

In 1796 Jed Dudley also from Stockbridge, Massachusetts, came by ox team across the frozen Hudson and Catskill Rivers, over the mountains near Stamford and down the Susquehanna Valley to Chenango Point, by primitive road to Union, and then through the "Wilderness" to a point about halfway between what is now Union Center and Maine. There he built a log cabin, later replaced by a plank house, near the site of the present Maine Cemetery.

Curtis Settlement

This was the time of most spectacular growth and prominence for what later became Maine Township, and the center of the activity focused around a community founded by the Curtis brothers, Asa and Iram, and Jedidiah Dudley, known as the Curtis Settlement. This center was bounded by such landmarks as today's Maine American Legion Post 1390, the Maine cemetery, and the Shadowbrook housing development west of the Nanticoke Creek and about one mile south of today's Maine village.

All signs indicated that the Curtis Settlement would flower. The Curtis schoolhouse (opposite American Legion Hall) was built in 1804, followed by Daniel Howard's gristmill downstream in 1810, then the new Congregational Church in 1824 which became surrounded by cemetery headstones, and across the road, the first Post Office of "Maine" was erected in 1828.

A new connecting road (now Daugherty Road) led directly to Newark (now Newark Valley) to the west in 1824.

However, simultaneously there was a competing element promoting a village complete with village square at the site of today's Maine, offering proximity to a store, an inn and hotel, a blacksmith shop, and a brand new sawmill.

"The first burial ground at Guilford, Connecticut was at the Village Green, now Guilford's town commons and open space at Broad Street in downtown Guilford. The Village Green surrounded the original location of the Guilford Congregational Church organized in 1643. The current Church edifice is on the north side of Broad Street across from the Village Green. This cemetery was the town's common burial ground until the early 1800s.

"When it was decided to obliterate this cemetery the tombstones were removed; some were taken by relatives, others to the new cemeteries. Many stones were placed around the Congregational Church. These stones have gradually disappeared until now only a small part of the original number remain standing or are available for records." ("Connecticut Inscriptions, New Haven County, Guilford-North Guilford," compiled by Glenn E. Griswold, June 1938.)"
Don Blauvelt Sept. 2013.

“On May 20, 1639, under Captain Richard Russell, the St. John left England for the colonies. It was the first boat to cross the Atlantic and go directly from England to Connecticut. The passengers, followers of Reverend Henry Whitfield, included William Dudley and his pregnant wife, Jane Lutman. They had been married some three years earlier on August 24, 1636 by Rev. Whitfield in his church, Saint Margaret's located in Ockley, County Surrey, England. It was on June 1, 1639, while still at sea that the twenty-five male family heads drew up and signed an agreement known variously as the Guilford Compact and the Plantation Covenant. This simple agreement formed the basis for the establishment of a new settlement along the shores of what is now Long Island Sound in Connecticut. It has been documented that Jane delivered a child, William, while at sea aboard the St. John. Thus, the boat arrived with one more passenger than were on board when it left England.

We do not know William's birth date but some sources indicate he was born in 1608 in the town of Sheen, later Richmond, in County Surrey, England. His parents are sometimes reported to be David Dudley and Joanna Arnold. We have not yet confirmed this information. Nothing is known of Jane's birth or parentage, but she is said to have been "of Wyseborough Green". Guilford records indicate that the couple had four children. William, was born aboard the St. John on June 8, 1639; Joseph was born in Guilford, April 24, 1643; Ruth was born in Guilford April 20, 1645; and Deborah was born in Guilford, September 20, 1647. Two sources ascribe to them a fifth, unnamed child, but no records have been found to confirm this birth. No mention of a fifth child is made in William's will. “

“There is very little of record concerning William and Jane although he was apparently a substantial member of the community. He was granted 3 3/4 acres of land on Petticoat Lane (now Fair Street) for a home lot in the first division of land. In subsequent divisions he was granted additional land and eventually accumulated holdings of about 150 acres in various parts of Guilford. William was a farmer and kept cows, horses, sheep, and oxen. Upon his death, his estate was valued at 345 pounds, 3 shillings, 5 pence, a considerable sum in 1684.

Records reveal that he became a Freeman on June 30, 1650, at the same time as many others of the 25 original settlers. We have recently examined some old town records and find that William was elected and served as Townsman on three occasions, in 1653, 1656, and again in 1661. He was also chosen to "set out highway" as needed, to "set out grounds for the mill's use" and to set out fence for the young cattle. He also served as an appraiser of estates on several occasions. It has been claimed by some that he served as a representative to the General Court, but lists of those Deputies do not include his name and town meeting records do not reveal his ever having been elected to such a position. He may have been illiterate. His will drawn up on December 22, 1679 and a codicil, drawn up on July 25, 1683, were not signed, but marked and affirmed. His signature does appear on the Guilford compact, but one or two persons may have written it, like all the others. Similarities in the signatures leads one to this possible conclusion. If he were illiterate, it might explain why he never held public office as all Freeman were expected to do.

William Dudley died in Guilford on March 16, 1684 following by ten years the death of his wife, Jane in Guilford on May 1, 1674. “

“The purpose of the Puritan Great Migration Project is to improve profile pages and research of up to 40,000 early New England colonists—both Puritans and non-Puritans—who arrived during the period of the Great Migration generally associated with the Puritans, between 1621 and 1640. For those who came over in 1620 on the Mayflower, please see the Mayflower Project.”

Guilford, CT Plantation Covenant

“We whose names are herein written, intending by God's gracious permission, to plant ourselves in New England, and if it may be in the southerly part, about Quinpisac [Quinnipiac, later named New Haven], we do faithfully promise each for ourselves and families and those that belong to us, that we will, the Lord assisting us, sit down and join ourselves together in one entire plantation and to be helpful to the other in any common work, according to every man's ability and as need shall require, and we promise not to desert or leave each other on the plantation but with the consent of the rest, or the greater part of the company, who have entered into this engagement.

As for our gathering together into a church way and the choice officers and members to be joined together in that way, we do refer ourselves until such time as it shall please God to settle us in our plantation.”

In witness whereof we subscribe our hands, this first day of June 1639.

“It is stated in the John Stone Family Genealogy that the first ship, the St. John, commanded by Captain Russell, sailed from England on May 20, 1639, and arrived at New Haven between July 10th and 15th, 1639. The list of persons (in alphabetical order) who are believed to have come in this ship and to have settled, with few exceptions, in Guilford is as follows:”

