The Hive is an alternative to school where we learn how to care for ourselves, one another and the planet by tackling the global goals (SDGs2030) through our inquiry-led programme of study and the Human Hive Learning, Self-Determination framework. The Hive attracts children and adults from all over the world who work on global challenges with, not for, one another.

We are looking for bilingual English/Spanish: graduates / newly-qualified / qualified teachers who already know in their hearts that mainstream education models aren’t right for them. People who have big ambitions to change the world through education. People with adventure in their soul and a willingness to step up and be the change they want to see.

The Hive currently has 40 learners and is growing fast. We are inviting the most innovative thinkers and best inquiry-led practitioners from all over the world to work with us on developing our model. As an intern at The Hive you will work closely with them to develop your ideas, create resources and build innovative, responsive experiences for learners. The training blends theory with practical application for our context. You will learn how to design, deliver and evaluate learning experiences, use trauma-informed practices and become a more wholehearted, self-directed and purposeful educator. Once you have completed your internship you should be ready to take the model to new places.
