Good to Know about Poinsettias:

- Each plant stands 14" to 16" tall with 5 to 6 blooms, and arrives in a protective sleeve with a gold or neutral-colored pot cover.
- Cold is the enemy. Below 50°F does damage, even briefly.
- Bright, filtered light. Not direct midday sun.
- Finger in the soil. Water only when the top inch is dry. Never leave the pot in water.

Getting it home in one piece:

- Poinsettias look like winter plants, but they have no cold tolerance whatsoever.
- The tricky part is the delay. Cold damage rarely shows up on the spot. The plant comes indoors looking perfect and then starts curling and shedding 2-3 days later, long after anyone has connected it to the drive home.
- Warm the car up first. Leave the sleeve on until you are through your own front door. Keep the plant in the seat beside you, not in the trunk. Go straight home.