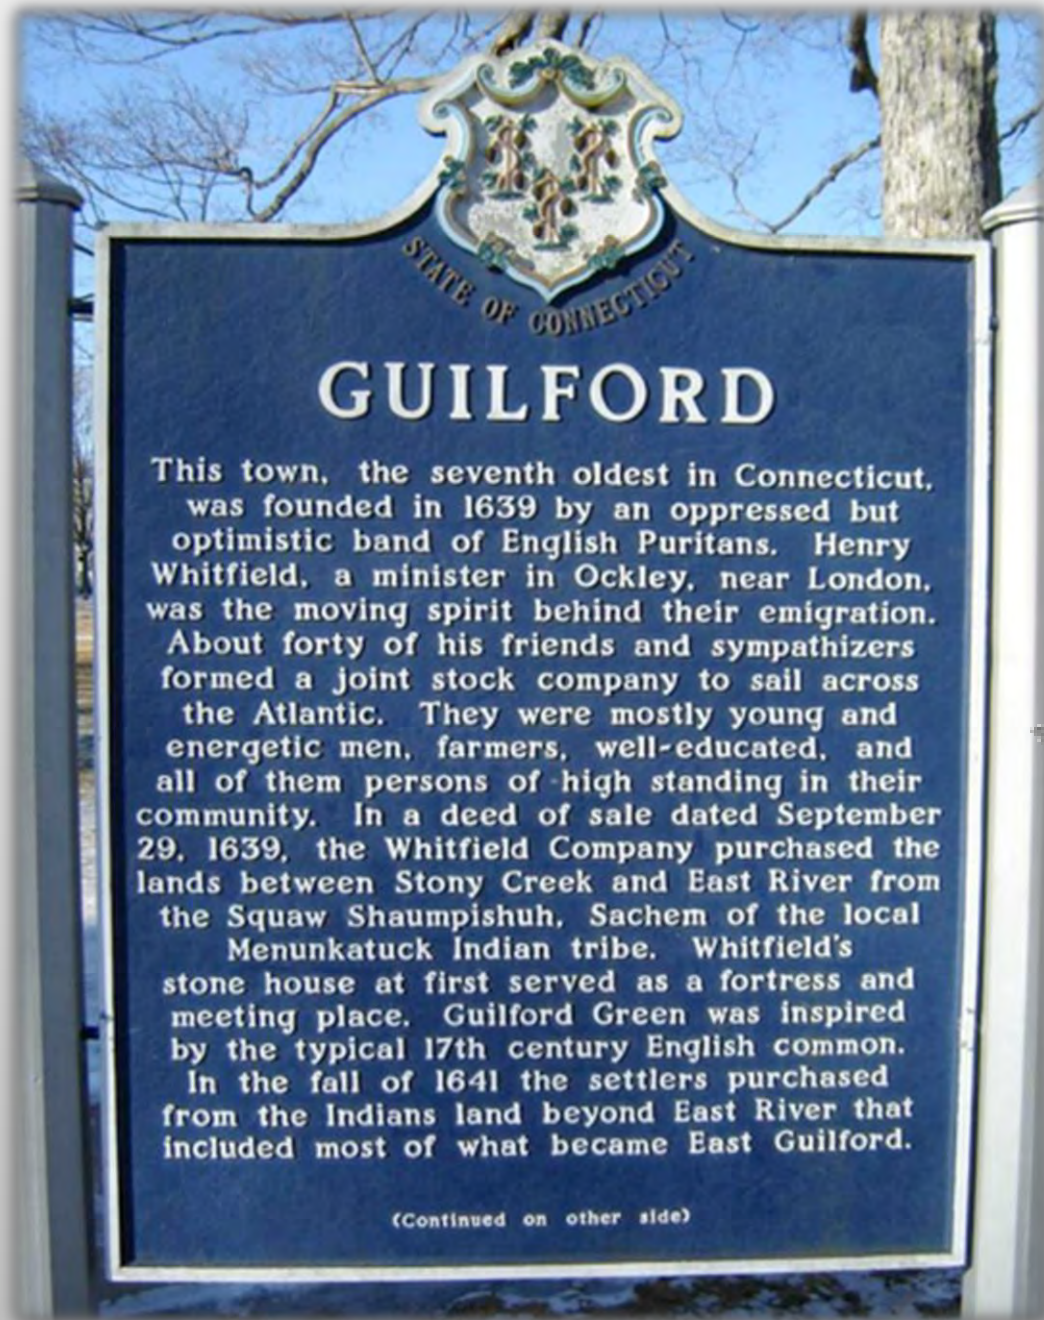

“WILLIAM DUDLEY
married in 1636 at Oakeley in Surrey, England, Jane Lutman (d. May 1, 1674). i.e. had five or more children, and died in Guilford March 5, 1684. Among other descendants is the Hon. Wm. W. Dudley of Indiana, Commissioner of Pensions 1881-1884.” http://dunhamwilcox.net/ct/new_haven3.htm

“The first settlers of Guilford, Connecticut came to America as passengers on the Saint John. The company of settlers on the Saint John was led by the Reverend Henry Whitfield, who had been the rector of St. Margaret's at Ockley in Surrey since 1616. They sailed from England on 20 May 1639 under the command of a Captain Richard Russell, and arrived at New Haven (then Quinnipac), Connecticut, between the 10th and 15th of July 1639.

While still at sea the settlers organized a single communal plantation; this was outlined in a document now known as the Plantation Covenant. It was signed by twenty five men.”

“William Dudley, a planter of the original colony, came from England to Guilford in 1639. He was evidently a man of some substance, for in the list of planters in 1645, which it may be assumed was drawn up in order of precedence as was customary, his name is the eleventh, and he was allotted a sizable home lot in town in a desirable location near the West River. Where his outlands lay is not known, as land records were not kept until after the first division had been completed, but by the time of his death in 1683-84 he had acquired, whether by grant or purchase, a large number of scattered parcels, among which the inventory of his estate lists 11-1/2 acres of meadow and 21 acres of adjoining upland "at East River." This would appear to be the seed of the future Dudley enclave on Clapboard Hill.

William Dudley left all his land and "housings" to his son Joseph, and Joseph in turn left the home lot to his son, Joseph II, save only one corner, and divided his extensive and widely dispersed outlands among his many sons. To his second son, Caleb, he left "all my land at East River, both upland and meadow," plus "4 rods of land out of my home lot by the street." To his sons William and Benjamin he also left four rods of the home lot, and these three pieces, lying side by side and fronting on the street, together constituted the "corner" withheld from Joseph.”

The parents did not survive the trip; so when the boys arrived in New York as part of the Palatine emigration of 1710 (another record says 1715 not 1710), they were alone and destitute. Under Governor Hunter's plan for taking care of the orphans and other destitute minors, Peter was bound out to Caleb Heathcote of Scarsdale, New York, a wealthy and important gentleman of the State. George was bound to Samuel Mulford of East Hampton, Long Island. No one knew what happened to Abraham."

James and Anna (Bevier) Ketchum

Anna

8.11.1778 – 11.17. 1858

“James moved to Broome County from Wilton, Fairfield Co., Connecticut. He might have received a land grant for his father's participation in the Revolution, but that is speculation. As James was passing through New York on his trek to build a new home, he came to the Chenango River a mile or so upstream from where it empties into the Susquehanna River. The Chenango river could only be crossed by the city line of current Binghamton. The ferry service that he ran crossed the river where the Bevier Street Bridge (recently renamed VFW Bridge) currently crosses the river.

On the day that James came to the river and required the services of Sam Bevier, Mr. Bevier had taken ill so his teenage daughter Anna had to run the ferry. She did so along with James' help of course. James took a shine to her and it was mutual. Once James got settled into the place that would become his home, he hopped on his horse and rode back to court Anna and they were soon married.”

The Dudley farm one mile below Maine has been in the family since 1796. A log house was built on the old road, which at that time ran along the creek. The road was soon moved to higher ground and neighbors helped old Jed Dudley build a pine plank home near the present structure built in the 1820's. The barn was built in 1812 and only recently was removed. Dr. Dwight Dudley lived here nearly 50 years. Because the wolves were so troublesome in the early 1800's, the stock had to be shut in the barns at night. If they came too close to the houses, the residents would throw fire brands out the upper windows to scare them away.

Maine, Aug. 6.

Jed Dudley died at his home in this village this morning at the age of eighty-six years and four months. Old age was the cause of death. He had lived in the town all his life and in this respect he was the oldest inhabitant, although there are older men here. He is survived by his wife, one son, Dr. Dwight Dudley, and a daughter, Mrs. Leroy Bostwick. He has been a prominent resident, having been assessor and otherwise connected with the affairs of the town. His funeral will be held on Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock, from the residence.

Alice Haskins Dudley

Alice Haskins Dudley was a widow when she married Dr. Dudley in 1884. She was briefly married to Vernon E. Turner; 1852 - 1883, when on March 13, 1883 on her wedding day 10 minutes after saying "I do" Vernon collapsed, his right side paralyzed. Dr. Brown one of the attending physicians, said it was caused by a too tight collar. He died 6 days later. Alice married Dr. Dudley in March 17, 1884. Alice was the daughter of Joshua and Deborah (Hughson) Dudley.

In Memoriam.

Died, in Maine N. Y., on Sunday morning March 18th, 1883, Vernon E. Turner in the thirty-first year of his useful life. It can truly be said: "A good man has gone out from among us." He was, as it was said of another, "a plain unassuming Christian, gentleman, yet one of the noblest and best a community ever knew." Mr. Turner was an earnest, active member of the M. E. church, Superintendent of its Sabbath School, President of the Y. M. C. Association, and a member of the Good Templars Lodge. He took a deep interest in every good work. His example of early piety, of whole-hearted devotion to Christ, which made him truly great, will be of inestimable value. "Being dead he yet will speak." His devotion and christian enthusiasm were always enkindled at the mention of his Masters name, and he ever felt a deep sympathy for the suffering ones among Christ's poor. His loss is deeply felt by the church of which he was a member, by the Association of which he was its honored President, and by each and every one of this entire community. As an advocate in reform he was undaunted, though discreet; as a counselor, wise and reliable; as a friend and neighbor, loving and true; as a christian seemingly perfect. In the family, in the social circle, in the church of God, in the Association meetings and the Sabbath School, he was an ever present genius—an aid and adornment whom every one welcomed and admired.

Maine, N. Y., Mar. 19th, 1883.

