BIOGRAPHY

Scott Carter Cooper is a Chicago-based playwright whose sharp, character-driven works balance humor with social critique. His short plays – ranging from the bittersweet intimacy of “The Good Stuff,” to the irreverent comedy of “P.S. I Love You, Gerard Butler,” to the political bite of “The Donor Class” have been presented by such companies as NyLon Fusion, American Blues, The Artistic Home, Ghostlight Ensemble, Chicago Dramatists and microChicago, as well as festivals nationwide and abroad. His work often spotlights diverse ensembles in tight, high-stakes situations. Cooper holds a BFA – Theatre from Drake University and an MA – Writing from DePaul University.
