MICHAEL LAMAstra

Michael Lamastra is a writer, composer, and arranger with a background in both theater and music. Originally from New Jersey, he's currently studying Music Business at Belmont University in Nashville, Tennessee. Michael is also an active member of the Sigma Chi Fraternity, where he continues to grow as a collaborator and creative leader within his community. His creative work is shaped by years of experience in the performing arts, which started well before college and continues to influence his style today.

Timed Out is his first original musical, developed over four years as a project that combines his passion for music and storytelling. The show reflects his love for character-driven narratives and showcases his range as both a composer and writer. Michael hopes to build a career as a professional playwright, creating fresh, contemporary works that bring together music and theater.