Vernon Turner Alice's First Husband

—Dr. Dwight Dudley, one of our most prosperous physicians, was married on Monday evening to Mrs. Alice Turner. The ceremony was performed at Binghamton by Rev. Mr. Judd, and they took the evening train on the Albany road for the east. Their wedding trip will necessarily be short on account of the doctor's numerous patients, whom he leaves. It is the general opinion of the people that the doctor has secured a prize in the person of Mrs. Turner, she being a christian lady respected by all who know her. Doubtless many will remember the circumstances of her former marriage a little over a year ago, with Mr. Vernon Turner. Mr. Turner was stricken with apoplexy while being married, and never recovered sufficiently to speak, and died in about ten days. All here remember with what christian fortitude Mrs. Turner passed through those trying circumstances. The doctor has leased a house and expects to go to housekeeping as soon as they return from their wedding trip. We extend our congratulations.

DARIUS.

Where Is The Cake ?

We were surprised Wednesday morning when reading the communication of Darius, of Maine, to find he closed the article with the nuptials of our old friend, Dr. Dwight Dudley, and Mrs. Alice Turner, of that place. We began looking through the communication for our cake, but not a crumb presented itself, and we came to the conclusion that we were certainly out in the cold on that wedding, and very much in the position of Old Mother Hubbard's dog. Now every time we have been over to that village, the doctor was flying around among his numerous patients, and we can't see how he ever found time to court this amiable lady. Well Dr. Dudley we wish to extend our and the best wishes of this office and that Mr. and Mrs. Dudley may enjoy a life of happiness.

March 18, 1884 Wedding Announcements

Mrs. Dudley Is Feted by Family, Marks 80th Year

● Mrs. Alice Dudley, W. Main St., marked her 80th birthday Tuesday night quietly at home. Members of the immediate family visited her during the evening.

Among those present were Dr. D. Guilford Dudley and son, Robert, Mr. and Mrs. J. Rennie Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Audley D. Allen and daughter, Janet; Mr. and Mrs. Ward Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Haskins, Mr. and Mrs. George Dudley, Maine; and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Carmon, Chenango Bridge.

Mrs. Alice Dudley, Pioneer 1751 Maine Resident, to Observe Her 90th Birthday Sunday

● Mrs. Alice E. Dudley of 403 W. Main St., Endicott, is planning to have a birthday cake to mark her 90th birthday Sunday, but she hasn't decided whether or not she should bother topping it with the correct number of candles.

She plans to mark the anniversary with an open house for her family and friends. She has outlived most of the latter and all of the former excepting her descendants.

Mrs. Dudley, a long time resident of Maine and widow of a Civil War officer, says she has no special advice to give for a long life. In fact, she's reached a greater age than any of her immediate ancestors or four brothers and sisters. She says that none of them got to 70 years.

As she approaches her 90th year, the Endicott woman is in good health, even though she has been unable to walk ever since last year when a fall resulted in a broken hip.

Mrs. Dudley is actively interested in the early history of the Endicott area. It's a natural hobby for her because her family history closely paralleled that of the settlement of Town of Maine and the surrounding area.

Within her own memory, she can recall the land clearing undertaken by her parents on a Maine farm in the last century. They were Joshua and Deborah Ann Haskins who moved to Maine from Schoharie County.

From her family, she heard first hand accounts about the hardships suffered by early settlers in the first white settlements in the valley along Naticoke Creek soon after the Indians were driven out by the Sullivan and Clinton campaign in 1779.

Her family's farm was on the site of an old Indian village in Maine where the plow has turned up many an arrowhead and flint. Mrs. Dudley's mother used to tell about heating firebrands to fling outside the farmhouse to keep wolves away at night. Her husband's family settled in Maine in 1796.

One of the changes the pioneer woman has marked in her lifetime is the change in emphasis on transportation methods. In her youth, the Susquehanna River and tributary creeks were the most important means of travel and she recalls that river traffic was heavy through the valley in the last century. She can remember the long logging rafts floated down the river from Tloga on their way to the Chesapeake Bay.

Mrs. Dudley was married in 1882 to Vernon Turner, a Maine farmer. A few minutes after the ceremony he was stricken with apoplexy and remained in a coma until his death 11 days later.

Later, she married Dr. Dwight D. Dudley, a Maine physician who was a lieutenant in the Civil War. When he retired in 1920 the couple moved to Endicott. He died in 1921.

“1908 image of J.R. (John Rennie) Allen(right). The hearse is parked in front of Allen’s Home at what is now 2586 Main Street. J.R. also worked at the Tymeson Brothers store and was a member of the town band, playing he bass drum. He was married to Jessie Alice Dudley (1887 – 1972) daughter of Dr. Dwight and Alice Dudley. They had two sons Audley and George. In 1915 the family moved to Endicott to continue his business. “

At age 14 “J.R.” Allen (as he was called) began as a full-time assistant to his father — driving the horse-drawn hearse and helping in every detail. In 1899 the State of New York required the licensing of undertakers and embalmers. John J. Allen was granted a license automatically since he was already in business. “J.R.” Allen went to Dr. Eckel’s School of Embalming in Philadelphia and was graduated with a degree as embalmers after only 6 weeks. (His formal education incidentally had not gone on past the 8th grade but his education as an Embalmer and Mortician never ceased.) “J.R.” Allen moved from the Allentown farm into the village proper of Maine. His first residence was in the house just northwest of the Ollie Ketchum home.

In 1905 he married Jessie A. Dudley, daughter of Dr. Dwight D. Dudley, physician of Maine (it really was a love match). Their sons Audley Dudley Allen and J. Ward Allen were born in Maine. The Allen’s later lived in the house on Main Street, 3 doors south of the old hotel and even later occupied the Taylor house just south of the Ollie Ketchum home. The building across the street that is now the fire station was where “J.R.” kept his stock of caskets. The first automobile hearse in all of Broome County was a Meteor Motor hearse owned by “J.R.” Allen in the Village of Maine and incidentally one of the first if not the first motorized fire trucks in Maine was converted from a used hearse given to the fire department by “J.R.”

“J.R.” Allen could not make a living as a funeral director alone but had to supplement his income by holding down other jobs. He was Town Clerk of Maine and worked in Tymeson’s General Store and the Creamery. It is of passing interest that in the old records still kept to-day at the Allen Memorial Home, in Endicott, payments for funerals in those days were often made by barter showing receipt of potatoes, cord wood, hay and other commodities and some personal services as credits toward funeral services.

“J.R.” and Jessie Allen made the decision to move to a larger community. After weighing all the factors the die was cast in favor of the new community of Endicott which barely won out over the more established village of Marathon. In 1915, the Allen’s moved their funeral business to Endicott but their roots and their pride and love of their homestead always remained “up to Maine!”

J.R. and Jessie made the decision to move to a larger community. After weighing all factors the die was cast in favor of the new community of Endicott which barely won out over the more established village of Marathon. In 1915 the Allen's moved their funeral business to Endicott. In 1937 J.R. (a visionary for his time) purchased property on East Main Street in Endicott, NY and constructed a state of the art all brick facility, complete with air conditioning, for a total construction cost of $37,000. Most of his colleagues in funeral service questioned his sanity in building such a grand and costly facility, seeing as most funerals at that time were still conducted in the home.

J. Ward Allen

J.R. continued to run the business until his death in 1953. His son Ward took the reins until his retirement in 1971, when Jack Clarey took over at the helm. Jack was associated with the firm from 1951 until his pass-ing in 1997. In 1967 Ward and Jack, realizing the need for expansion, put an addition on the building at the cost of $150,000.

Binghamton C. of C. and Officials to Cooperate

DATE NOT SET
Formal Opening Will Come Early Next Spring

Endicott Board of Trade tonight laid plans for dedication of the Triple City municipal airport at a regular meeting in the Hotel Franklin Monday night. Mayor Frankford presided. Hubbard appointed Audley D. Allen, former president of the Binghamton Aero club and now chairman of the port, to head the board's development, to head the board's dedication committee.

Mr. Allen was authorized to represent the city committee and to confer with Mayor Theodore J. Lechner, Dr. Frank G. Moore and Huldine W. Sawyer of the airport commission, and representatives of the Binghamton Chapter of Commerce, preparatory to drafting details of the program.

Formal opening of the port will not take place before next spring, it is indicated, and the dedication will probably be deferred until that time.

In announcing action taken on the dedication, Mr. Allen stressed that the American Airlines is now operating a semi-regular line over Endicott, which will utilize the port when it is available and that the "Hale Steamship" line of the same company will use the local port as soon as it is opened.

President Hubbard appointed Eben F. Roberts chairman of the board's "through trade" commission, with authority to pick his own committee. Mr. Roberts headed the "Turkey leg" campaign conducted during the summer.

Robert S. Hotchkiss, chairman of the board's "working committee," issued a call for "border" police board members to their own homes to organize a team which will head in the Triple City, during the current season.

DOCTOR SACRIFICES LIFE TO RESCUE DROWNING BOY

Dr. William A. Clark's Strength Fails While Attempting to Pull Lad From Deep Hole In Maine Stream —Is Well Known in Binghamton.

(Special to The Republican.)

Maine, N. Y., July 12.

Dr. William Clarke, of this place, was drowned this afternoon while assisting in the rescue of Edwin Haskins, a youth of twelve years, who, while in bathing, had gone beyond his depth in the water.

The accident occurred in the creek, which is a short distance south of the village. About the middle of the afternoon several boys whose ages ranged from nine to twelve years went in swimming in the creek. At the same time Dr. Clark and Joseph Dudley were engaged in the stream in washing the doctor's carriage.

Mr. Clark had been watching the boys in their bathing and passing jokes with them. Suddenly one of the boys, Edwin Haskins, who could not swim, stepped into a deep hole in the bed of the creek. The boy cried for help and Dr. Clark, without stopping to take off his clothes or his heavy rubber boots, went to the lad's rescue.

He swam into the stream and getting the boy on his shoulder, had started to return to the shore when his strength began to leave. He called to young Dudley, who had been aiding him in washing the wagon, to come and take the boy from his shoulder. Young Dudley swam out and taking the boy from the doctor's back, turned and swam to shore, expecting the doctor to follow him. After landing the boy in shallow water young Dudley turned and found that Dr. Clark had disappeared.

He immediately started for the village and summoned help. Returning to the creek a rope was placed about Dudley's body and after a few unsuccessful dives he brought the body to the surface. All attempts at resuscitation were in vain as the body had been in the water for over twenty minutes.

Dr. Clark, who was about forty years of age, had been a resident of Maine for about twelve years. He was one of the most prominent men of the town, holding responsible positions in the Order of Masons and being one of the town school committee.

He is survived by his wife, father and mother, of Barton, and two sisters, Mrs. W. H. Rector and Miss Eva Clark, of Binghamton. Last evening Coroner A. H. Pellett, of Whitney Point, made an investigation and gave a certificate of accidental drowning.

Drowning Girl Saved, 'Was Luckiest Thing'

By JACK NOLAN

"I said to myself, 'That's a darn good place for a kid to drown.' Then I saw the head in the water and yelled, 'my God! There is someone drowning.'"

Then, at 3:10 o'clock yesterday afternoon, 74-year-old Dr. D. Guilford Dudley of 106 Lincoln Avenue, Endicott, jumped into the Nanticoke Creek near Union Center and helped save the life of a 4-year-old girl.

He was assisted in the effort by a 65-year-old IBM retiree, Kenneth McBride of 1103 Broad Street, Endicott.

The youngster, Julie McLean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Johnson of Shadow Brook Drive, Town of Maine, was in fair condition today in Ideal Hospital, suffering from a pelvic injury, the hospital reported.

"IT WAS the luckiest thing in the world," said Dr. Dudley, a retired surgeon.

"... I was driving around and I had to decide whether to go home or to drive to the end of the street.

"Well, I drove down and saw a car and three little kids and wondered what they were doing."

It was then that he saw the drowning child.

"I threw off my coat and broke the Olympic 70-yard-record to shore," Dr. Dudley continued.

He said that he jumped in and swam the 10 to 15 feet to where the girl was floating.

"I soon found that I was drowning," said Dr. Dudley.

At this point Mr. McBride, who rode to the scene with Dr. Dudley, jumped into the creek.

Struggling for his own life as well as the little girl's,

Dr. Dudley then decided that something must be done quickly.

"My adrenalin must have been really pumping. I threw the girl like a basketball to Mr. McBride. He was about five feet away from me."

THE THREE reached the shore of the creek but then found that the bank went straight up seven feet and they couldn't climb out.

While the two men were hanging onto tree roots growing out of the bank, Donald Eastman, 18, came to the shore, surveyed the situation and called a friend, 15-year-old Mark Hollenbeck. Both youths live in Shadow Brook Drive, near the creek.

"These two really worked like men," said Dr. Dudley. They took the child from Mr. McBride and then helped the two rescuers from the water.

"Afterwards, I was shaken up. All I could see was the back of the head as she went down for the third time," Dr. Dudley commented.

YSSTERDAYS' incident was not Dr. Dudley's first brush with danger in the Nanticoke Creek.

Sixty years ago, about a mile north in the same creek, a young D. Guilford Dudley aided a Dr. William Clark in his effort to save a little boy from drowning.

At that time, the little boy was brought safely to shore, but Dr. Clark drowned.

"I was thinking about this bad leg I've got," said the doctor this morning. "But I knew I had to go in there."

Dr. Dudley practiced medicine for many years in Endicott and was a founder of the Endicott Johnson Medical Department. He specialized in cancer research.

D. G. Dudley—a surgeon

Doctor notes 50 years in medicine, varied activity

By DAVID GRANT
Sun-Bulletin Reporter

Dr. D. Gullford Dudley of Endicott is completing his 50th year of practice in the field of medicine. No longer a practicing surgeon, Dr. Dudley has had an active career and still works as a medical consultant.

"I was writing stories and articles when I was 12," Dr. Dudley said. "In 1906, I asked Pierce Weller, city editor of the Endicott Herald, for a job as reporter. He turned me down."

After persistent effort, however, Dr. Dudley was hired. Then his father coaxed him into entering Albany Medical College. He did not study, and had to leave school.

He then applied for a job at The Binghamton Sun. He worked there for some time, but his father persuaded him to have another try at medical school. This time he was determined to make a success of it.

Even while he was in school, Dr. Dudley found time "to study philosophy, write a bit and do solo work in choirs." In 1912, Dr. Dudley was accepted as choir director and soloist at the First Congregational Church in Albany.

A native of the Town of Maine, Dr. Dudley has had an office at 106 Lincoln Ave., Endicott, for many years.

Dr. Dudley was graduated from Albany Medical College in 1913.

After graduation, Dr. Dudley decided to do research, but rejected the laboratories in favor of clinical observation. He felt that the correlation of laboratory work with that of the clinics would be of value. He traveled and visited several clinics, taking along his notebooks and drawing pads.

In 1917, he was instrumental

in the organization of the Endicott-Johnson Medical, along the lines of the famous Mayo Clinic, where Dr. Dudley had studied.

In 1918, he developed a method of treatment for anthrax, a cattle disease which had almost always been fatal until that time. About 33 Endicott-Johnson tannery workers contracted the disease from infected hides which they had to handle in their work. The treatment was so successful for the time that several physicians from other parts of the country came to Endicott to observe Dr. Dudley's methods.

During World War I, Dr. Dudley joined the Army. He served as a surgeon with the 129th Engineers overseas.

Returning to Endicott in 1919, Dr. Dudley entered private practice in surgery. When asked how old he was, the doctor shrugged and said, "It doesn't matter."

Dr. Dudley calls himself a "medical investigator or detective." His primary interest, he says, has always been to find the causes and cures of various diseases.

Many changes have taken place in the medical profession since Dr. Dudley entered it. He observed that when he became a doctor, surgery was far more advanced than medicine. Now, he said, medicine has caught up with surgery. He also said that general practitioners and nurses should get far more credit than they do from the people they serve.

Dr. Dudley feels that the tendency toward specialization is due, at least in part, to the fact that most doctors are reluctant to put themselves in the position of being called out in the middle of the night or at other inconvenient times.

In August of this year, the journal "Surgery, Gynecology & Obstetrics" published an article of Dr. Dudley's entitled "The Surgical Assistant." The article contains a number of his observations on general surgical technique. He has had numerous requests from hospitals and medical schools throughout the country for reprints of the article. These institutions want to give the articles to young doctors in the hope that they might benefit from Dr. Dudley's long experience.

Recently, Dr. Dudley has become co-developer of the old Dudley farm in the Town of Maine. The farm will eventually become a housing sub-division. It has been in the Dudley family for many years.

1960

Funeral services will be in Endicott Wednesday for Dr. D. Guilford Dudley, organizer of the once world-renowned Endicott Johnson Corp. medical program.

He died Saturday night at Ideal Hospital

1973

DR. D. G. DUDLEY

tal. He was 82.

The services will be at 1:30 p.m. at the Allen Memorial Home, 511 East Main St. Burial will be in Riverhurst Cemetery.

Dr. Dudley also achieved world fame in 1917, when he worked out the dosage of the anti-anthrax serum with the help of the Endicott Johnson Corp. and the U.S. Bureau of animal industry.

ANTHRAX IS A disease that can kill handlers of diseased animal hides. Many EJ tannery workers suffered from it before the serum was developed and Dr. Dudley worked out the proper dosage.

Dr. Dudley was born in the Town of Maine Oct. 1, 1890. After he graduated from Albany Medical College in 1913, he opened an office in 1914 at Endicott.

Soon he was assistant at Johnson City to Dr. Charles Wilson, the surgeon after whom Wilson Memorial Hospital is named.

George F. Johnson, co-founder with Henry B. Endicott of the largest combined tanning and shoemaking company in the world at the height of its success, one day told Dr. Dudley:

"I WANT YOU to build the best medical organization in the United States, including a hospital. I don't care what it costs. You do whatever you want to do and I'll pay for it. Is that clear?"

The EJ executive ordered Dr. Dudley not to take orders from any other EJ official, not even himself, in his development of the medical program.

EJ was to provide free medical service for more than 20,000 employees until a few years ago, when financial problems forced the corporation to drop the plan and replace it with the Blue Cross and Blue Shield programs for its vastly reduced work force.

In 1921, Dr. Dudley resigned from the EJ Medical staff to enter private practice as a surgeon. He ceased operating in 1957.

HE WAS A FORMER president of the Ideal Hospital medical staff and chief of surgery. Later he served as a surgery consultant. He lived at 106 Lincoln Avenue, Endicott, for most of his life.

Dr. Dudley served as a surgeon with the American Expeditionary Force during World War I.

In 1965, at the age of 74, he and Kenneth McBride, a 65-year-old friend, helped rescue a 4-year-old girl from drowning in Nanticoke Creek.

Upon seeing the girl, Dr. Dudley jumped into the water. McBride, seeing that the doctor needed help, also jumped in. When they got to the shore, they found themselves below a seven-foot shelf of land. They clung to branches until two youths, Donald Eastman and Mark Hollenbeck, helped pull all three to the top of the bank.

Dr. Dudley sang bass with the Tri-Cities Opera. One of his hobbies was writing letters to editors and reporters about points of local history and of community needs. He liked to recall that he worked as a reporter on local papers summertimes when he was going to college.

DR. D. GUILFORD DUDLEY, 82, of 106 Lincoln Ave., Endicott, died Jan. 20 at Ideal Hospital after a short illness.

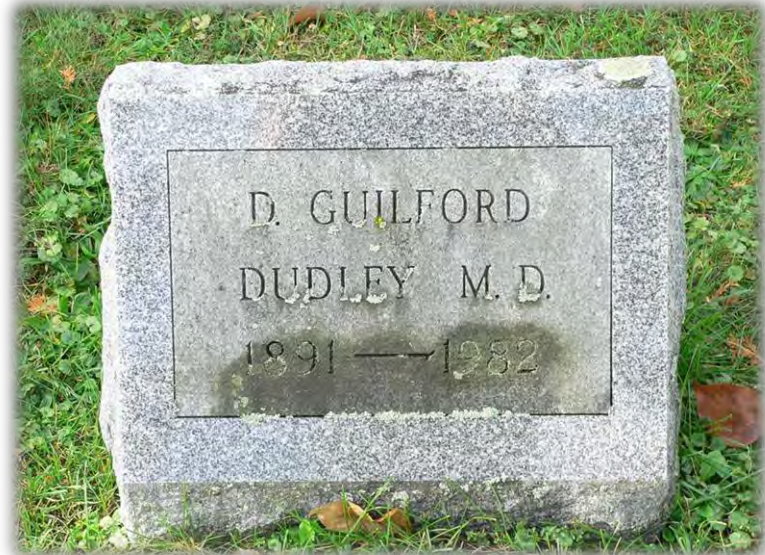

He was the original organizer of the Endicott Johnson Corp. Medical Department, was a member of the American College of Surgeons and the American Medical Association.

He was a cancer researcher and a former chief surgeon at Ideal Hospital. He was a practicing surgeon in the Endicott area for many years before retirement. He also was active in the Tri-Cities Opera Workshop.

He was a graduate of Albany Medical School and was affiliated with the Mayo Clinic for advanced study. He was a veteran of World War I.

He is survived by one son, Robert D. of Endicott; one sister, Mrs. Myra D. Carman of Endicott; also several nieces, nephews and cousins.

The funeral and interment were to be at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Allen Memorial Home, 511-513 E. Main St., Endicott. The Rev. Robert J. Lukens, pastor of the Central United Methodist Church, was to officiate. Burial was to be in Riverhurst Cemetery, Endicott.

“George Dudley started farming the family homestead in 1914, when he was 18. He attended class and lectures in modern agriculture, taking winter courses at Cornell University in Ithaca. He also attended Farmers Week each year. Dudley used his horses, Simpson and Harry to haul wood, manure, and milk; to plant crops; and to provide transportation. According to his diaries, he gave up farming in 1916 and tried to go back to high school or to work at Endicott Johnson Corporation, but by 1919 he was back on the farm. “

New Housing Section Going Up On Historic Maine Area Farm

An Endicott surgeon is going into the real estate business on land his family has owned since 1796 near Maine.

He is Dr. D. Guilford Dudley of 106 Lincoln Ave. The subdivision is already taking shape with excavation this week for the first road.

The development is located on the east side of Route 26 six miles north of Endicott's North Street and one mile south of Maine. Tentative plans call for plotting 16 lots 100 feet wide and a minimum of 150 feet deep, he said.

Opening up the subdivision is like opening up a history book. But several features — a side from history — make the Dudley tract unique in Broome County. In the first place, it will be Broome County's first subdivision with built-in recreation areas:

Creek Forms Pool

That's because Nanticoke Creek, which flows along the east side of the Dudley property, broadens into a 1,200-foot-long pool, 80 feet wide in a grove about 1,000 feet from the development.

This pool is described as one of the most beautiful wooded areas in the county, Dr. Dudley said. The creek contains bass, pickerel and other fish, he said.

Many years ago the Binghamton Street Car Co., which used to bring crowds to old En-Jole Park in Endicott, contemplated exploiting the Dudley farm pool and grove as a park and actually planned building a spur to it from Endicott, Dr. Dudley said.

A small tributary or run about 18 inches deep northness of the pool freezes over in winter, providing a safe skating rink for children, he said. It measures 600 by 30 feet.

Recreation Area

These natural features will provide ample recreation areas for future homeowners, he said. The pool will be used for boating, swimming and fishing. Furthermore, the land has been examined by soil experts and been found to be excellent for drainage, Dr. Dudley said.

Homebuilders excavating cellars in the development needn't be surprised if they unearth a

This map shows part of the Dwight Dudley estate between Union Center and Maine on Route 26. "Present" indicates where first lots in subdivision are being prepared by Dr. D. Guilford Dudley of Endicott, executor of the estate. "Site of Old Toll Gate" is reminder that Route 26 was once a toll road. It was constructed as alternate to what is now called the back road to Union Center on the east side of Nanticoke Creek. Old road, not shown on map, follows ancient Indian trail. (Bulletin Map by Lewis) lot of Indian relics. The Dudley farm is on the site of an ancient Indian village. Lots of arrowheads and artifacts of that sort have been found there, Dr. Dudley said.

O'Brien & Smith, Endicott attorneys, are the doctor's legal consultants. Surveying has been done by Donald R. Muzry of Vestal. H. J. Russell Inc., Endicott excavating contractor, is building the first road.

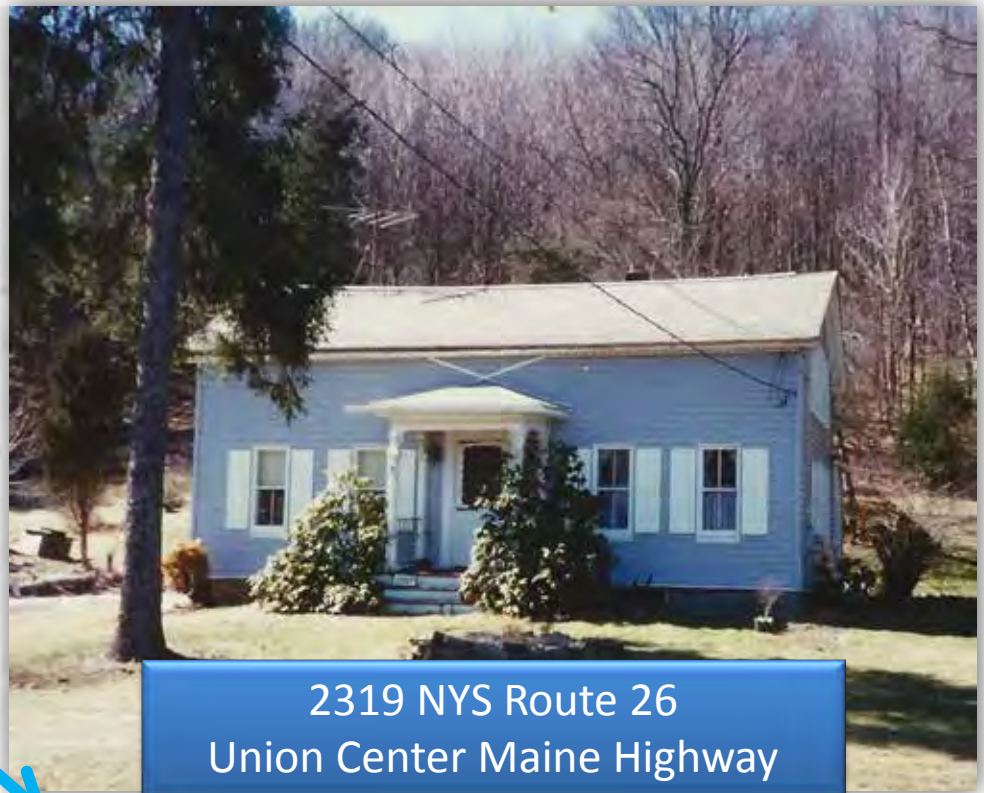

Across Route 26 from the entrance to the subdivision stands the fourth Dudley homestead. It is only about 100 years old. Its three predecessors, which stood on different sites on the Dudley property west of Route 26, have long since vanished.

The first road in the subdivision will be named Marian Street, in honor of Mrs. Marian Dudley, the widow of Dr. Dudley's late brother, George Dudley, who died a year ago. Mrs. Dudley lives in the homestead. Toward Endicott from the Dudley homestead is the place where a toll gate used to span what is now called Route 26. There aren't any traces of the gate nowadays but Dr. Dudley was able to estimate its original location, as indicated on the Bulletin map.

The 16 lots being developed will probably be ready for sale next spring. There will be certain restrictions on the kind of homes that can be built there, such as that they must have a floor plan of an area of at least 850 square feet.

Later on, Dr. Dudley, who is executor for the estate of his late father, Dwight Dudley, may develop the rest of the farm. He figures there may be room for at least 100 homes on good-sized lots on the farm.

This house was moved to Church street with additions being added prior to 1850’s. Mrs. Theresa Gray lived here after the death of her husband in 1863. She had four children with Lyman and later moved to Lanesboro PA to be near her parents. Her father Lauren ran a hotel in Maine, her mother Lydia died in Lanesboro, PA in 1871. Dwight G. Dudley, M.D. (1841-1921), the second medical giant, was the grandson of one of the founding fathers of the Curtis Settlement, carrying a proud name which traced back to English and French nobility. Young Dwight attended the Maine Academy under the stern and scholarly Elder William Gates, received a "classical education" at 17 in Binghamton's Susquehanna Seminary, and attended Groton Academy prior to entering the College of Physicians and Surgeons in Geneva, N.Y.

In 1861, he, with nine others, volunteered to join Maine's new Brass Band. He also made a trip to Washington, D.C. that year and requested federal consideration of a program to train medical cadets, similar to West Point's training of military officers. With a critical skill in a critical (Civil War) period, Dwight became one of the first medical cadets and was permitted (one of 70) to continue his medical study, by Secretary of War Edwin M. Stanton.

Dr. Dudley was conveniently assigned to surgical training (1862-63) at Elmira, N.Y., before serving as assistant army surgeon in the general hospitals of Winchester and Harper's Ferry, Va. While he was attending the wounded at Frederick City, Md., the town was invaded and captured, but Dr. Dudley was allowed to stay with his patients during this occupation.

He was placed in charge of the transporting of sick and wounded from the Port of New York. While in New York he attended and graduated (1864) from the Columbia University Medical School. Returning to Elmira for hospital ward duty in the rebel prison, Dwight was named surgeon-in-charge at the Receiving Barracks (at the age of 23) until the war's end.

Following the conflict Dwight went abroad as a ship's surgeon, and spent several months doing medical research in London hospitals. He returned to the States to practice at Whitestone, Long Island, and Troy, N.Y., before returning to Maine "out of parental duty" about 1869.

He lived on the Curtis Settlement farm and rode his buggy to his medical office (42 Main St., northside) in the village during the early years. He carried his kindly generosity into philanthropic organizations with similar tenets, such as the Masonic Lodge, the Knights of Honor and the Congregational Church. In half a century of beloved village and county medical service, he too became president of the Broome County Medical Society (1882), was a member of the state and American Medical Societies, and served 25 years as county pension examiner in Binghamton.

A lifelong Republican, Dr. Dudley became county committeeman, and was said to have been very influential in placing William Hill in political prominence. He was also a director of the Broome County Agricultural Society.

In 1884, Dwight married Alice Haskins (1861-1954), daughter of Joshua and Deborah. (Alice had previously married Vernon Turner, who suffered an attack of apoplexy during the ceremony, never recovered enough to speak, and died 10 days later.)

In their proud and handsome new home at 4 McGregor Ave., Maine, Dwight and Alice raised their four children: Myra E. (b. 1885), who was to marry the Rev. Clarence Carman of Endicott, to become preceptress of Sherburne (N.Y.) High School and later to teach in Endicott; Jessie A. (1887-1972), who married J. Rennie Allen, undertaker, of the prominent Allentown (of Maine) and later Endicott family; D. Guilford (1890-1973), late M.D. of renown of Endicott; and George D. (1896-1952), shoemaker for the Endicott-Johnson Corp.

Upon the passing of his father, Jedidiah (II) in 1899, Dwight moved his practice to 34 Main St., in Maine's northside. He continued an active practice until the year before his own passing in 1921.

Supplement to the History and Genealogy of the Dudley Family

By Dean Dudley

DWIGHT DUDLEY, M.D.

(See page 68, Supplement.)

“Dr. Dwight Dudley was born in Maine, NY., Oct 28th, 1841, and spent his early days on a farm which his grandfather bought and improved when the country was new. His grandfather was born on the place now owned by Anson Phelps Stokes, near Lenox, Mass., and was a descendent of William Dudley, who came from England to Guilford, Conn. , in 1639. Dr. Dudley received a classical education at Binghamton, N.Y., and Groton Academy.”

Continued next two slides.

“He took a course of Medical study at Geneva, N.Y., and June 12th, 1862, was appointed a Medical Cadet, U.S.A., serving as such, and acting Ass’t Surgeon, U.S.A., until the close of the war. When he reached Washington he found there was no Board in session for the examination of applicants for the appointment, but his member of Congress obtained from Secretary of War Stanton an order asking Surgeon-General Hammond to convene a special board. General Hammond acted as chairman of the Board, and he was examined and assigned duty at once. His first year service was in the General Hospitals, at Winchester, Va., Harper’s Ferry, Va., and Frederick, Md. He was in the latter place when General Lee first invaded Maryland, and remained there while the confederates occupied the city. He met and talked with General J.E.B. Stuart, and other noted confederate officers. His second year service was in New York City, where he assisted Prof. J.C. Dalton in the reception and transportation of sick and wounded soldiers, during which time he graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons, the Medical Department of Columbia University. His last year service was at Elmira, N.Y., where he was surgeon in charge of wards No. 1 and 2 in the General Hospital, and when the war closed Dr. Dudley had been for some months surgeon in charge of the receiving barracks, and examining surgeon of all recruits and drafted men from the western part of the state. Soon after the war he went to Europe, and after his return settled in his native place, where he has since remained in the continuous practice of his profession. He was married to Miss Alice Haskins in 1884, and they have two daughters and two sons.”

“Dr. Dudley has gained a high reputation as a successful practitioner, and has achieved an eminent position among the medical fraternity of the state. He is medical examiner for many secret societies , President of the Binghamton Board of U.S. Pension Examiners, Ex-President of the Broome County Medical Society, member of the American Medical Association, etc. He is always interested in local, state and national politics, serving on many important committees, and is now one of the executive offices of the Republican County committee.”

“Dr. Dudley is one of those men who make their presence felt in any community, and honored and esteemed as an upright gentleman and an influential citizen.” Union News.

When the Civil War broke out, Dr. Dwight Dudley convinced secretary of war Edwin M. Stanton to appoint him as one of the first 140 medical cadets. ● The Federal Government assists medical students obtaining their training as a matter of practise now, but the idea of Federal aid for such projects was novel back during the Civil War period when a young Maine Town student was working for his M. D. degree.

In order to make use of what training he had and still serve the Union cause, he won government approval of a medical cadet training program to become the first U. S. medical cadet.

He was Dr. Dwight Dudley, who sold the idea to Secretary of War Edward M. Stanton in 1861. After training at West Point, he became, at 23, the youngest commanding officer in the Union Army when he was placed in charge of a rebel prison hospital and camp at Elmira. The camp accommodate many thousands of prisoners before the war ended in 1865.

Dr. Dudley died in Maine in 1921 at the age of 79. Among his papers still treasured by his wife, Mrs. Alice E. Dudley, 89, of 403 W. Main St., Endicott, is a yellowed certificate signed by Stanton which accredits the physician as a U. S. Medical Cadet.

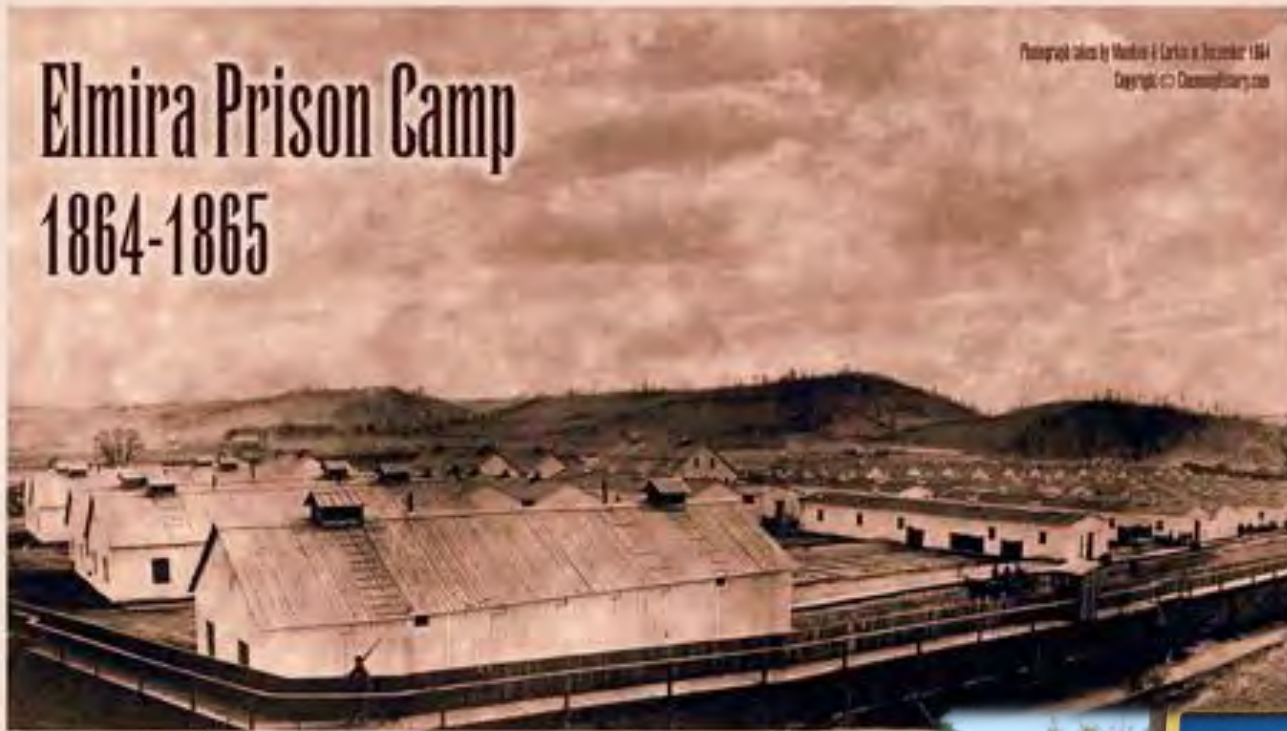

One Civil War souvenir Mrs. Dudley wasted no time in disposing of after her husband's death was a toe pickled in a bottle of alcohol. The toe was amputated from John Brown's son. Dr. Dudley kept it as a curio.

After the war, the physician practised in Maine and became prominent in Broome County as head of the County Republican Committee, president of the Binghamton Academy of Medicine and president of Broome County Medical Society.

He was descended from an Englishman who settled in New England in 1639 and became a member of Governor Leete's general court. The doctor was a cousin of Cyrus W. Field of Atlantic cable fame and Hon. David Dudley Field of England, author of the revised criminal court procedure followed in all English-speaking nations.

Dr. Dudley's family includes Mrs. J. Rennie Allen of Vestal, Mrs. Myra Carmen and Dr. D. Guilford Dudley of Endicott and George Dudley of Maine.

THE LINCOLN ASSASSINATION

AT FORD'S THEATRE

Now He Belongs to the Ages

Dr. Leale's Letter

John Sellers, Shapell Manuscript Foundation

Dr. Charles A. Leale, the author of this eight-page letter, was one of three physicians to offer his services to the mortally wounded President Lincoln. As the first on the scene, professional etiquette placed him in control of the president's care. He remained in charge until the Lincoln family doctor, Robert K. Stone, arrived later that evening.

It is obvious from the content of Leale's letter to Dr. Dwight Dudley, a former colleague and lifelong friend, that Dudley was seeking firsthand information on the Lincoln assassination. Leale devoted most of his response to the subject, but he also offered some interesting insight into the mental condition of the conspirators, whose trial he attended. He wrote of the assassination:

"I told Mrs. L. that I was a surgeon. When she asked me to do what I could he was then in a profound coma, pulse could not be felt, eyes closed, sterrenous breathing. ... As soon as his shoulder was laid bare and no wound discovered I examined his head and first felt a protuberance. ... I then knew it was fatal and told the bystanders that it was a mortal wound."

Leale may have included more medical detail in his account to Dudley because he and Dudley had first become acquainted while serving as medical cadets at the U.S. Army General Hospital in Elmira, New York. There, both men earned the title of Acting Assistant Surgeon, which entitled them to the rank of lieutenant in the Volunteer Army. Dudley later went to the medical school at Columbia University, and Leale to the Bellevue Hospital Medical College.

Your last came safely

As you noticed I am in the no vacancies in the regular examined for seven days

by three old army surgeons I was accepted, and have been on duty since at this hospital. When I first came I had charge of all the sick and wounded officers which duty I fulfilled until about two weeks ago when I was appointed Executive Officer and am at present in charge

I had charge of the President until his family physician arrived. that night was the only time that I have been to the theatre since I came here and then partly to see Mr. Lincoln and Gen Grant
I took a seat in the Dress Circle near the President's Box saw Booth enter the box heard the report of the pistol then saw him jump from the box with his draw dagger and rush across the stage
I immediately ran to the box and there saw the President sitting in the arm chair with his head thrown back on one side was Mrs. L. and on the other Miss Davis

The former was holding his head and crying bitterly for a Surgeon while the others there were standing crying for Stimulus Water etc not one going for anything. While going towards him I sent one for Brandy and another for Water, then told Mrs. L. that I was a Surgeon, when she asked me to do what I could
He was then in a profound assistance placed him in a recumbent position on the floor. While doing this I put my hand on a part of his coat near the left shoulder saturated with blood supposing him to have been stabbed. I asked a person near by to cut off his clothes which he did with a jack knife. as soon as his shoulder was laid bare and no wound discovered

I examined his head, and first felt a protuberance about one inch to the right of med. line and the same distance above the superior curved line of the occiput. I removed the clot and introduced the little finger of left hand completely through the cranium. I then knew it was fatal and told the bystanders that it was a mortal wound Dr. East and Dr. King now came in and we removed him immediately to Pattersons house just opposite. I first intended to have him taken immediately to the White House - but I was afraid he would die while going there. Besides after he was taken out to the street his carriage was not to be found. After we put him in bed we sent for bottles of hot water to apply to his extremities before these arrived the room was completely crowded. I turned around and saw a Capt. who I asked to have the room cleared which he did, which he did all leaving except Mrs.

L. and Miss Harris. I went to Mrs. L. and asked her if she would have the kindness to go to the next room for a minute so as to allow us to do all we could and examine his wounds. She did so and several Drs then came in among them Dr. Stone, the family physician, who was introduced to me, when I asked him if he would take charge of the President he said that he would when I resigned, the Surg.

Gen. Surg Crane and others now came in, I then went to the head of the bed near his left shoulder where I remained until he breathed his last.
He was completely insensible from the time that he was shot until he breathed his last. They tried to give him a small quantity of brandy but he could not swallow it.
Mustard Poultices were applied

during the night -

I had a ticket to the Green Room and had the carriage next to the Surg. General at the Funeral.

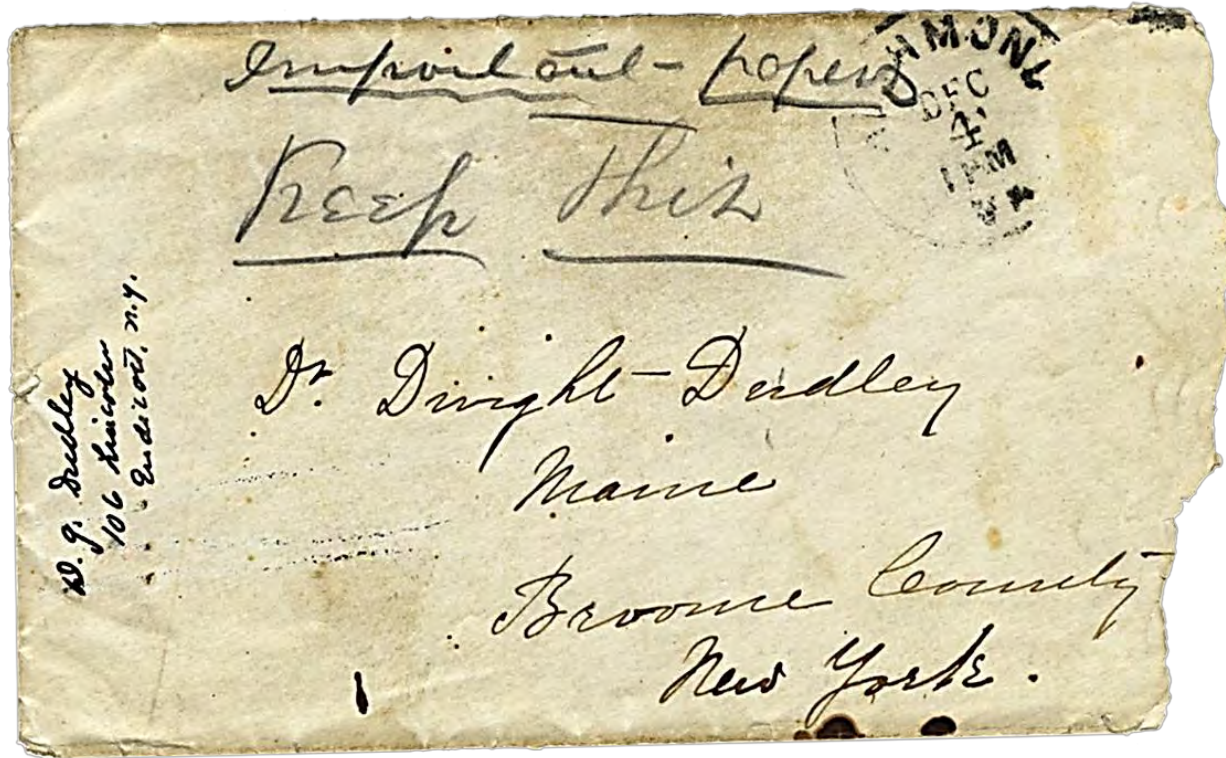

The trial of the conspirators is going on I went to see them last week at the Court room they are a very inferior looking set of men Dr Mudd is the only one that has any intellectual expressions (I hope that if the charges are true against him he will be unable to tell what school he rec'd his Dip. from) they all look as if they did not have any hope O'Laughlin is very nervous and trembles terribly they are all very pale except the 2

The review that took place here last week was the grandest military collection ever witnessed on the continent the soldiers were as black as indians and covered with dust -

I had tickets sent to me for seats on the stand next to the President where I saw very well x

I rec'd a letter from Dr. Gov. Smith last week he is still at Ball's Home kept very where both of us have had fun Allow me to congratulate you on your happy prospect in the future. Please remember me to the Eglers Dr. Wey and all inquiring friends and believe me yours sincerely “Leale’s other versions of Lincoln’s assassination are far more distinct from one another than are the 1865 reports. One final account from 1865 is a letter Leale wrote to his friend and fellow physician Dwight Dudley late in May of that year. His description of the events of April 14 and 15 is an abbreviated and less formal recounting that in its details is very similar to the reports he wrote in 1865 and 1867. The letter is noteworthy, however, in that Leale briefly mentions Lincoln’s funeral and also recounts attending part of the trial of John Wilkes Booth’s co-conspirators. Memorably, he describes them as a “very inferior-looking set of men.” <http://civilwarrx.blogspot.com/2014/03/dr-charles-leales-report-on.html>

Faber's military position also allowed him to make two drawings of Lincoln's deathbed scene before the room was cleared." (Source: Philadelphia Sketch Club, 2009)

“Charles A. Leale was a 23-year-old Assistant Surgeon in the U.S. Army Volunteers who had just received his medical degree six weeks earlier. He had been assigned to duty as the surgeon in charge of the Wounded Commissioned Officers' Ward at the General Hospital at Armory Square in Washington, D.C..... Charles Leale continued to serve in the army until 1866. He then returned to his home town of New York City where he established a successful private practice and became involved in charitable medical care. One of the last surviving witnesses to Lincoln's death, Dr. Charles A. Leale died in 1932 at the age of 90.”

"MAINE VILLAGE IN RHYME - 1824"

By Miss Hattie Tucker

In the valley of the Nanticoke is the village of Maine
For what it is noted I'll try to explain. We are a peaceable people and live by hard labor. Each man is as good, every whit as his neighbor.

Unless he gets drunk, and then he's to blame,
And ought not to bear a very good name. Here, my good friend, pray let me digress, And say
I hope the number is less.

Let us work with a will to get them all in
To the Good Templar's fold, where they'll drink no more gin,
And then what a happy people we'll be
'When nothing is drunk stronger than tea.

Of churches, the number we have is three. The pastors are Washburn, Hayward and Lee. We've organs and players and choirs that can sing Mear, Martin, Old Hundred or any such thing.

Our school by Miss Roxie Eldred is taught, To keep it in order, she has faithfully sought. Of merchants, Taylor Bros, first I will mention, To say aught against them, I have no intention.

They run a fine store, and sell all they can,
And Henry, their clerk is a model young man.
Ferdinand Sherwood also has a store, With Lincoln and son at the very next door.

There's another store kept by Charlej G. Bowers, Where you can furnish your house in a, very few hours. You'll find Marean and son the very next place, Where you can buy calico, linen and lace.

There's the post office too, which makes it quite handy,
You can call for your mail and buy you some candy. Miss Muzzy too, is right up the stairs. She'll make you a bonnet, in style, she declares.

Next comes E. Ketchum who keeps the hotel
And always has some fine horses to sell.
Andrew Church, the druggist, is on the same street.
At Dunham Bros, you can buy plenty of meat.

The Good Templar Lodge was dedicated to the Anti-Alcohol Movement. "The temperance movement was also important because it was fundamental to the concept of individual choice and responsibility. Taking the pledge was a conscious act that one person did in an effort to make himself or herself a better human being." See Dudley Family Pledge in their Bible. Slide 34

<http://www.teachushistory.org/Temperance/forstudents.htm>

Of doctors, there's Guy who gives sugar pills And thinks them specific for all human ills. While Butler and Dudley think none can be cured, Unless bitter doses they long have endured.

J. N. Ring is on the second floor, Just exactly over Lincoln and son's store. If you want for a firkin be sure to inquire For the cooper shop where works Lewis and Dyer.

Of wagon makers our village boasts of one
While the blacksmiths are Harvey Bean and his son.
The shoemakers are Payne, Johnson and Case.
They don't work together, each has his own place.

W. H. Sherwood deals in leather and lumber, J. Wright is his foreman, his other hands a number. If you wish for a harness, you must straightway repair To the shop over Sherwood's, of Freeman Gurlhair.

But if you wish for a hoe handle or a rake,
Heath and Norton a very good article make.
Of carpenters we have one, two three, four, five, six
And masons who plaster and lay stone and bricks.

We have farmers, a number who sell eggs and butter. If they don't get a big price, O, how they do mutter. rfe have young ladies who live quite at their ease. They never make bread, butter or cheese.

And young gentlemen too so fine and so gay,
Who have nothing to do but play croquet.
Of old maids, we have some, let me whisper in your ear,
They're just as they are everywhere, cross, whimsical, queer.

Of old bachelors, likewise, we have our full share, Though to mention their names I never would dare. And last though not least, henceforth you will know it. Maine is possessed of a remarkable poet.

(Mrs. Harriet (Hattie) Tucker Ingalls was Ralph, Earl and Fred Ingals' grandmother.)

Of doctors, there's Guy who gives sugar pills And thinks them specific for all human ills. While Butler and Dudley think none can be cured, Unless bitter doses they long have endured.
